Club Reports.

LONGTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Postponed meeting held Dec. 13, Mr. J. Davis in the chair. The first business was the reading of the petition to the railway companies, promoted by the various unions; after much discussion it was unanimously decided to support it. Decided to keep to our old date for next open show, viz., the first Saturday in October. For our next meeting we are having a washing exhibition, Mr. J. Edwards promising to give it. For February we are holding a table show, to include stock pair classes for Norwich and Yorks; for March a lecture on Yorks and Norwich, Mr. T. Rowley promising to take the former, and Mr. J. Edwards or Mr. A. N. Other the latter. We also hope to have the balance-sheet ready for the next meeting, so all members please note. Fanciers and friends invited.—HALLAM AND LOVATT.

BEAMISH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual meting, Dec. 17th, when all prize money and specials were paid. Election of officials took place. Mr. M. Crosby was elected chairman, Mr. W. Knowles secretary, and Lloyds Bank treasurer. We adjourned for a supper, provided by our worthy host, Mr. G. Cowell, and we did ample justice to the good fare provided. After supper, Mr. Crosby, on behalf of the members, presented the hostess, Mrs. Cowell, and the servant, Miss Leonard, each with an umbrella, as a slight recompense for the extra trouble they had been put to on the occasions of shows and meetings. Mrs. Cowell thanked the members, and said she did not mind the trobble, as she liked to see the birds there. We had a selection of music from Mr. W. Foster on the mandoline, violin, and mouth organ. Songs were sung by Messrs. W. Jackson, R. Jackson, G. Wilson, J. Stephenson, W. Foster, and J. Johnson. A vote of thanks was accorded the host for the good supper, which ended a most enjoyable evening.—MARK CROSBY.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

All prize money won at our 3rd annual show, December 17th, has been paid, and on behalf of the Society I beg to tender our sincere thanks to all who helped us by their entries, and also by their attendance. We had a good average entry of 15 per class throughout, for which we are very thankful. The members also gave very good support in the way of entries, and one of them carried off the Bradford East rose bowl for best unflighted bird, namely, Mr. W. Crnise. This again gave satisfaction to all the members, as did the service rendered by Mr. C. Cowgill, who opened the show during the afternoon, assisted by the Rev. G. Hall Wallis as chairman. The stewards and members generally worked assiduously for the comfort of the visitors and exhibits alike, and everything passed off without a hitch. Great praise is due to the Railway Committee for the prompt dispatch of all birds from the show, these being in the hands of the railway companies by 6.45 p.m., ensuring their arrival home in good time on the Saturday night. All worked together with one object in view, namely, that of keeping the reputation we have already earned for good management throughout.—H. HILL, Secretary.

HUTCHISON, Sec.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Annual dinner, presentation of prizes, and social gathering, held Dec. 14th, "Boar's Head Hotel." About 30 members turned up. As usual, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson catered, and right well did they serve us, everything being done in excellent manner; and, needless to say, it was done justice to by all. Whilst tables were being cleared, Mr. Nelson gave us a few selections on the gramophone. The President (Mr. J. E. Davies), and Dr. McConaghey, of Macclesfield, again took their places at the table, and the musical part of the programme was proceeded with. Mr. Jackson played on the piano, and accompanied Messrs. Daniels, McDonald, and F. Hardy in good songs. The President asked Dr. McConaghey to present the prizes. The Doctor, on rising, was very cordially received. He was, he said, pleased to be amongst fanciers. He handed the various prizes to the winners, complimenting them on their success. He spoke encouragingly to the unsuccessful competitors, urging them to go ahead and try to get at the top next season. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Dr. McConaghey. Songs again from Messrs. McDonald, Daniels, F. Hardy, and McKail. The songs were much appreciated, all the singers being in fine trim. Votes of thanks were passed to the host and hostess, the vocalists, the President, and the Secretary, all of whom suitably replied. The singing of the National Anthem concluded a very pleasant evening.—W. Stafford, Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Annual concert and presentation of cups held December 16th, when about 40 members sat down to an excellent supper. The supper was followed immediately by a contest, and Mr. Peak opened with a pianoforte solo, which was followed by a quartette entitled "Shamrock." Mr. A. Turner's pleasant tenor voice was heard to good effect in "Alice, Where Art Thou?" Mr. Simpson also sang well. A novel and interesting performance on the musical glasses by Mr. Hind was well received, as was the birdy recitation by Mr. Anderton entitled "The Owl Critic." Messrs. Mash, Turner, and Hind sang a very pleasant part-song. Mr. Yates made up for his late arrival by soon having the company in ripples of laughter. An opportunity was taken during the interval to present the cups. Mr. Dent, our chairman, in a very able speech, introduced Mr. T. Seed (Rishton) as the winner outright of the "Lord Stanley Challenge Cup," and on rising to accept same Mr. Seed received a great ovation. Messrs. Cleminson and Taylor were next announced as the winners outright of the P.O.S. Cup. Mr. Taylor, the senior partner, having thanked the company, expressed their intention of again offering the cup for competition, this being another example of their generosity to the club they are so interested in. Mr. Taylor was thanked on behalf of the society by Mr. Dent. Mr. Nickson received the two novice cup, both of which he holds for one year. The concert was again proceeded with.—T. Leeming.

A well attended meeting was held in conjunction with the one of the Stratford and East London F.A., White Horse Hotel, Ilford, Dec. 20th. The president (W. B. The challenge trophies, special prizes, and prize money were afterwards presented; there were 80 odd cups and specials, in addition to the prize money. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the secretary, Mr. Priestman (who had everything in apple-pie order), and all other members who assisted in the arrangements of the show, also on day of show; it was pointed out by Mr. Smith that there was an enormous amount of work to be got through by so small a band. A SCHOOLBOY'S ESSAY ON A BIRD SHOW.

Sir,—I am enclosing you an essay which was written in connection with our Harrogate annual open show. We had two boys from each school. They were taken round by the show manager, and he explained the birds and the different specimens, their habits, etc. Then they were supplied with paper, etc., and were set to work to write their essays. The winning essay is a very fine example, as I feel sure you will agree. The prize was for a Yorkshire Canary. I was so delighted with the lad's work that I presented him with a cage.

G. H. Barnwell, Hon. Sec. H.C.B.S.

Dec. 3rd has seen the Carlton Rooms transformed into a veritable paradise of feathered songsters, and various and melodious twitterings fill the air with pleasant harmonies. It is indeed a pleasant sight that I witness while writing this.

Almost opposite me in the left hand corner of the room, placed on a stand, there is about a score of cages containing a variety of Plainhead and Crested Norwiches. Between these and the right hand corner is a platform used in this case for the Secretary and others concerned in the display. The right hand corner has within its precincts a beautiful variety. Among the most prominent is the exquisitely feathered Waxwing; near at hand a majestic Thrush, also that far-famed minstrel, the Nightingale, an oily-looking Starling, a Black-Cap, and several others of miscellaneous breed.

The centre of the room is set out in the following manner: Three stands almost the whole length of the room have been placed parallel to each other and connected at the top by a shorter stand. Upon them is placed between four and five hundred birds. The plain Yorkshire Canaries are there in full force. Bullfinches are also present, occupying nearly the full length of the outside stand. A pretty Crossbill and a burly Hawfinch form one of the main attractions on the left hand stand. Mules, Linnets and Siskins along with numerous other brothers of like plume consists the display. Before ending this account of mine I have unravelled in my mind the meaning of the very evident liveliness on the part of the competitors, which has been such music to my ears, and come to the only conclusion that it is because of their being reared and fed on Spratts Foods.—Leslie Trousdale (Christ Church Schools).

MY EXPERIENCES WITH THE NORWICH CANARY.

A Lecture delivered by G. Dobinson, (Seaton Delaval) before the members of the North Shields & Dis. C.B.C. on Dec. 14.

The second monthly meeting of the North Shields and District Cage Bird Club was held December 14th, at 37, Howdon Road, before a crowded house; five new members were initiated, and, after all business was gone through, Mr. Dobinson, of Seaton Delaval, occupied the chair, and gave us the following lecture on Norwich Canaries:—

At your request to come here to-night to say something towards encouraging the Fancy, I have decided to read a paper, and have chosen for its title "My Experiences with the Norwich Canary." As this is my first attempt at this sort of thing, I hope you will bear with me if I don't come quite up to your expectations. As the title bears upon the past, I will commence from my beginning as a bird-keeper and fancier.

Not Easily Daunted.

I have kept birds practically all my life, and have fed and attended to their wants to the best of my ability, as far, that is, as my knowledge would allow. It is something like ten years ago since I first commenced breeding Canaries, and being like most other beginners, I was quite ignorant of the many ins and outs of the general management; and from the want of knowledge the results of the first two seasons were nil, which would have upset the majority of new starters. But, being determined, I persevered, and success attended the result. I had been started about a season when I got my first copy of Cage Birds; it was, I think, its first birthday number. Finding so many useful articles in its pages, I have not missed a number since. I commenced breeding operations with a pair of Border Fancies and a pair of common Norwich.

I visited all the shows in the locality, and after carefully looking over the winners I was determined more than ever if possible to have the best stock I could purchase.

A Successful Start.

But I could scarcely conceive the idea at that time that I would be able to compete and hold my ground with the best in the country, and after having a little experience in the general management of the breeding season, I got a pair of good Norwich, as this was the variety I approved of most. From this pair I got six youngsters the first season, one yellow cock, two buff cocks, one yellow mkd. hen, one clear buff hen, one four-marked buff hen. This last-mentioned was the pick of the basket. Her marks were not even on the wings, although her eyes were good. She was of good size, splendid type and quality; and after I showed her I had a number of tempting offers which I refused.

I might say I commenced my exhibition career at South Shields, this hen, after she was over a year old, getting vhc, and an unflighted buff mkd. cock getting 3rd. This gave me encouragement. The next week I sent them to Blaydon, the hen getting the coveted 1st and spl., and she was only once out of the money after that. I will not go any further with my exhibition career, as you will no doubt all be aware of the fact that I have been fairly successful.

Trouble and Where It Began.

I will now deal more with the general management of preparing the stock, breeding, moulting, and preparing for exhibition. As you will have noted, I had a good bird or two, but as they were all closely related I had to purchase some fresh stock. This is where the trouble began. Although paying good prices and getting what appeared good birds, somehow the blood did not blend, and I wasted practically a season. I might say that one item which I contend is important is this: When getting fresh blood I have bought cocks, keeping the best of the hens I bred.

The stamp of hens I like to breed with and from which I have always bred my best birds, are those just on the small side; that is, they would be rather small for the exhibition bench. Hens like these are generally more active and of nice tight feather, something like a Java Sparrow. I select those with nice short tails and wings, chubby bodies. One such as these, paired to the largest cock you can get (providing he has come from typical parents) I don't doubt but would produce something good for you. I don't object to a little coarseness of feather on the cock side if it can't be avoided, but I like him to have a good head.

I always try as far as possible to have one in each pair ticked or variegated, as this keeps the colour good. This is a very important item, as some of our judges like them red hot, sometimes irrespective of other points.

The Hens in Winter.

After selecting the hens I intend keeping I run them into the largest cage I have (not having accommodation for flights) so that they will get as much exercise as possible during the winter months. I feed them on the best Spanish seed, with about a teaspoonful per bird of mixed seed once or twice a week, and occasionally a piece of apple; also a plentiful supply of cuttlefish and gritty sand, and about the middle of March I collect all the egg shells used in the house and dry them in the oven, crumble them up, and place them in for the birds to peck at.

The cocks I cage off separately as far as possible at the turn of the year, as they soon get quarrelsome. I feed them much the same as the hens, with the exception of inga, which I supply to the hens more liberally towards March as a preventative for egg-binding. Another item regarding egg-binding. About three years ago an old fancier told me what he had done for years, and, he said, he had never had an egg-bound hen. Mix in the egg food about half teaspoonful of hot Natal to one egg prior to pairing, and after pairing up. I have tried it this last two seasons and have not had a hen egg-bound.

Pairing-up.

As far as possible, I pair one cock and one hen, and keep them together all the breeding season. But sometimes circumstances won't altogether allow this; you may perhaps lose a cock or a hen, and this generally upsets your calculations. I generally try to keep a spare hen of either colour.

After they are paired up about five or six days you will have to look out for eggs. I take the eggs away until the third is laid, then I replace them on the evening of this; if you allowed the eggs to remain perhaps the hen would start to incubate, which would mean in a clutch of say perhaps five eggs one would hatch on the first day, one the next, and so on. And if you have experienced it you will be aware what a difference a day makes. After the youngsters get about a fortnight old, the smaller ones, not getting their proper share of food, waste away and join the great majority; and I have noticed that if the old ones do not commence to feed straight away the young ones do not get the size they should have been. I have sometimes kept youngsters alive for a week and up to a fortnight, with the expectation that the hen would commence to feed. On one occasion my wife fed one until it could pick for itself; I never found a morsel of food in its crop except when she fed it; and after it could feed itself it would come and feed from her hand. It turned out a hen, and I bred from it one season. Contrary to its mother's case, it turned out a good feeder.

When the hens are feeding young I give them a plentiful supply of egg and biscuit. I use tea biscuits; I prefer these to bread, as the egg food does not turn sour. Also I give plenty of hempseed, and occasionally a spoonful of German rape. For green food I prefer seedy chickweed or lettuce. To keep the green food fresh I find Oxo or Bovril bottles handy; fix a piece of ordinary wire around the neck and bend the end down so that they will hook on the bar close to the perch. I give it the birds fresh twice a day, and as often as required.

After the hen has hatched her first round and fed them for about a fortnight you will notice her showing signs of building again; you will have to keep a look-out now in case she commences to pluck the feathers just commencing to grow on the young.

I try to keep one pair of birds in a double compartment cage, and as soon as I notice any signs of the hen being wishful of building again I place a clean nest in the other end along with some building material, and I generally find this plan has the desired effect. I give for building material common lamp wick cut to about ¾ in. lengths.

After she lays and goes to nest again the cock will finish feeding the youngsters. When they get about 30 days old I put them in a cage by themselves with a plentiful supply of egg food until they can crack seed, when I gradually reduce the quantity of egg food. But I don't take it from them altogether, as, when they get about nine weeks old you have to get them on to colour feed. I generally notice the largest and best young ones come from the second round.

The Moult.

The breeding season over, you are soon into as busy and as anxious a time—the moult. I keep a constant look over the youngsters to get the best selected. These I cage off in twos, if they will agree, as they feed better. I don't generally find much trouble in getting them to eat the colour-feed, although you will find a few obstinate cases. These I take the seed hopper from for about five or six hours, leaving nothing but the colour-feed; in this time they generally eat a sufficient quantity of this. I give one teaspoonful per bird each day.

When commencing to colour-feed I mix it light, but in about two or three weeks' time I gradually get them on to full strength. I find the following quantities satisfactory: To one egg and three tea biscuits ground in the egg-mill I mix four heaped spoonfuls of cool pepper and one hot Natal, four of castor sugar, thoroughly mixed together so that they can't pick the egg and leave the colour-food. Towards the finish of the moult I reduce the quantity of colour food so as to get a nice level colour throughout; if given the full strength right through the head would come out too hot and spoil the effect.

Don't forget to get any promising youngsters accustomed to the show cage and get them properly steadied, as they are no use, even if ever so good, if on the judge's coming to look at them they try to break the cage front to get out.

If there is anything in these few remarks that will be of any benefit to the beginner (as they are not intended for the "old stagers"), I will feel amply repaid for the little trouble in putting them together.

Several questions were asked of Mr. Dobinson and he answered all admirably. Mr. Hunter, Chairman of the club, presided.

An Easily-made Drawer Knob.

Sent by Mr. A. Barley, 14, West Street, Hucknall, Notts.

This sketch may interest some of your readers and be found useful to them. It is of a drawer knob. It can be made without any cost whatever. First of all get an ordinary cotton reel and saw it in two, as shown by the dotted lines in sketch 1. Next get two screws and screw the half cotton reels to cage drawer, as shown in sketch 2. Then paint them and they are as good as the pot nobs you buy at 1½d. each.—A. Barley.

No. 471.

A Simple Medicine Dropper.

Sent by Mr. W. Brooksbank, 18, Vermuyden Terrace, Goole, Yorks.

Here is a sketch of a very simple medicine dropper. Get a small piece of thin wire—bright wire like that which they rap round flowers is the best—about 10 inches long. Bend it in the centre and twist lightly round, as shown in sketch No. 1. Next get your medicine bottle and put the wire into it, letting the bent part rest entirely on the lip of your medicine bottle. Then cork your bottle up so that the medicine will drop out down the wire as fast as you like, and as slow as you like. This simple contrivance costs nothing to make. Sketch No. 2 shows you how to use same, dropping medicine into glass drinker or pot drinker; but do not twist the wire too tight. It is one of the best droppers for medicines I know of.—W. Brooksbank.

Bittern Laying in Confinement.

In one of Lord Lilford's interesting books on birds this note on the Bittern occurs: "A Bittern, one of four, in a sort of shed cage in our courtyard here, visible to frequent passers at all hours of the day, has twisted some straw into the semblance of a nest, and laid an egg, upon which she sits steadily, and allows herself to be stroked with perfect equanimity."

EASTLEIGH.

The county show of the Eastleigh and Dis. F.A. was held in the Rly. Inst., Leigh Road, on Dec. 9th, when a nice collection of cage birds graced the benches. The management was all that could be desired, with Messrs. J. P. Barton and A. G. Cooper at the head of affairs as secretaries. Mr. A. De Winton judged.

ABERDEEN.

Fifty-fifth annual show held Ball Room, Music Hall, December 16th and 17th. The Ball Room is one of the best halls in the city, being high in the roof and fairly well lighted; the place was kept at a nice even temperature, which made it very comfortable for birds as well as for visitors. This society, without doubt, knows how to run a show, and must rank as one of the oldest and best in Scotland, and we may also say one of the best conducted. Mr. W. Allen, as president, and Mr. J. Hector, as vice-president—two well-known fanciers of over 30 years' experience in show management—had everything in first-class order, and deserve high praise. The secretary and treasurer, Mr. J. Bryson, went through a lot of hard work, and is one of the best, most courteous, and obliging, and his heart and soul are in the well-being of his society. He is well backed up by a strong and hard-working committee of old and trusted fanciers, consisting of Messrs. Thomson, Ewen, Anderson, Lawrie, Strachan, Lyon, Sandison, A. Thomson, Balfour, Mackie, Garden, Steven, Milne, Rae, Lewis, Irvine, Greig, Silver, and Allison. Stewards, Messrs. John Smith and Lewis Will. The entries were a little back on last year's. Norwich were a strong feature of the show and contained one or two eye-openers. Type and quality were excellent. Mr. Alex. Gardiner (Newtongrange) had a very fine team forward—15 in all. Dr. Galloway (Aberdeen) had on view his white Canary, the only one in Scotland; this was much admired. We came across that well-known British bird fancier, Mr. F. Wyse, of London. The members' classes contained some very fine Norwich, all there for type and quality; Mr. F. Garden won cup for best unflighted hen. The N.P.C. medal for cocks was won by Mr. J. Hector. Medal for best hen was gained by Mr. Alex. Thomson. Guinea challenge for best yell. ck. was won by Mr. A. Harris (Montrose), and for buff ck by Mr. Alex. Thomson. Special for best British bird exhibited by a member of over 20 years went to Mr. J. Hector, the runner-up being Mr. J. Balfour. Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Siskins, and Redpolls were far above ordinary merit, and some came from as far away as London, looking none the worse for their long journey. Mr. W. B. Mackie judged Norwich, Mr. D. Craig (Arbroath) Natural Colour and all other varieties, and Mr. A. Steele (Aberdeen) British and Foreign, and, with very few exceptions, their awards gave general satisfaction.

BANGOR.

First annual show of the Bangor C.B.S. was held December 17th in Mr. Finlay's Mart, 104, Main Street. This room made an ideal place for a show, being free from draughts, etc. The quality of the exhibits was all that could be desired, and competition was very keen. Mr. G. Marlin (Hamilton) placed the cards. The hon. secretary, Mr. Pidduck, was ably assisted by a hard working and painstaking committee in Messrs. Nelson, McAtur (who acted as judge's stewards), Shannon, Absolom, Carleton, Stewart, Nelson, McKee, Beattie, Alexandra (hon. treasurer). Mr. Pidduck is to be congratulated on the successful issue of the show. Some very taking exhibits were staged. We were informed that the well-known South and West of Ireland fanciers did not care to send their birds out owing to their having to remain away until the Monday. Great interest was taken in the exhibits by the residents of Bangor, and we saw many old fanciers during our stay.

Greetings to Our Readers.

We have been the recipients of many tokens of goodwill—in the shape of letters and Christmas cards—from kindly readers, and desire to gratefully acknowledge and reciprocate these seasonable greetings.

It is very gratifying to us to be able to record the continued progress made by CAGE BIRDS, and to receive at each recurrence of the Festive Season such evidence of the hold our journal has upon the affections of its readers.

We are particularly pleased with the splendid reception accorded to our Christmas Number of last week and the coloured calendar which accompanied it.

To our readers the world over we wish

A MERRY CHRISTMAS and a HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

The Calendar this week is tip-top.—WM. RUDDIMAN, hon. sec., Cupar and Dist. O.S.

CAGE BIRDS Christmas Number is a champion. "C.B." is going strong.—T. Meredith (Aberystwith).

At Annan show I was second in Bullfinches and third in Goldfinches, not McMinn Brothers, as reported.—William Bell (Ecclefechan, N.B.).

I have taken CAGE BIRDS for six years, and although frequently supplied with other Fancy papers, I think there is not one to equal it.—Margarita Latham (Croydon).

The Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S. has engaged Messrs. H. Payne and H. Norman as judges for its next show, to be held January 17th, 1911, writes Mr. D. John, the Secretary.

All prize money won at the City and County of Perth show on December 10 has been paid and most of the specials; the remainder will be sent whenever collected.—James Kerr, Hon. Sec.

The report of our show in CAGE BIRDS was an excellent one, writes Mr. J. H. Mitchell, Hon. Sec. of the Codnor Park C.B.S. Every competitor's name was correct, and the awards were all right.

Owing to so few attending the meetings of the Pentre and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. G. Lingard, the secretary, the five who attended the last meeting decided to form a Linnet singing club as an enticement to others.

The Croydon F.A. annual show (Nov. 10 last) balance sheet, sent us by the Secretary, Mr. A. C. Tressider, discloses the excellent profit of £5 18s., which amount is paid into the association's funds.

The Hull C.B.S. have fixed November 17th and 18th, 1911, for their seventeenth annual open show, Messrs. J. Maddison (Newcastle-on-Tyne) and J Robson having been elected to judge same, writes Mr. E. R. Ridley, the Hon. Sec.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, from the first, and always look forward to reading it on Friday night. It is full of good information for both the novice and the experienced fancier.—E. Morgan (Stretford).

I wish to make it clear, writes Mr. G. Lawton, that my office as general secretary for Hanley Cage Bird Society has nothing to do with show business whatever, as Mr. B. Peake retains his office as secretary and show manager.

I have taken your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, since we came south. I have only Yorkshires at present as my Fancy. The report of Caterham Valley show in the hen class should read: third Holliday, and not Holland.—E. HOLLIDAY (Southampton).

I seldom miss a week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, and I can say the same for my friend, Mr. Archbold. I think it is a capital paper for all bird lovers.—JAMES CAIRNS (Morpeth).

I was first in the Norwich Cock class at Nantymoel show, the report giving "no name." Also I was second at Abertillery, first withheld. In the cup competition at Cardiff show I won the Canary Cup and Mr. Thorne the British and Foreign Bird Cup.—EDWIN THOMAS (Cardiff).

I much regret to inform you that owing to our clashing with Cardiff and the serious state of trade in the South Wales coalfield, our Pontrebach and Dis. Fanciers Society's show was not patronised as we thought it would be, writes Mr. A. E. Brown, the Hon. Sec. My committee desire me to tender CAGE BIRDS their warmest thanks, and if it is possible to raise money during this next year to enable us to hold another show, we shall certainly not forget the valuable assistance we all receive from your splendid paper.

I am very pleased with CAGE BIRDS Calendar, It is beautifully got up, and everyone that sees it admires it.—J. ROBERTS (Llangollen).

Allow me to thank Mr. J. E. Jones, hon. sec. of Harlech North Wales Cage Bird Show, and his staff, for sending birds home as I asked, writes Mr. T. Meredith (Aberystwith). I received same alright by the 8 o'clock train on the Saturday night. I may add that my success everywhere is all through CAGE BIRDS, because of the valuable hints it gives. Your Christmas Number is a champion. Good luck, old CAGE BIRDS, we are going strong.

Entries for the Guisborough and District "Priory" C.B.S. show close on December 24, writes Mr. R. Mays, hon. sec., and we hope fanciers will give us a bumping entry. Schedules have all been sent out; if anyone has been missed will he please apply to me?

Will Mr. Thomas Findlay, Drumrack Farm, send me his full address, as I wish to return his postal order, writes Mr. Geo. Bennett (Luton). This makes 16 I have had to return through the printers making my advert. read Crests and Crestbreds from 1s., instead of from 10s.

The Middlesbrough and Tees-side C.B.S., writes Mr. Arthur Wake, the Sec., will hold their members' show on Dec. 26th, at the Grangetown Hotel, and not the King's Head Hotel, as previously stated; open at 2 p.m. All Fanciers and friends are invited, admission being free.

Schedules for the Palace Bird Show will be posted on Tuesday, January 10th, to all exhibitors at last Palace, Horticultural Hall, Manchester, Nottingham, and Scottish National shows, also to members of the Specialist clubs supporting the show, writes Mr. J. W. Ramsden, the show manager.

Our next meeting takes place in Buchanan's Hotel, 114, High Street, Edinburgh, on December 24, at 7.30 p.m. prompt, writes Mr. J. R. Mcikle, sec. of the South Metropolitan (Open Derby) O.A. This notice is the only one to members outside Midlothian. Business: Election of office-bearers, financial statement, etc.

The Liverpool and District Amalgamated Cage Bird Societies are holding their fifth annual show on January 2nd, 1911, in the St. Thomas's Schools, Upper Frederick Street, Liverpool, Mr. W. R. Knowles judging the Yorkshire section and Mr. C. Houlton the Norwich and British Bird section, writes Mr. F. Eccleston, the Secretary.

Many thanks for beautiful coloured calendar which I received with my CAGE BIRDS this week. I was very pleased with it, and think it one of the best you have sent out. I have been a reader of your paper, CAGE BIRDS, for many years, and I look forward every Friday for all the good information I get from it.—G. Gregory (Mountain Ash).

May I draw the attention of Northern exhibitors to the Haltwhistle C.B. Show, to be held Jan. 7th, writes Mr. T. Hedley, the Secretary, Central Place, Haltwhistle. This is our first open show, and we have 16 open classes. We have secured the Mechanics' Hall, which is splendidly adapted for the purpose, and are hoping to be well supported.

The Calendar I think is splendid, especially the picture of the Blackbird, which I should certainly cut out if it was not for spoiling the Calendar. It does great credit to your clever artist, Mr. Rankin. I am sure that thousands of readers of CAGE BIRDS will appreciate the Calendar and its pictures; they certainly make grand pictures.—E. FIELD (Lidget Green).

There is a special for most points in the Border section open, and one for open most points in British Finch classes, given by Mr. J. J. Robson, writes Mr. Wm. Hy. Wright, hon. sec. of the Carlisle and Dis. C.B.S. show. Both are paintings, entitled "Two Wee Gems" and "British Finches," each value 10s. 6d. Through a printer's error they have been missed from schedule.

It is impossible for me to answer all the kind letters and cards received from exhibitors at the recent Launceston Fanciers' Show, writes Mr. N. H. Reed, Hon. Sec. Will they please accept my best thanks? But I did nothing more than a secretary should do, treat exhibitors with courtesy, pay prizes in full and promptly. Advertise in CAGE BIRDS and you're sure to get a good show.

Permit me to congratulate you and your artists on the coloured plates recently presented with CAGE BIRDS, and your Calendar and the splendidly depicted "Thrush in Winter" in the 'Xmas number. The latter would make a fine plate, and goes straight to the heart of true bird lovers; it might even touch the "red-tape-bound" heart of an officer of the R.S.P.C.A. R. W. VANDERBEN (South Shields).

Report of Kilsyth show in the Norwich yellow hen class has Johnston first, whereas it should be Martin. I made 14 entries and secured 3 firsts, 4 seconds, 4 thirds, and 3 commends—all my birds got mentioned. Report of Denny show in Norwich yellow cock class read first Head, but should have been Martin.—Robert Martin (Waterside, Kirkintilloch).

NEW YEAR GIFTS.

Why not send one of our framed plates of birds (Canaries, British, Hybrids, or Foreign) as a Seasonable Gift? For 2/6 we will despatch carriage paid to any address in the U.K. any of our Coloured Plates in a suitable frame. Or select your friends one of our practical books upon birds—a gift that will please. Read the list on the back page.
The Manager, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London.

Your 'Xmas No. this week is splendid. I have got a new reader through showing it to a friend, who says he has never seen any paper so good as CAGE BIRDS. I must say that no other paper will ever equal it, much less pass it.—J. F. MCINTYRE (Airdrie).

Barnsley and Dis. C.B.S. are holding their annual members' exhibition on Dec. 26, in the large club room at headquarters, the Clarence Hotel, writes Mr. F. C. Sims, the Secretary. Mr. L. W. Wood will have some of his fine collection of foreign birds on view. Twenty classes are provided, with 5s. cash for most points in each section. Mr. W. Brotherton (Rotherham) will officiate as judge. The show is expected to be open at 1 o'clock p.m. This will be a treat for local fanciers as it is expected to be one of the best members' shows ever held in Barnsley.

I have just received Mr. Tristem's Bristol special for best Norwich in show (novice); it is a Canary, a clinking foul-green cock (unflighted), which I shall find valuable. I may say that as a novice I have been very lucky on the show bench this year, starting at Palace with 2nd prize, and then Exeter 3 firsts and 7 specials, including gold medal and best in show (Norwich). Then two sent to Frome had 2nd and 3rd, Bristol 2 entries, obtaining 2 firsts and best in show; Exmouth 2 first and 2 seconds; L.C.B.A. 2 entries obtained 3rd and 4th. So for a novice I feel not far behind.—G. Mitchell (Topsham).

I should like to thank you for CAGE BIRDS. A year ago, or just a little more perhaps, I had no birds. I then saw in a newsagent's a double number of "C.B." containing a plate of British Birds. I bought that paper and have had it each week since. You will perhaps know how much I appreciate CAGE BIRDS when I tell you that I have now one glass-covered aviary 5ft. high, 4ft. 6in. long and 33in. back to front, and one large open wire-fronted aviary 15ft. long, 7ft. high, and 5ft. back to front. In these two aviaries I have about 50 British and Foreign birds. So you can tell by this I spend many pleasant hours with them. Wishing "C.B." every success.—W. J. Singleton (Wolverhampton).

Scottish National C.B.S.

Extra specials for show: special by Mr. Sykes for foreign Goldfinch and Bullfinch class; special by Mrs. Baxter (Leith) for same section; special, 7s. 6d., by Mr. Jas. Livingstone (Bathgate), for best field-moulted British Goldfinch.—A. W. Watson, sec.

The Cage birds section of the Cockermouth and Dis. F.S. show was up to the average, both in quality and quantity, writes Mr. E. Lamb, the secretary. Of course, our strongest section is the Border Fancies, but we also had some very fine Yorkshires. We had the patronage of the B.F.C.C., and our show was held under C.B.U. rules. We finished up after the show of 1909 with a bad debit balance, but I think we have wiped that out this time, although we were badly hit by Cleator Moor show changing their dates from the week following ours to the two days preceding it. I may say that we have had the first Friday and Saturday in December for the last six years. A notable exhibit, winner of society's medal for best cage bird in show, is Mr. J. Ellwood's Hawfinch, "Job's Choice." It is a fine bird. We had also what was entered as a Yellow-hammer Canary, but I understand that it is really a cross between a Canary and a foreign bird, but what the latter is I could not learn. Our show room, probably the largest in the North of England, was specially heated for the feathered visitors, and we have not had a single complaint from the owners thereof

Notes from Erin.

DURING the past few days I have heard many fanciers praise the way in which the Larne C.B.S. Committee returned all exhibits from their recent show. Speaking personally, my birds were returned better packed than when they were despatched! It is little matters such as this that make a show a success, as we are not long in finding out where our birds are properly attended to. All prize money is now paid out, and I understand that this show has been a financial success.

DERRY C.B.S. schedules are now being prepared, and will be sent out in the course of the next few days.

THERE will now be a lull in the shows until the New Year, and I feel sure our birds will enjoy the rest. I have heard during the past few days some fanciers wondering why some shows are more successful than others. I think this is a question easily answered. A great deal depends upon the manner in which a secretary and the officials carry out their duties. At one show held recently, I personally applied for a schedule no less than three times, but the secretary had not the courtesy either to send or give any explanation. I then forwarded stamps for a catalogue, but although I have written a second time over the matter I have not yet heard from him.

WE have other instances where fanciers in a particular neighbourhood support one fixture during the whole season by sending a few entries, and a little later on they hold a show themselves, and wonder at the small number of entries received. If a society wishes to be a success, it is necessary for their members to assist at other fixtures. There is one other point: we do not wish to send out our birds to remain away from home over the week-end. Therefore it can be seen that week-end shows cannot expect good support from any distance.

"CLOSED RING."

Important Notice

To All Our Readers.

"Cage Birds" 1911 Annual

is now in course of preparation, and will be published early in February, as usual, and be on sale at the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show, and in the hands of all subscribers, we hope, by Friday, February 3rd next. To enable us to keep our word we ask the generous co-operation of readers in sending particulars required in its compilation, also their advertisements, at the earliest possible moment. Any suggestions for new features or for the improvement of present features will be welcomed, and will receive every consideration.

Secretaries of All Societies

devoted to the interests of the cage-bird hobby should send us full particulars of same at once for inclusion in our Alphabetical List of Cage-Bird Clubs. We want the full name of the Society, the latest list of its officials, the place and time of meetings and the nights, the entrance fee and the membership subscription. As this is the only directory in existence to those associations catering for cage bird fanciers no society can afford to be missing from the list. Members themselves should make a point of seeing that their society is included. Secretaries who have changed their addresses should not fail to notify us. We want our list to be thoroughly up-to-date, and thoroughly complete.

All Judges of Cage Birds

who have officiated at any recognised show can have their names and addresses inserted in our list of judges by sending us particulars on a postcard, stating what varieties (if any) they specialise in. There is no charge whatever. Any judge at present on our list who may have changed his address during the past year should notify us at once. This list, remember, is the only complete one of its kind, and is universally consulted by show officials.

To the Bird Trade.

Our directory to the bird trade is a feature that no dealer in birds, or foods, or medicines, or appliances of any kind whatsoever, can neglect. It is a permanent record of his address, as well as of his specialities, and forms an invaluable guide to the fanciers in his own town as well as all over the world. No charge is made for the inclusion of any bona-fide trader, but the name can be thrown up in heavy black type on payment of 1s. (one shilling).

TO ALL BREEDERS AND EXHIBITORS AND ADVERTISERS GENERALLY.

For Breeders' Cards, and other displayed Advertisements, business bringers from all over the World, see the low terms quoted on page 572 this week.

These are Advertisements which at a very low cost will bring you business for a whole year.

Teaching the Mynah to Talk,

An Interesting and Not Unprofitable Hobby.

By Mrs. EDWARDS.

"Hello there!" said a small voice; "come on."

I was looking at the birds in the aviary, Sefton Park, Liverpool, when I distinctly heard these words. I had passed the Parrot section, and as there was no one about (it was very early in the morning) I felt a bit scared—till I found that the speaker stood looking at me from the floor of the aviary—a pretty black, shiny-feathered bird. He was larger than a Starling and not so big as a Crow (just between). His black body was very graceful; the flight feathers barred with white, and long slender legs and feet of pale yellow. The beak was long and of a rich orange colour, fading to yellow at the tip, and on each cheek was a triangular-shaped, bare patch of yellow skin, which showed up to great advantage his very bright brown eyes. This same kind of skin draped his neck from either side, and met in a thin line at the back of his head, looking like a yellow collar.

A Regrettable Demise.

I soon found that he was an Indian Hill Mynah, and delightfully tame. He would take tit-bits from strangers, through the wires of the aviary. Anything hard, like biscuit, he carried in his beak to the little fountain that plays in the centre of the section he lived in. He would let it soak, and when soft would eat it—that is, if none of the other birds found it when his back was turned. He had a very happy disposition and lived peacefully amongst British Finches and a few foreigners. Then one morning, alas! he was found dead, and was greatly missed by the visitors to the aviary. It was thought that he had picked up something not good for him to eat.

Since that first introduction I have had many Mynahs, and find their education affords a very interesting hobby, also that a good talker is always in demand, as an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS has proved to me. A relation who sails between England and Rangoon brings them. He buys them from the natives there, usually six young birds at a time, and hand-feeds them for a few weeks on the way home.

It is a laughable sight, he says, to see them in a row in their big cage, with their beaks wide open, waiting for half a banana to be pushed down their throats. Their appetites are very hearty, so this performance is repeated many times a day. They get every attention, but, in spite of this, two or three always die on the voyage home. They are given steamed rice as well as fruit, and soon begin to feed themselves. It is the change of climate after passing the Red Sea that kills them.

Feeding and Housing.

In Rangoon there are several kinds of Mynahs, but the Hill Mynahs are the ones to buy for teaching to talk. They are to be seen in flocks in India, just like Crows are here, and their "call" can be heard in the evenings as they fly to their sleeping places, always on the opposite side of the river to that on which they find their food. They live chiefly upon the paddy-rice fields, which are nearly always soaking with water, and the grain fairly soft, and for this reason I always feed mine on steamed rice, and a few currants steamed with it, as this is most like their natural food. Finely chopped ripe fruit and meat, smooth caterpillars and meal-worms (with the heads of each crushed) are all very much appreciated, and some good Lark or Thrush food affords an excellent change.

The cage should be a large one, to permit him exercise, and is best kept in a living room. Perches which are very suitable can be made from a new broom-stick (handle), which suits the bird's long claws. The wire front should have a couple of large head holes, so that the food and water can hang outside, as, if the water is left inside the cage the Mynah is always bathing in it, and is sometimes then without even a drink left. Large covered feeding vessels, such as are used for a Magpie, are suitable for this bird, as they prevent the soft food being splashed about the floor of the room. Cleanliness is most important, and great care must be taken that no sour food is left in the cage or feeder, while, of course, a supply of clean drinking water should always hang on the cage.

My Mynahs have a bath every morning in a Parrot cage (one at a time, of course). I have removed the wire grating from the bottom of this cage, and so can stand a large flat dish of water on the sand tray and place the wire top of the cage over it. The birds well know what the cage is for, and in a very short time become always anxious to be having a good splash. I use water with the chill just taken off for their bath. While the birds are bathing, each cage is cleaned, and the bird is run back into it on to clean, coarse pitchpine sawdust, where he soon dries. Mynahs do not seem to require grit, as I keep a small tin of it in each cage, but it is never used.

By the time a Mynah has been in England six months he is very hardy, and rarely ever ill. Of course, draughts must be avoided, and it is advisable at first to cover the cage at night with a warm cloth. In the case of a bird showing signs of a cold (coughing or sneezing) I at once partly cover his cage with a cloth sprinkled with eucalyptus oil, and mix a teaspoonful of ordinary cough syrup in his drinking water, which soon puts him right. I also withold the bath until he is cured.

I usually have my birds quite twelve months before they begin to talk, although they imitate sounds and bark and me-ow long before this. I start with "Mother," and "Hello there," as these are easy words for them to pick up. At first their attempts at talking are very queer, but gradually they get out the words distinctly, and at last speak much plainer than a Parrot. When once they start talking they get on very quickly, and are always the most cute of birds, full of life and mischief. They do not seem to know what fear is, and will make friends with anyone. They are very fond of tit-bits from the table—crumbs of cake, mashed potatoes, etc.

Anyone who gets a young Mynah has need for lots of patience in teaching him, but is well rewarded by the affection that the little fellow will show for him. I have heard that the soldiers in India make great pets of the Mynahs, even taking them on the march with them. They will fly away overhead for a while, but return to their own particular pal and settle on his shoulder. The soldier often tries to bring his pet to England, but the climate and confinement after passing the Red Sea usually prove too much for him.

On an average, Mynahs live in confinement in England nine to ten years (indoors). I cannot say if they would live so long in an outdoor aviary. A lady in Liverpool has one which she allows to fly loose in her drawing room—greatly to the annoyance of her servants, who have to straighten things up after the Mynah's outing. He will go back to his cage for food when tired.

I do not know whether both the cock and hen Mynah will talk, but I have never had a bird that would not speak, and I must have had a ben at some time or other, I am sure. My treatment may be far from perfect, still, it seems to suit the birds, as by the time I have had them twelve months they are always in lovely feather and I have not lost one through illness. I have had fourteen altogether and still find them as fascinating as the first I ever saw—the one in the Sefton Park aviary. When I get one fairly talking I sell him, always first making sure that another is coming along to replace him, and as the price is high the birds are always sure of a good home, which I think is an important thing in dealing with any live bird or animal.

A Lark's Refuge.

A gentleman was travelling on horseback when a Lark fell on his saddle. He stopped his horse and looked at the bird in surprise. He thought it was wounded. But when he was going to pick it up, the Lark crept behind him, and when he turned to look at it, it fell on the ground. He looked up and saw a Hawk directly above him. The Hawk flew a little distance away, and the Lark watching, flew over the hedge and was hidden from view.—Sent by H. G. Howells (age 14), 4, Francis Terrace, Carmarthen.

*My Cockatoo.

Dear Editor, I will you tell,
About my pet I love so well,
For ever since I've been to school.
And learned therein the Golden Rule,

I've had a bird of lovely hue,
A darling wise old Cockatoo;
Who in a cage both big and strong,
Sits chatt'ring, chatt'ring all day long

I call him Jacky for a name,
But call him Bill it's all the same.
For sad to say, my Jacky hears
No sound, for he's been deaf for years.

Only Going Down to Tate's.

My father was very regular in his habits, and every evening it was his custom to take a stroll after tea to visit some old friends of the name of Tate, who lived in the next street; and before leaving the house he would open the door of the dining-room, where we used to sit, and would say aloud, "Only going down to Tate's." Now, it happened one evening that Polly's cage-door was left open. We suddenly missed him from the room, and could not think where he had gone; and as we were very fond of him, we all set to work and searched the house high and low, looking into every corner, and calling "Polly, Polly," everywhere. But no Polly could we find. At last my father left, as usual, to pay his visit to our neighbours, leaving us still looking for our pet. But what was his surprise on turning the corner of the street to see Polly quietly waddling down the middle of the road. "Why, Polly," said he, "where are you going?" Poll cocked his little head on one side, and looked up and said, "Only going down to Tate's." And Poll was actually going in the direction of the Tates' house, which made it all the more amusing. Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

A Prominent Scottish Breeder of Roller Canaries.

Mr. JOHN THOMPSON (Stevenston, N.B.)

Breeders of Hartz Mountain Roller Canaries are not very common in Scotland; in fact, Mr. John Thompson might claim to be the only large breeder of this variety in "the land o' cakes." Although it is only six years ago since he started in the Fancy, he has made rapid strides in the direction of keeping these birds successfully. His birds are all most hardy and healthy, and look perfectly clean. He uses no artificial heat whatsoever in his bird-rooms; in fact, he informed me that it was not an uncommon thing to find the water in the tins frozen in the mornings. I myself felt decidedly chilly on entering the rooms, but the birds on the contrary seemed quite the reverse—most comfortable.

The Homes of the Birds.

Mr. Thompson believes in the box type of cages for his birds. These he makes himself, and quite tidy affairs they are. All the sand-drawers are made of zinc. The cages have slip-out wire fronts, with the seed boxes and water bottles fitted outside. The birds are mostly all caged off singly in cages measuring 15in. by 14in. by 7in., these being stacked one above the other.

Besides the living-room, which is given over to the birds, Mr. Thompson has a couple of outdoor aviaries measuring about 9ft. square, into which the hens are turned during the winter.

First Season's Success.

"And what made you take to breeding Rollers?"

"Well, I started six years ago with common Canaries, but was not very successful with them. Contemplating trying another variety, I sent for a Roller cock and two hens, and to my surprise I bred twenty-seven young the first season. Out of this lot I kept seven hens, and four cocks; and I reared ninety young the next season, and so on until now at the present moment I have one hundred and twenty birds. I found them very hardy and lost very few."

"And how do you account for this success?"

"I don't exactly know: perhaps it is because I give them so much attention, and because I am so fond of them."

Method of Feeding.

"What is your method of feeding?"

"Their staple food is made up of the best quality of German rape and Canary seed in equal parts; this they get the whole year round, with an occasional feed of mixed seeds, and once a week milk sop (bread soaked in scalded milk)."

How the Birds are Bred.

"Do you pair up and breed them in the usual way?"

"Yes, I usually run them in pairs, but I put two and sometimes three hens to a cock when he is very vigorous. On the night the hen lays the fourth egg, I set her. When the young are a little over three weeks old I take them away from the parents and turn them into 5ft. flights. I leave them in the flights for about five weeks, after which I transfer them to my outdoor aviaries. Just before they drop into the moult I pick out all the cocks and cage them up singly and remove them into a room by themselves together with a couple of good 'schoolmasters.' In the cases of those young cocks which pay no heed to their tutors, and who break out into choruses of their own, I darken the cages a bit by covering them with cloth. I find that young cocks are trained much better when caged up singly by themselves, than when left with others in a flight."

"Do you diet the birds in any special way when training?"—"No. Here in Scotland I am rather at a disadvantage to test the singing qualities of my birds, as there are no Roller singing clubs, etc. I should very much like to be connected with such a society were one formed in Scotland, in the City of Glasgow for preference."—T. Wild-Bird Life.

Doings of the Missel Thrush.

Rough winds and driving rain are not favourable to outdoor observation of wild bird life, but in between the squalls one is tempted to seek the open fields, for the air is wonderfully mild for the month of December. This absence of frost and cold is having its effect upon wild creatures. As soon as the birds of the open get over the autumn sickness (the moult) they are, if the weather is at all favourable, soon in fine health and condition again. The more tuneful among them begin to record their songs, and in many cases are quickly in full voice; others show their condition by constantly chasing and quarrelling with their fellows, and in some the actual selection of partners for the coming breeding season takes place. At the time of writing the climatic conditions savour more of March than of December. The wind is rough and boisterous, and occasional showers of driving rain sweep over the fields and meadows. As though defying the elements a couple of Thrushes are singing their loudest. For several days a bold Stormcock has taken up a commanding position nearly at the top of an old walnut tree, in a meadow opposite the writer's house. From this post he sings during the greater part of the day. The wind and the rain have no terrors for him; he boldly faces them and screeches his loudest. He must be a particularly precocious bird, for several species occasionally alight among the branches, but do not assist him in his vocal efforts. As a winter songster the Missel Thrush is one of our best; not that his notes are particularly musical, but they are so wild and free that they blend with the elements and seem more in tune with winter's storms, than with summer's sunshine. Undoubtedly the song of the Stormcock is frequently mistaken for that of the Song Thrush, and the big bold bird does not get the credit for enlivening the dull days so much as he deserves. His vocal efforts are certainly not so musical as those of the smaller bird, but as his song is seldom heard so closely to the listener (for he generally chooses some high position), it is somewhat mellowed before it reaches the ear, and in a high wind only snatches of music can be heard. He is a fine interesting bird, and is far less common than the well-known Song Thrush.

Seagulls Come Inland.

During the rough weather the Seagulls have wandered inland, and huge flocks may be seen feeding upon the ploughed fields and water meadows.

Home of the Twite.

The Twite is not by any means a homely species, but is to be found on the wild moors of the far north. It is said to be more plentiful in the Outer Hebrides than anywhere, and Dixon says he has seen large flocks of them in the Island of St. Kilda.

The Wren in Winter.

That independent little fellow, the Common Wren, passes the winter months hunting the hedgerows, as a rule not far from habitation. He is also particularly fond of the wood stacks and refuse heaps round farm buildings where no doubt he is able to find a fair quantity of insects, upon which he lives almost exclusively.

The Redstart as a Songster.

A reader residing near Epping Forest where the Redstart is fairly common, says the cock bird has a very soft, sweet song, although somewhat short. He is to be heard singing among the old trees (where he and his mate usually nest) very late in the evening, and again quite early in the morning.

Welcome to the Woods.

Ramblers in the woods in winter notice that the first bird to take an apparently interesting notice of them is the Robin, who hops round quite closely as though welcoming them to his domain. Following closely this familiar bird is the Bullfinch; he does not show the bold fearlessness of the Redbreast, but his plaintive note can be frequently heard from the thicket close by.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Two Birds.

W. F. Wilbee.—The bird which has the peculiar head movements you mention is probably blind. Catch it and examine its eyes. If they show milky white pupils it is blind from cataract; if there is no whiteness try it by placing your finger near its eyes and moving it about to discover whether the bird can see it or not. In either case of blindness you can do nothing to cure it. Your feeding is not suitable. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape; twice a week a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet, and maw, and once or twice a week a little crushed sponge cake, or bread and milk, and a little ripe sweet fruit or green food when available, and in good condition, two or three times a week. Feed the other bird the same as above after the first fortnight; but for the next two weeks give plain canary only as staple, a pinch of summer rape separately, twice each week, and a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed once each week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week four drops of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day.

Wheezy and Mopy.

N. K. J.—I see no reason whatever to suspect the bird has inflammation. It is quite possible the bad smell you mention may arise from her excreta, but you should make yourself quite sure of this, and that it does not arise from any external cause, such as dampness in the room, either local or general. If it arises from the bird it will disappear as she improves in condition, but meantime you might wipe over the sand tray with Jeyes' Disinfectant. Feed on a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of ripe banana. On the alternate days twice a week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with maw seed, and on the remaining alternating days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Restrict diet solely to this for a month. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and on the alternate days six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid, and after this give every second day for a fortnight, 15 drops of a mixture of two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills; one dram each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine; and six grains of iodide of potassium, which any chemist will mix for you.

How to Mate (J. A. C.).—You do not say whether you want to try for cinnamon or green-marked birds, but as there is cinnamon blood close on the male side, you would be best advised to try for cinnamon marks in any case. Whether you will get them, or what you will get, depends upon whether the female parent of this hen was a pink-eyed bird or not—a piece of information you omit to mention. Assuming this was the case, the best mate you could select for the hen in question is a wing or eye-ticked, or wing-ticked and eye-ticked buff cock. It will not matter if these ticks or marks are a trifle heavy, so long as they are in the right place, but strictly avoid a bird marked on the crown back, or breast.

Sore Feet (Dorothy).—Keep the perches, as well as cage floor, as clean as possible. Dissolve a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in two-thirds of a teaspoonful of hot water—more or less in the same proportion—and whilst still quite warm catch the bird and hold its feet in the fluid for a few minutes, using a small feather if necessary to remove any portion of dirt which adheres to them, and bathing them quite clean. Then dry gently and anoint well with zinc ointment, afterwards wiping off any surplus that might attract and hold dirt. Repeat this daily until soreness has disappeared. You might add a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice to the water for two days. No other treatment should be necessary.

Crestbred Moulting (W. Avery).—First satisfy yourself that the birds are not exposed to cold draughts, or great extremes of temperature. If they are, you must remove these causes before attempting treatment. Keep them in a comfortable and equable temperature, which need not necessarily be a very high one. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod-liver oil emulsion and four of sherry mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle, and millet, and a morsel of ripe banana instead of green food. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, then dissolve two pennyworth of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of sherry, and give 15 drops of this in the water every second day until moulting ceases.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Bare on Head (A Regular Reader).—I suspect the bird's age is at the root of the trouble, and it is doubtful if you will make much permanent improvement. To stand a fair chance of success, treatment should have coincided with the proper moulting season. Keep in a fairly warm position, quite free from draughts and extremes of temperature; feed on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet, linseed, and split groats, and on two other days each week give an equivalent quantity of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, dusted with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash, and finally sprinkled with maw seed. On each of the remaining days give a morsel of ripe banana, apple, or raw carrot. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice twice a week, and on three other days each week 20 drops of chemical food. Allow the bird to bathe freely, and anoint the bare place three times a week with fano-cyllin ointment; continue this treatment for a month or six weeks. It is not a wise plan to breed with these specimens.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Parrakeet with Broken Bill.

W.R.—Give this bird, till it can crack seed again, boiled maize, but as this only keeps fresh one day, only sufficient for the day's supply must be prepared at a time; boiled rice would also be appreciated, and if there should be any signs of constipation, a dozen drops of Dinneford's Magnesia over the maize will soon regulate matters. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, but you can give bread or toast moistened with chemical food and water in equal parts, which will not only be wholesome, but a useful tonic at the present juncture. Under the conditions you name, I should say the bird is in no danger, and if there was no bleeding, it should only be a matter of a few days before it is eating dry seed again—the latter should be supplied as usual. Kibbled oats will be very useful for a time. Supply the seed separated, do not mix it with the sopped food. It will be sufficient to merely crack the seed. The broken portion will be gradually renewed.

Another Feather Plucker.

N.J.C. — I certainly lay the onus on the table scraps. Every fourth day so long as the voidings are not watery-loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the daily supply of drinking water. Stop the table scraps, and diet as under: To your seed mixture add half its bulk of Canary and white millet seed; also supply ripe fruit ad lib, nuts, and plain biscuits, with grit, cuttlebone, and water. I expect as the bird has been accustomed to scraps, it will cry and sulk for them. You can get over this by having a little chemical food and water (equal parts) ready mixed to hand, and at meal times moisten a little biscuit, crust of dry toast, or plain cake therein, and the bird will soon become content with this. Yes, you can dust with pyrethrum powder, also spray with a weak solution of fir-tree oil once or twice weekly. If you discover any parasites, you must thoroughly scald out every part of the cage, including perches, utensils, etc; for it is no use clearing the bird while the pests harbour in the cage. Shall be pleased to hear how the bird progresses.

Finches and Tanagers.

F.W.S.—It is doubtful if Gouldians and Tanagers will agree for any length of time in the same cage, and it is a risky experiment. The diet for a superb Tanager is as follows:—Ripe fruit of all kinds ad lib; soft-food—a good one for Tanagers consists of equal parts of ants' eggs (free from rubbish), crumbled sponge cake, and crushed Osborne biscuit, made crumbly moist with boiling milk; also two or three mealworms per bird daily. I should cage the ailing Gouldian Finch up separately; your diet is about right, but you could try it with a little apple. For one day, in lieu of the ordinary water, give water 3 parts and Dinneford's magnesia 1 part, and repeat this after an interval of three days. On other days use the cold mixture as given below in the same proportions as the magnesia. Use crock or china drinkers when giving drugs. Cold mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine, in equal parts.

Identity of Weaver, etc.

Aviculturist.—I have not your previous query by me; will you kindly make a rough diagram, and write in the colours of bird? I can then settle the point. Half-masked is used in rather a loose way for any bird having the sides of the face black. Briefly, the half-masked is golden-yellow, washed with olivaceous, also streaked with dusky on the back; wings black with yellow margins; a back mask extends over the sides of the face, chin and front of throat; crown of head golden chestnut. I am inclined to think your Waxbills were troubled with constipation—again I incline to the opinion that you overdid the glycerine, and personally I do not care for the use of egg in such cases. For one day, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into an ordinary sized drinker. In case of a cold, in future use ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts. Supply this in lieu of the drinking water at a strength of three parts water to one part of the mixture. You can repeat the Dinneford's as necessary, so as to keep the bowels well regulated without looseness. After their breathing is all right again, then use the Chemical Food to tone them up. Give the Waxbills a mixture of moistened ants' eggs, crumbled sponge cake and biscuit, about equal parts of each.

Suggested Aviary or Cage.

D.W.—(1) It appears possible to me that you could build along either end, and that would be the cheapest method for you to pursue. Of course, if you cannot carry out the enclosed plan, you must of necessity fall back on the cage. (2) Unless you can supply a cage at least 8ft. long, I do not think it would be any use you putting the two pairs together, and save in a large aviary there would be a strong probability of them tearing each other to pieces when nesting. (3) There is just a possibility that they might do no harm for some time, and they probably would ignore the Budgerigars, but the Finches would come to grief sooner or later, and I cannot take the responsibility of advising you to make the attempt. (4) It would certainly be better to have a strong Parrot front made for the cage, though I have kept Ringnecks, etc., in an aviary enclosed with ordinary half-inch mesh netting.

A Bird-house (Geo. V.).—Your rough diagram appears all right, and should answer well enough for the outer shell, providing it is made wind and rain proof. As regard furnishings or adaptability, I cannot express an opinion without fuller details. Most certainly S.S.E. will be the best position.

Orange Hangnest (A. Huxtable).—Am inclined to think the bird is getting over fat. Cannot you let it have a fly round the room daily, or fairly often? I should give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in its drinking water every fourth day, for, say, four or five occasions. Diet:—Soft-food, a varied and unlimited supply of ripe fruit, and, say, about six mealworms daily, these can be supplemented with any beetles, earwigs, spiders, etc., you can capture. Crouching, etc., is its natural deportment. A little milk-sop (sloppy) is appreciated. The notes of its song (mostly heard in the summer), are broken and disjointed, but rich and full toned. Hookaree, hookaree, is a good representation of it, with others thrown in.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Burgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

A Virginian Nightingale (F.H.S.).—This is a hardy species, and except for needing a little care and extra attention for the first few weeks, will need no coddling, and when established, a cold room and wholesome food will be all it requires. But for a time it had better be in the living room, in a light and airy, but not draughty, position. Diet:—Canary, white millet, spray millet, also a coarser mixture of hemp, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; ripe fruit, greenfood, and some live insects; several mealworms per diem when others fail—but when procurable smooth caterpillars, beetles, cockroaches, spiders, etc. Grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing must be regularly supplied, and a few ants' eggs (as bought), will probably be appreciated.

Indoor Flight (Tom Smith).—Yes, you could keep two pairs in the cage, but of course as the young are able to feed themselves they would have to be moved to another flight of some kind. The chief difficulty you have to contend with will be the heat of the kitchen; if you care to keep this down low and well ventilated without draught, you should have good success. There has evidently been something wrong with the hen most of the year. I should advise procuring an odd adult hen, and then to procure another pair from some entirely different source; do not get the cheapest, buy the largest, tightest and best feathered birds you can procure. Weak, rough feathered specimens are not worth their keep. Hang up about four husks under the top of cage as far apart as possible.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A Seed Matter (Disappointed).—Am glad to have been of help to you. To get seed of the best quality, thoroughly cleaned, is one of the most important points in the successful keeping of any kinds of birds.

A Bullfinch (Novice).—The best advice I can give you is to send 2½d. to CAGE BIRDS office for the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with the Bullfinch. This will provide you with all the up-to-date information concerning feeding the Bullfinch to keep it in show condition, and give you a lot of other valuable hints besides.

Points of a Goldfinch (Spof).—The show standards of most birds are given in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. The Goldfinch standard of points is: Size 5, shape 20, head and blaze 20, wings 15, body (colour, etc.) 10, condition 20, steadiness 10; total, 100.

Hen Mules Singing (T. J.).—It is quite true that hen Goldfinch Mules sing; but it is a poor kind of ditty—disconnected, jerky, and not very loud notes. The cock, on the contrary, is a fine, loud songster, with a pleasant, sprightly mixture of Goldfinch and Canary notes. The hen is generally very pale in colour (unless a jonque hen) compared with the cock, showing little sign of "blaze," and but a trace of colour on the rump.

Mealy and Lesser Redpolls (Witty).—Both adult cock Mealies and Lessers acquire the red breast in the breeding season. The difference 'twixt the two species is very marked. The Mealy, for one thing, is two or three times as large as the Lesser (or looks it, anyway); further, the ground colour of its plumage is very light grey (almost white), whereas the Lesser is a brown-coloured bird.

Goes Over Backwards (J. R. Berwyn). It is not a case of fits, I fancy. You have got hold of a bird afflicted with the habit of "twirling" in a very bad form. I have occasionally seen both Mules and Goldfinches which throw themselves over backwards until they fall with a crash (more or less) into the cage bottom. There is no cure for such cases, in my opinion. Sometimes a spell in an aviary is beneficial; I have known it so in the case of a Bluefinch.

Hybrid Breeders: our back page will interest you.

Three Birds (In Doubt).—1. I should say that this is a hen Grey Wagtail. 2. The cock Lesser Whitethroat is paler (a purer white) in throat colour; in the breeding season he acquires a pale pink (rosy) flush on the breast. 3. These small spotted brownish softbills with the very pronounced rictal bristles (or whiskers, as you term them) are Spotted Flycatchers.

Value of Two Birds (J. Fulton).—It is really impossible to value any birds unless one can see them. You say your Bullfinch imitates a Starling; but the natural notes of the Bullie are of a very squeaky, jerky nature, and might well be thought to be imitations of some of the notes of the Starling. The Skylark ought to fetch 15s. to 20s. easily, if the grand, free songster you describe.

A Trio (F. Dodd).—1. The Mealy Redpolls caught in England are exactly the same as those "caught in Siberia" (or said to be). A very big, stout, well-marked bird can be shown anywhere with a reasonable chance of success. 2. It is a fact that the bills of both Redpolls and Siskins seldom moult out well—that is, so large and dense in colour as they were when the birds were in field plumage. 3. If your bird has the hind claw longer than the toe itself, and almost straight, it is a Meadow Pipit (or Tit Lark, another name for this bird). If the claw is moderately long (shorter than the hind toe), and perceptibly curved, it is a Tree Pipit.

A Quintette (Only 15).—1. If a big Mealy Redpoll can be got to breed it is better than a Lesser for muling purposes; but my own experience is that they are extremely doubtful breeders. 2. Any Redpoll (Lesser or Mealy) which has a red breast is a certain cock. 3. Under some circumstances it is a distinct advantage to mue a would-be muling pair together through the winter. 4. Redpoll Mules (from the Lesser Redpoll and hen Canary) are easy to breed, but are not (unless good show specimens) of much value. 5. Under a competent judge the best specimen of its particular kind would win—a big, fine coloured Blackbird always stands an excellent chance of winning.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Several Matters (W. F. Wilbee).—Your Nightingale may not sing out for a month or two yet; all 'Gales have periods of silence, especially in the winter—in fact, not many English Nightingales sing much during the winter months. There are bright exceptions, such as one grand bird I once owned myself. 1.—The hen is smaller than the cock, and much more shy and retiring in manner; she lacks the bold look, strut and swagger of her lord and master. She is paler in colour; but the difference is hardly perceptible to an inexperienced eye. 2.—Feed on a first-class insectile food (about 1s. 6d. a pound), and give a few gentles now and again, and one or two mealworm. 3.—About the end of February or beginning of March. 4.—Pea-meal is no sort of food for a Nuthatch. Give the same quality insectile food as you supply to the 'Gale; with a little live food and some sunflower seed daily. The hen is appreciably duller in colour all over than her mate.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects to post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

...R. Jack.—I am afraid your cage is at fault and should advise you to thoroughly disinfect it before future use. The lungs were the principal seat of disease having the characters of a contagious pneumonia. If your ailing bird is still alive (which I should think doubtful) I should isolate it and give it night and morning for a week five grains of carbonate of ammonia in its drinking water, to which a little simple syrup may be added to sweeten. The seeds I examined and found quite wholesome.

...Blue Tack.—Exhaustion and depletion arising from the presence of worms in the intestines producing gastric irritation and indigestion. You should have consulted me as to treatment; possibly your bird might have been saved.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Photograph (D. Black).—Thanks for the photograph, which we will reproduce in the near future. May you breed many more as good.

A C.B.U. Matter (W. R. Everett).—The C.B.U. suspensions apply only to open shows held under Union rules; the suspended member's status in his own Club or Society is not affected.

"Honour Where Honour is Due" (J. W. Gillard).—We are making enquiries into this matter, and will deal with it next week. We fear that the error is one for which we ourselves have to plead guilty.

My Feathered Pets (H. V. Davy).—Thanks for this chatty and informative contribution, which we shall have pleasure in publishing in the near future.

Newly Imported Grey Parrots (M. Handley).—These are advertised in our columns from time to time by various dealers (when a supply comes to hand). The price varies, according to scarcity or otherwise. It is against the rules to recommend any special advertiser.

Railway Consignment Notes (J. Kay).—Thanks for your letter, but we understand that the railway companies will not accept live birds unless their own particular consignment notes are filled up by the senders. Is not this so?

A Suggestion for Plates (E. Field).—We are afraid we could not again reproduce the painting of the Blackbird. Your suggestion shall receive consideration, however; and with regard to the other picture, we will try to give this next season. Thanks for your letter.

Our Painting Competition (C. E. Isaac).—We cannot divulge the names of the birds represented on our frontispiece of last week. To guess them correctly is part of the competition. It is not "waste of time to paint the birds wrong"; this point we should only take into consideration if necessary to decide between two otherwise equal efforts.

Three Questions (Ferret).—1. We believe 100 degrees, or thereabouts. 2. We should say that the Budgerigar would take heating as the "most prolific breeder in cage or aviary." 3. Greenfinches will breed in either closed or open aviaries (properly fitted ones, of course); many hen Greenies breed very readily in captivity.

The Crossbill.

By H. J. FULLJAMES.

Among the British birds which are but infrequently seen upon the show-bench must be numbered the Crossbill (Loxia curvirostra), and the reasons are not far to seek. It must be admitted that, excepting from an avicultural point of view, the bird has little to recommend its being kept in captivity, and it has many properties detrimental to its possession by an ordinary cage-bird lover. Certainly, an adult fresh-caught male, with its bright rose-coloured body plumage, and its blackish wings and tail, presents a certain amount of beauty, but this, its only attraction, is but transient, for with a cage-moult the red plumage is replaced by a dingy yellowish green, which is far from being beautiful. The extraordinary formation of beak which gives the bird its name amounts to quite a deformity in the eyes of those who, while they may have full appreciation of the wise provision of Nature which has endowed the bird with the most effective means of extracting the kernels of the pine cones which abound in its homes, the forests, yet would take no pleasure in the possession of a bird furnished with a beak which is totally different from that of any other British bird. Further, it must be a very strong cage that will resist the constant endeavours of these birds to splinter every piece of wood that will yield to the attacks of their powerful mandibles.

Exhibiting and Feeding.

If taken from the nest and hand-reared, they grow up entirely without fear of their owner, and except for their destructiveness make very interesting pets, but such birds never come into the colour proper to an adult Crossbill. The one or two Crossbills which are all that I have had in my possession have been adult-caught cocks, and as wild as Hawks, and the little experience I have had with them is to the full as much as I have wished. A cock Crossbill in full wild colour has a fair chance of success on the show-bench in a mixed class, and this is the only recommendation I can give the bird. Excepting for exhibition purposes it is not worth the trouble of keeping.

In captivity they may be fed upon almost any kind of grain, nuts (cracked), apple-cores, hawthorn, and other berries, etc. In nature they are undoubtedly partially insectivorous, and in captivity they will generally enjoy an occasional mealworm. A supply of ripe fir cones will afford them occupation other than that of tearing their cage to pieces.

Although Crossbills are annual migrants to this country, arriving in the summer and departing in spring, they would seem to be capricious in their coming and going, while many remain with us to breed. Sometimes they visit us in very large numbers, the flocks running into hundreds, while in other years they are scarcely to be seen. Similarly, in some years they are reported as breeding in numbers in parts of the Continent where they have long been unknown. (In 1909 they were so present in Switzerland). In early times records of their remaining with us to nest were infrequent, but latterly they have been found breeding here in many counties. In 1910 they nested to quite a usual extent in the south-eastern counties, where as a rule they are somewhat rare. Their presence is not welcomed by apple growers, for the birds destroy an enormous number simply to get at the pips, although it is said that they will not do this to any great extent so long as they can obtain the seeds of pines, firs, or larches, which are their natural food.

On the Continent the bird ranges in Europe from the extreme north to the south, and is found in many parts of Asia. In fact, it may be said to be the most travelled of all birds, being continually on the move in search of food from one country to another, remaining to breed anywhere at random, so long as sustenance for itself and young may be found in the neighbourhood.

Some Relatives.

Closely allied to the common Crossbill are the Two-barred Crossbill (Loxia bifasciata) and the White-winged Crossbill (Loxia leucoptera), and considerable difference of opinion exists as to whether these are entitled to separate names. Seebohm, for instance, suggests that "they are better treated as local races of a common species." He does not agree with some of the alleged differences of plumage. He says there is no difference in the white edging of the tail feathers as pointed out by some ornithologists, nor is there, he says, any difference in the forking of the tail, although he agrees that the scapulars and the middle of the back of the European birds are dark red with brown centres, but are nearly uniform dark brown in American examples.

In the chapter on the American White-winged Crossbill, Yarrell says: "It is not impossible that a specimen or more of American origin may have been among those White-winged Crossbills that have occurred in this country without being subjected to the eye of a critical ornithologist." Later, he quotes a statement that "great numbers of this kind of Crossbill have been noticed crossing the Atlantic." In the description of the plumage he says that the American bird scarcely ever has any light edging to the tail feathers, but that in the White-winged Crossbill of the Old World (the Two-barred) this character is usually "very conspicuous."

Writing on the Two-barred Crossbill (L. bifasciata), the same authority says that "the instances in which the present form can be confidently stated to have occurred in Britain amount to about half a dozen, but in some of them small flocks were noticed, so that considerably more than that number of specimens has been obtained," and he goes on to mention several instances covering the period between 1802 and 1868, amongst them being a case in which one hen was shot out of a flock of about fifteen appearing in Cumberland in 1845, saying, further, that "at least nine more were obtained in the neighbourhood, either at the same time or in the following year." In a foot-note he names ten occasions on which "White-winged" Crossbills are said to have occurred "without the distinction between the Nearctic and Palaearctic forms being observed or capable of later determination." After discussing points of difference which "are rather minute," this authority writes: "The more constant differences may be summed up. The bird of the Old World (the Two barred) is very decidedly the larger . . . and the scapulars and feathers of the middle of the back are much more broadly tipped and edged with brown or red . . . its feathers seldom lose their light markings . . . while the American bird is almost as seldom seen possessing them."

In respect of the Two-barred Crossbill being entitled to the designation "European," Yarrell says that although it has been known on the European part of the Continent, it is more properly an Asiatic bird, it being especially abundant in Siberia, its habitat reaching through Manchuria right to the Pacific Ocean.

To refer individually to the Crossbill now being exhibited by Mr. Frostick, I will begin by stating that my personal experience of either one or the other species is limited to this one particular bird. I had, however, in my mind that the wing of this bird differed from my recollection of representations I had seen of the Two barred Crossbill, and at the show I made for my own information a pencil sketch of the wing of Mr. Frostick's bird, giving especial attention to the very distinct white tips to the tertiary feathers, which I did not think existed in the Two-barred species.

On reference to the coloured plates in Morris's "British Birds," I found that my sketch agreed very closely with the drawing in that work of the American White-winged Crossbill, and was entirely dissimilar to that of the Two-barred; hence my note. I made copies of the wing and tail of both species as figured, and if the plates are correct I think there is little doubt that Mr. Frostick's bird is not the Two-barred, but the American White-winged Crossbill. It may be as well to mention that Morris's illustration is from a coloured drawing by Mrs. H. E. Strickland, daughter of the celebrated naturalist, Sir Wm. Jardine, and may be presumed to be somewhat authoritative. I would apologise for the crudeness of my rough copies, but I trust they will prove sufficiently clear to show the differences spoken of.

BIRD LIFE IN THE FAR WEST OF CANADA.

By ROBT. CUMMING (late of Ayr.)

SIR,—My arrival here (Vancouver, British Columbia) concurred with the coming of the Swallow and the Bluebird. The wet season is now at an end, and the sun shines in his glory from a cloudless sky. The birds, of which there are not too many (but they are increasing with the developments of agriculture), are all amove, enjoying as much as I am the warm breezes from the Southern States. The chirping Sparrow tries his cheery little song, perched, perhaps, on the burned-out stump of a cedar tree; he serenades his little brown mate in the salmon berry bushes below, only leaving it to feed or to drive intruders from the vicinity which will be his haunt during the coming breeding season. In a fir tree near by a pair of American Robins have built their nest of straw and clay, and have now, from four blue eggs, reared a hungry though healthy brood of speckled youngsters, which by this time will have moulted into their adult plumage, and are, perhaps, practising their love affairs, as most birds do in autumn; so that next spring they may be able to compete with older birds in the selecting of a mate. This "Blue Robin," as it is called, is the size and shape of an English Blackbird, the tail only differing, it being shorter. But the habits are those of the Blackbirds. What an imposing sight he makes, as he works his way along the garden fence, his red breast, black head and nape, with a dark slate-coloured back, showing up well against the dense shrubbery! Now he is on the lawn, his tail cocked up and his wings drooping—a long run and a stop to listen, and up comes a worm from the now hard-baked ground. On our disturbing him, off he goes, with the same cry—half protest and half fear—the very same cry that we so often hear in the "Old Country" lanes. But it is only to be back the minute the intruder has gone, for once a Robin has taken up his beat for the season he never goes far afield. His food consists mainly of grubs and insects, berries of various sorts, including those of the mountain ash, which, growing very plentifully here, are partaken of later in the year. In the month of April there are still plenty of last season's berries left on the trees, so I do not think the Robins eat as many berries of the mountain ash as is generally supposed. What a cheery little bird is the Redpoll! A few of these are feeding on a clump of withered plantain stalks. Every now and again one leaves the flock, only to alight on the nearest tree, and, after a spell of twittering and tweezing, accompanied with a jaunty movement of its body, return to join the busy little flock. The Redpoll here is not far apart from the Lesser Redpoll, size and colour being much the same, and the feeding much the same. Most of the wild seeds here are the same as in England. Greater plantain is very common; the stalks grow often two feet long, and are loaded with a heavy crop of seeds. Thistles of four or five varieties are very plentiful, the Scotch thistle being the commonest—in fact, too common, almost bordering on a plague. There is ample room here for the importation of a few English "Goldies." What a welcome addition it would be to the wild-bird life! With their cheery song and charming ways they long ago won my heart. Burns described the Goldie well when he referred to him as "The Goldspink, Nature's gayest child." What a lover of nature the poet was! We have a Goldfinch here, whose colouring is a beautiful blending of black and yellow, and whose habits resembles those of the British bird. The male bird has a body colour of bright yellow, with black wings and blaze. He is stouter built than his English cousin. His movements as he opens the thistle tops are not so sprightly, nor is his song so sweet. Still, he is a true "Goldie" out and out, and, I believe, would interbreed readily with the British bird. Two broods of five or six are reared each year, most of which reach maturity. These birds are increasing very rapidly. Great flocks mostly in the Greypate stage, are now feeding on the thistles, which are making uninterrupted progress on the vacant lots of land that are held by speculative proprietors, who care little for the interests of the neighbouring ranchers. When the gentle breeze stirs these thistles, on a warm, late summer day, great clouds of down, each bearing its seed, rise, and are carried all over the country, perhaps alighting many miles away.

Correspondence.

A Hint to Societies in the Liverpool District.

SIR, I should like to ask, through the columns of your valuable paper, the various societies in Liverpool, Birkenhead, Wallasey, Bootle, and other districts, if they do not consider it would be worth their while to advertise their shows of Canaries, etc? Quite recently, to the writer's knowledge, upwards of thirty novices had not heard of these shows until after they had been held. Surely a small advert in CAGE BIRDS would not affect their finances, but rather benefit them. Now, gentlemen, let us know when these shows are coming off, unless you desire to hold them "in camera," and go backwards instead of forwards.

NOVICE.

A Cage Maker's Name Wanted.

SIR,—May I be permitted to ask through the columns of CAGE BIRDS if any reader can tell me the name of the maker of a hanging Canary cage similar to one I possess? I have studied several lists of bird cages and have not found one anything like it. The cage is 12 by 9 inches, is made of tinned wire run through round tinned punched bars. The stand, which is metal, is painted to imitate mahogany, and has four feet. The cage is easily removed from the top. The sand tray and the bottom of the cage are also removable. The whole can be taken to pieces, thoroughly washed, and replaced in a few minutes. It may be a very old-fashioned pattern, as the one I have was given to me, and was apparently very old then, but cleaned up like new; and it is very easy to keep clean.

M. LATHAM.

Wrong Classed at the L.C.B.A. Show.

SIR,—I made three entries at the L.C.B.A. show in Yorkshires, one buff cock, one yellow marked cock, and one clear yellow hen. My buff cock got first, my yellow cock third, my yellow hen "W.C." As soon as I knew what had taken place, I wrote to Messrs. Mugford and Tyson, asking those gentlemen why this bird was wrong classed, also telling them that I had bred youngsters from this hen. I also told them that if they liked to detain this hen for any further examination they could do so. They received my letter before the birds left the show. They did not trouble to answer my letter. So I wrote to Judge Battye to know his reason. After a rambling statement he said this yellow hen (which it is) was a buff cock. Now Judge Robson judged this bird at Southend open show in a yellow hen class of 17, and I took second prize. Now Mr. Robson was at this show, and several other fanciers, and from what I can hear they could not understand why this bird was put out. This is the point: One out of these two judges is wrong. It is evident that one of the two doesn't know a yellow hen from a buff cock.

A. NICHOLLS.

Liverpool O.S. and the Cage Bird Union.

SIR,—Herewith is a copy of the resolution sent on to Mr. Lythgoe from the Liverpool Ornithological Society.

J. W. METCALFE, Hon. Sec.
15.12.'10.

MR. LYTHGOE,

DEAR SIR,—Your letter of the 5th inst. was put before our members to-night, and they came to the following resolution unanimously: "That in view of Rule 22, the members of this society cannot remain affiliated to the C.B.U."

Yours faithfully.
JOHN W. METCALFE.

SIR,—You will no doubt receive for publication simultaneously with this a communication giving notice of a resolution passed at a recent meeting of the Liverpool Ornithological Society, which arose out of a circular letter from the secretary of the Cage Bird Union, containing a request for any suggestions as to alteration of the rules of the Union. I should like, for the information of the Fancy in general, to give the reasons which induced my society to adopt the peremptory attitude which they thought most fitting to the occasion. This society was formed initially with one main object in view, viz., "To run an annual all-England cage-bird show, which should be worthy of association with so important a city," and the opinion on the measure of success or otherwise which we have attained in this direction we are willing to leave to the verdict of all those who have supported us or attended our show. Our society, however, has from the commencement laboured under great disadvantage solely through being affiliated to the C.B.U. Our membership is 24, and the greater proportion are members of the Green Canary Association, and exhibit weekly throughout the show season. Last year several shows which had the G.C.A. competition were non-union shows, and under Rule 22 of the C.B.U. our members could not show in their specialist club competitions without risk of suspension. As a consequence all these members resigned (pro. tom.). To obviate a recurrence a resolution was passed at one of our meetings and forwarded to the secretary of the C.B.U. asking that it should be made lawful for a member of a specialist club to show at a non-union show in his specialist club's classes. Our society also sent a delegate to the Union's meeting at Leicester to put forward our views on this question, and to point out the serious disability which arose to our members out of Rule 22. The answer we got to that, if I remember rightly, was a modification or addition to Rule 4, making it impossible to terminate membership of the Union without giving three calendar months' previous notice. This is the treatment and benefit the L.O.S. has received from the Union. Having specially put our views on the rules as affecting our members before the C.B.U., we came to the conclusion that it was sheer waste of time again approaching them on the matter, with the result that, rules or no rules, we now consider ourselves outside the pale of the C.B.U. So much for my society. I will now speak for myself. I was pleased to see your letter to Mr. Lythgoe in last week's "C.B.," and am sure you are conferring a great benefit on the Fancy in bringing the matter as regards C.B.U. members showing at undicensed shows to a head. It appears to me that the Union does not confer the benefits on its members which a perusal of its rules would lead one to expect. Take Rule 10. I should like to ask Mr. Lythgoe whether or not he considers it advisable to publish for the information of C.B.U. members and secretaries of societies the names of suspended members? If not, how can secretaries refuse entries from such, and in what way are members punished if their suspension is through this cause inoperative? If one member is suspended why is he singled out and all others who have similarly transgressed allowed to escape? Is it lawful for delegates to break the rules and not ordinary members? If the Union is to exercise control in the Fancy, why doesn't it enforce its rules? Can it? I don't think so. Personally I fail to see in what way since its inception the Union has justified its existence. Last year's balance-sheet shows a contribution from the Fancy in subscriptions and license fees of £63 odd. Have the Fancy had value for their money? I think not. Can Mr. Lythgoe tell me why a fancier should support one or two local societies which are affiliated to the Union when it is to his interests as an exhibitor to be a member of none? It appears to me the Union is not run for the benefit of its members; if so, why are the latter not informed through the Fancy Press of all its proceedings? From the beginning Rule (now) 22 has been a stumbling block, and my opinion is that if the Union can only exist by retaining this rule instead of relying for its existence on the benefits which it confers on its members, the sooner the Union goes the better. I am strongly in favour of a controlling body, but let it be efficient. If it can't enforce its rules, how can it expect its members to observe them? Those who would wish to preserve the Union now is the time to act. My choice would be to make it (without Rule 22) or break it. Which is it to be?

A Disappearing Bird Trick.

SIR,—During last week a music hall artist, by name of Carl Hertz, has been performing at the Preston Hippodrome a trick called the disappearing bird and cage. He has been challenged to do this with a bird belonging to a local bird dealer, as the dealer maintains he must kill or injure the bird. The performer accepts the challenge and agrees to give a large sum of money to charities if he fails. Now I and many other local fanciers term this simply an advertising dodge, and we are writing you to ask if any of your readers in other towns have seen the same kind of procedure in their neighbourhood. What makes it look more flagrant, the challenger threatens all sorts of dire penalties if he should hurt the bird.

"CODDEM."

[We have seen the trick referred to performed by Carl Hertz (who is a very clever and entertaining illusionist). Advertisement, it has been said, is the breath of life to those who get their living on the stage; hence, no doubt, the Preston "advertising dodge." This "disappearing bird and cage" is a remarkable and puzzling feat; we can commend it to "Coddem" and his friends as well worth seeing. Another little advertisement this (is it not?) for Carl Hertz!—EDITOR.]

Specials at Alnwick Show.

SIR—At the above show, held Nov. 16th, I won 2nd and 3rd in the Small Softbill Class, but as there was one entry short I received half prize money. I entered the two for the purpose of running for the special prize also, which I claimed, as I had 4 points more than anyone else. The Secretary then wrote and informed me that the specials were not for most points, which I would see if I read schedule. Now I perused my schedule again, and I found on one page a "Special Prize List," which gave specials for 30 classes. It does not say whether these specials are for best bird or most points, but Rule XIII. on next page says: "Points to count for specials as follows—1st 7, 2nd 6, 3rd 5," etc., etc. Now I think this is plain enough to anyone that the specials are for most points. The Secretary informs me, however, that this rule applies to the "Extra Special Prize List," and not the "Special List." I fail to see how this can be, however, as in the Extra Special list it distinctly says in some classes for best bird and others for most points! The rule also says, "Points to count for specials" (not extra specials, as the Secretary says). Now I should like to know what the special sare for, and if for best bird, why don't they say so, and not have their rules so that they can be construed any way they wish. I am not writing this for the value of the special, but had it said the specials were for best bird, I should have sent only one in that class, and I wish societies would stick to their rules and make them so they could be understood.

A Border Fancy Enthusiast of Northumberland.

SIR,—One of the pleasantest days in my birdy experience was recently spent at Newbiggin-by-the-Sea. Having a fancy to see for myself a whole birdroom full of Border Fancy Canaries, I took train for Newbiggin, and landed in a quiet, but growing, village on the bleak east coast of Northumberland. Here the biting north-east and east winds seem to pierce one's overcoat, and cause a chill to run through one's whole body. I looked around the station, then enquired for Mr. Joseph Graham. I was glad to see him answer my rather nervous knock. "Hello, Mr. ——. Come in; come right into the birdroom." He led the way. What a surprise: One hundred and forty Borders, cinnamons, cinnamon marks, dark marks, and clears—buff and yellow—all cinnamon bred, and not a poor looking bird in the place. Mr. Graham quickly got to work, and with show cage in one hand and stick in the other, he coaxed and guided for my inspection some rare specimens. I could not but admire the cautious movements of the master with his birds. Fearless little birds, that responded with a chirp to the kindly, "Come on now" order to get in and show. I'm just afraid my questions were many, and as Mr. Graham did not at all know of my intention, he would think I was an inquisitive visitor. "How many pairs had you up?" was the first.—"Fourteen pairs, but I unfortunately lost three hens, leaving me eleven; still I have reared 96 young ones." Among these I saw five lovely even-marks, "I do not care a deal for clears," says Mr. G.; "I breed for marks, and think they are lovely." I agreed. They were lovely. This year's breeding comprised many nice young birds. Mr. G. thought the set back end in the North had retarded the moult a little, and some birds were not quite up. This year's wins covered Morpeth, Blaydon, Newcastle, Ashington, etc. Many others I could describe but I must not trespass on your space. Mr. G. has been a fancier for five years only, but he said. "I began with rockbottom stock, something to build upon, and this is the result." A knock at the door, and a fine healthy boy of 12 years announced that some tea was ready. It's good money backing a birdy man for treating you well! I had a nice tea—such a tea as the North Country people are used to. Mrs. Graham, stout, happy-looking (like a good all round Norwich) made one comfortable and welcome. She is a lover of birds, frequently accompanying her husband to the shows—and joined in the conversation, but both agreed that the boy was "father's right-hand man." With some timidity—he had a false idea that I could sketch better than he—little Joe showed me some sketches (coloured) of winning Borders. They were a credit to his 12 years, and augur well for the future. Our judges would not be criticised so much to-day had they learned the art of sketching in their young days. My time flew much too fast. Trains will not wait. A hasty good-bye; then the motion of the train, and I am homeward bound.

AN ADMIRER.

The New Vale of Leven Cage Bird Society.

SIR,—At a meeting held in the school room, Alexandria, on Dec. 16th, it was unanimously decided to form the above-named Cage Bird Club. The following appointments were made: Mr. J. Hannah, president; Mr. J. W. Bell, vice president; Mr. A. H. McLean, Hon. Sec. and Treas.; Committee, Messrs. J. Campbell, H. Scott, A. Thom, A. Clemson, J. McEwen, J. Barker, J. White, J. McKindy, J. Liles, W. Gibb, P. Abraham, M. McEwan, J. Walker, J. McCready, and J. Guthrie. It was agreed that the club shall be confined to a radius of eight miles, that meetings be held monthly at which lectures, etc., be given. The annual subscription is 2s. 6d. The President, Messrs. McEwan and Campbell, and the Hon. Sec. were appointed to draw up rules to be submitted at next meeting to be held in school room, Susannah Street, Alexandria, on Dec. 27th, at 8 p.m., to which all persons interested in the Fancy are invited.

Proposed New C.B.S. for Radcliffe and District.

SIR,—Will you kindly permit me space in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to call the attention of all local fanciers in Radcliffe and district to the fact that there will be a meeting at the Bridge Inn on December 27th, for the purpose of forming a new club.

Prize-cards Which Are Not Returned.

SIR,—Under "Twitterings" on December 18 I noticed a few words from Mr. Etherington, stating how he had been treated by a person to whom he sent a prize-card respecting some Norwich he had for sale. The same treatment has fallen to my lot, by a fancier at Chatham. I sent on approval the Goldfinch, 2nd Ludlow, which was returned, without the prize-card. Although I have written a few times for this card, I can get no reply. So I wish to inform fanciers buying a Goldfinch with that prize-card to be careful, because although the bird is now sold, it has not gone from this district. This letter, I trust, will enable the person referred to to return the prize-card; or else I will send on his name in my next letter to CAGE BIRDS.

Yorkshire Novice Classes at Blackburn Show.

SIR,—In the schedule of Blackburn Show is a rule which reads: "A novice is one who has not won one first in open, or three firsts in novice classes." Now, on opening my catalogue, I noticed an exhibitor in the prize list in the Yorkshire novice classes who has no right to compete in these classes, he having won more than the specified number of firsts allowed. Blackburn is not the only show where this has been done, and I think it ought to be stopped. It is a very mean thing to do. The worst of it is, you don't get your catalogue in time to send in an objection. If ever I happen to be at a show where this rule exists, and where this fraud is going on, I shall certainly put the necessary money down and object, just to teach some of these grab-alls a lesson.

FAIR PLAY.

A Yorkshire Incident at the City and Suburban Show.

SIR,—May we thank Mr. P. Mason through your columns for his kindness to us when he objected to our Clear Buff Yorkshire at the City and Suburban A.C.B. show. Not only did he harm us by objecting, but he detained us from exhibiting at the L.C.B.A. show, which meant a lot to us. We may say we have not bought an exhibition Yorkshire this season. We also wonder if he thinks Southerners cannot breed a good Buff, or whether he doesn't like to see working men take premier honours.

HAWES BROS.

[We presume the incident referred to by Messrs. Hawes Bros. is that mentioned by the secretary of the City and Suburban Society in the club report published on page 524 last week. Mr. Mason, on a visit to the show in question, seems to have said that a Yorkshire Canary being exhibited by Messrs. Hawes Bros. was one he had that week given first to at Wimbledon show, and which was claimed by Messrs. Hawes Bros., who afterwards, by request, let the original owner have it back again. All birds at the City shows have to be bred by exhibitors, hence the trouble. Messrs. Hawes Bros. were exonerated by the C. and S. A.C.B. officials.—EDITOR.]

Who is Auld Reekie?

SIR,—I was greatly surprised while travelling from the West to Edinburgh on Saturday morning to discover, on perusal of my birdy paper, CAGE BIRDS, reference made to me therein. On first reading I felt greatly insulted and decided to take no notice thereof. But on second thoughts I felt extremely sorry for the recipient of the small token which apparently has caused wondering amazement to some members of the Edinburgh N.C. and M.B. Society, but I sincerely trust I have caused no feeling or friction towards the exhibitor or amongst the membership. With reference to the sarcastic and unfancierlike remarks of "Seeker after Truth," I would suggest to him that he should again peruse my letter to the secretary, wherein he will find the phraseology employed is in keeping with the spirit which prompted the act, and not as construed by "Seeker after Truth"; further, he will also discover I did not state I was not aware of the successful exhibitor's "name," which I did know after the purchase of a second catalogue; my first purchase being somewhat mixed in the compiling. I should also like to point out, what I thought I had made sufficiently explicit previously, that while I greatly admired the gem which carried off the laurels, in sending the secretary the gold medal, the exhibitor would be in possession of a token which marked the fact that he had at least had the valuable treasure, "the cup," one year in his possession. With reference to my anonymous name and modesty, so poetically described, I sometimes think I belong to a class which is not credited with a great deal, namely a "suffragette." I regret I cannot divulge my identity on account of my capacity, and probably if I could some might think I had an axe to grind as member of the fair sex. It was my intention at your next exhibition to forward your secretary three gold medals to accompany each of the handsome cups of your society, but since I have been subjected to this unfair and insinuating treatment, I shall reserve my little tokens for my new friends in the sunny south, where I hope to be installed by Christmastide.

AULD REEKIE.

Cats ! ! !

SIR,—I greatly regret to say that my bird-room was entered by cats on Tuesday evening, December 13th, and they killed 24 of my best birds, 14 cocks and 10 hens, all Norwich Plainheads. As I am only a working man this is a terrible loss to me, as they were birds I had selected for next year's breeding. It only leaves me with two yellow cocks and 12 hens out of about 40 birds.

M. H. QUINCE.

Borders at Liverpool Show.

SIR,—Seeing "North Country Type" declines to disclose his identity and also evades the main point at issue, and can only indulge in writing such childish prattle, I must ignore any more of his letters. However, I should like to tell him I did not ask him the question in the first instance, so, when he has a few moments of solitude to spare, he might give serious thought to what "Robbie Burns" once said: "Oh wad some power the giftie gie us, To see oursels as others see us, It wad fra many a 'blunder' free us, and foolish notion."

[This matter is now closed.—EDITOR.]

A New Society for Cowdenbeath and District.

SIR,—The meeting held here for the purpose of forming a Cage Bird Society was in every way successful. There was a good turnout of fanciers, and a number could not get there owing to business, but they intimated their intention to join. It was also stated that three trophies would be presented to the society for annual competition. The show date was fixed for November 18th, 1911. The following office bearers were appointed: President, Insp. John Mitchell; vice-president, J. Simpson; sec., Joseph R. Reid, 172, West Broad Street; treas., Alex. Beveridge; auditors, John C. Murray and James Petrie. Also agreed, that the committee be elected at next meeting, to be held in the Raith Arms Inn (Brungans) on January 18th, at 7 p.m. We appeal to all fanciers who have not joined yet to come in and help us.

JOSEPH R. REID.

Alleged Stained Linnets at York Show.

SIR,—Let me take this opportunity of saying I have used no slur on, or against, Mr. Nicholson, and I hope no one will put any such construction to any of my letters. In all my life I have never stooped to such a mean practice. Nor have I tried to make readers think anything but what I have said is true. As for trying to make anyone think I referred to the York Show bench.—No, no. The officials at York would not allow such a thing if they knew it. Mr. N. has said some rather nasty things about us, but we don't mind in the least. I think Mr. N. has admitted the truth of my statement, and how he can read anything about the show bench or being disqualified into any of my letters I don't know, because I never thought such a thing. I hope I have made my point clear that "50 miles was a long way to travel to see an alleged stained bird," etc. I am rather sorry he has reminded me I was in the chair, for right well did I know it. This was the first time all the years I have been in the Fancy (to use his own words) I shuffled; and I did that night, and have done since, to excuse myself for allowing such a lecture. In conclusion let me make it quite plain to all readers of CAGE BIRDS that no thought has ever entered my head of trying to brand anyone as a faker until he has been tried and found guilty. Mr. Nicholson says nothing about our wounded feelings, and the unfounded statements made against York and its exhibitors, but if he feels at all grieved at anything I have said, I ask him to at once dispel it from his mind. I wish him and CAGE BIRDS and all its readers a Merry Christmas and bright and prosperous New Year.

A. RICHARDSON.

Hens that Resemble Cocks.

The Sex Problem.

SIR,—I have read with very great interest the latter of Messrs. J. N. and J. Jeffery concerning Norwich hens wrong classed at the recent Paignton Show, which recalls to my mind a similar experience, which perhaps you may deem sufficiently interesting to submit to your many readers. In 1907, amongst other Plainheads bred, we had a clear buff, which for type, size, etc., gave every promise of being a topper, and in addition the colour stood out so, even in nest feather, that we accepted the youngster from one month old as being a cock. With the completion of the moult we saw no reason to alter our opinion that we had a topper and a cock, even though it had not occurred to us that the bird was not given overmuch to singing. However, our friends at Dulwich were offering "all prizes and no blanks," at their coming show in October, and we decided this particular bird should make his debut under Mr. W. Vardy, and he was duly entered as a 1907 clear buff cock. To our keen disappointment he returned without a card. The result of our private inquiry (which was within the four walls of the birdroom) resulted in our entering the bird as a hen at the Plymouth Show, because we agreed that though the bird ought to be a cock, according to colour, yet the fact of the bird not singing, though in lovely condition, enabled us to persuade ourselves it must be a hen, for I would remind you we could not agree it was a hen upon any other point, and I can see my partner shaking his head at the Plymouth prospect under Mr. C. A. House, which indicated that we should be branded a couple of "rushers" for trying to capture the hen class with a cock. Evidently Mr. House believed us, for he awarded the bird 1st and special in a hot class, and nothing nasty appeared in the subsequent reports, which eased our consciences not a little, for the responsibility was now on three pairs of shoulders. The bird was then awarded 2nd at Cheltenham, under Mr. J. H. Payne, in a class of yellow or buff hens. Upon our visiting this show we found that Messrs. J. Houghton, Stephenson, and other well-known Gloucester Plainhead breeders were of the opinion that the bird was a cock, and I might mention that we had not referred in any way to our little skeleton in the cupboard. That the bird had been well examined was evidenced by the few feathers missing, but nothing conclusive was arrived at, or else their good natures would not allow them to proceed further in the matter. The next judge to be tempted was Mr. J. Robson, who awarded the bird 1st in the finest class of yellow and buff hens it was our lot to see, at the L.C.B.A. Show at the Horticultural Hall, and no comment reached our ears as to doubting the sex. The 1908 breeding season duly arrived, and though the bird was not so lady-like in her ways as we should like to see, we nevertheless introduced her to a grand partner, a ticked yellow cock, and they promptly fought, and were still at it for a week. We then tried another cock; result, another week of fighting. Again my partner shook his head, and, as a last resource, I tried another yellow cock, whom she received in her most graceful style, and promptly went to nest, proving to be the mother of four youngsters that season. Can anyone, after the foregoing, wonder at our calling her the "Temptress"? In a general way colour, I think, can be taken as a fair index to sex, but I would not care to go so far as friend Pope is alleged to have gone, by stating that "colour was the only safe guide in sexing Norwich." In mating for colour it often happens that this desirable feature is vested in only one or two of the progeny, perhaps only one, and this to an almost abnormal degree. This being so, what is to prevent it coming a hen's way? Whether Messrs. Jeffery's bird is a cock or hen may be impossible to satisfactorily clear up at present, but having seen the bird at the recent Cardiff Show, I can at least congratulate them on breeding so good a bird, and I wish them further good luck.

The Y.C.C. of Ireland Election of Officers.

SIR,—In reference to the report of the election of officers, etc., at the "annual general meeting of the Y.C.C. of Ireland," would you kindly allow me to inform those who have read it that I am not even a member of the club, and that my "election" was utterly illegal. As a matter of fact, I have received no official intimation of my so-called election and have no intention (and never had) of having anything whatsoever to do with the club.

A West Country Belgian Canary.

SIR,—Allow me to thank you for the great honour you did me by depicting my cup winning Belgian in your most valuable paper. I would like to mention that the same bird won two firsts and specials at Edinburgh open show, and I think he is the best Belgian I have had the luck to breed. I bred him from the first prize Buff cock at Barnstaple show and a good stock hen. From my own experience I can say you are more likely to breed winners from this way of mating than from two show birds. I would also like to give you a little account of the management of my stud of Belgians. I always keep them in a cold room and feed them on good Spanish canary seed and good fresh egg food daily. In the breeding season I let them rear their own youngsters. For feeding I give Spanish canary seed, crushed hemp seed and egg food; and for green food I give watercress, dandelion and groundsel. I find they do very well on this treatment.

Is Crushed Hemp Seed Poison to Birds ?

SIR,—It was of interest to both myself and many other readers to see that your Mr. Weston called attention to the subject of crushed hemp seed in the issue of this paper dated Dec. 10. As I am engaged commercially in the handling of this particular seed I have made it my business in the course of my experience to collect certain information connected therewith, and have much pleasure in supporting Mr. Weston's views. Perhaps it would not be out of the way if I enlarged upon them. The hemp plant (Cannabis sativa) is a relative of the Hop (Humulus lupulus) the fruits (or seeds as we call them) being used for bird feeding, their value resting upon the fact of their being rich in carbohydrates. These seeds are oleaginous and demulcent, and on expression yield about 25 per cent. of fixed oil (which is employed as a varnish, and for other purposes). In this country it has been cultivated in Lincolnshire and Suffolk, and also in Ireland, but the bulk comes from abroad. When, however, hemp is grown in tropical countries it varies somewhat importantly in character from the ordinary (C. sativa) of colder climates and is, I am told, considered by some botanists a distinct variety. Chemists call this form (C. sativa var. indica) Indian hemp, and although it possesses less valuable fibres than ordinary hemp, it acquires marked narcotic properties, from producing a much larger quantity of a peculiar resin, than is the case with the plant in colder latitudes. The herb and the resin are employed largely in Asia for intoxicating purposes and in medicine. The principal forms in which Indian hemp is found are Gunjah, or Ganja, the dried tops after flowering of the female plant, containing the resin; Bhang, Subjee or Sidhee, the larger leaves and fruits without stalks; Churrus, the concrete resinous substance which exudes spontaneously from the stem, leaves and tops. The above forms are common in use in India. In Arabia Hashish or Hashash is largely employed. Other preparations of hemp are "majoon," in use in Calcutta; "maponchari," in use in Cairo, and the "dawaines" of the Arabs. Indian hemp is also used for smoking. In Western Africa the plant is known as Diamba and as an intoxicant is there called "maconie" or "makiah." Its active principle as obtained in this country, however, varies so much in activity that its effects cannot be depended upon with certainty. This, however, has nothing whatever to do with the ripened seeds which, when good and sound, we know to be a valuable commodity for bird feeding. Usually, of course, Finches are able to shell these seeds; but when they are not, and we have reason to supply it, there is no alternative but to give it "crushed." Adult birds of that kind then usually only pick up particles of the broken kernel, seldom swallowing the outer covering, except when it is so finely ground and incorporated with other food that they cannot help so doing. On the other hand, many "soft bills" swallow hemp, whole or crushed, continually for years without showing any symptoms of poisoning. Now we all know the kernel of this seed, used with discretion, is a natural food, but we have no authentic evidence that its case or covering—which is purely a dry, cellular structure—contains anything whatever of a deleterious nature. Consequently, before supporting a view of this kind it would be necessary to conduct a research or furnish evidence to that effect, and not merely rely upon ideas quoted at random by even the most experienced users of it. The head of a large export drug house informed me as late as this week that he had not as yet met with or heard of an "insecticide" having been prepared from bruised hemp or its shells. The only possible line of objection to the kernel that one could take up would be that as to its indigestibility, but when we consider that birds swallow naturally and freely, and digest (or are capable of ejecting) substances just as hard and horny, it would be futile to do so without evidence to support such a view. Unfortunately, so little has been done in the way of research connected with the dietetic values of seeds as applied to birds, or the indigestibility of substances as applied to birds, that many of our ideas as to their exact value or danger are open to doubt. Enquiries in botanical and chemical circles where this plant and its uses are well known fail to furnish any evidence in support of the husk containing anything in the nature of an irritant.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

An Official Report: Suspension of Several Members: Concession to Specialist Clubs.

SIR,—I enclose a report of a meeting of the Executive Council held last Saturday, from which you will see you were just a little previous in your strictures as to the suspensions of exhibitors. I am sorry that you should have been again misinformed of the doings of the Union, and that you published the information without first inquiring as to its reliability. There is no desire to suppress any of the suspensions. Union members who exhibited at L.C.B.A. show were only suspended last Saturday, and although two others had been previously suspended by the District Committees concerned, it is not usual to publish the names until the suspensions have been confirmed, after an opportunity of appealing has been given. These were confirmed on Saturday last. Your readers will see from the report that it has been decided to remove the restriction against licensing purely cage bird shows, up to the end of the present show season, and to grant licenses to any shows applying for same, having the patronage of a Specialist Club, so as to throw these shows open to members wishing to compete for special prizes given by the Specialist Club. Union members, also members of Specialist Clubs, may thus show at any shows provided they see to it that the show is licensed to be held under C.B.U. rules. The annual meeting of delegates will be held at the Palace, and I will forward you copies of the agenda for publication this week-end.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE, Hon. Sec., C.B.U.

[Mr. Lythgoe's ingenious "dig" arent publishing unreliable information rather makes us smile. We are not aware that we have published any information—in point of fact it was the entire lack of information concerning the Union and its doings which led to the correspondence we printed last week. We certainly said then that we knew certain C.B.U. members had been suspended; and Mr. Lythgoe's report confirms the accuracy of this statement.—EDITOR.]

Meeting of the Executive Council.

A meeting of the Executive Council was held at Manchester on December 17, at which were present Messrs. Bladon, Hadwin, Naden, Tyler, Yeoman, Atkinson, Kelley, and the secretary. The minutes of the last Council meeting and of the adjourned delegates' meeting were read.

Arising out of the suggestion made at Leicester to hold a show for C.B.U. members only, it was agreed to invite expressions of opinion from affiliated societies as to supporting such a show, and to invite offers from societies willing to run the show, and on what terms they would run it, it being suggested the Union would guarantee them against loss. This matter to be brought up for discussion at the annual meeting.

Several suspensions were submitted to the Council for confirmation. The suspension of Mr. S. Beaty for one month for exhibiting at Newcastle show was confirmed, and also that of Mr. A. Colley, for two months, for exhibiting at Battersea show. An appeal was heard, made by Mr. T. Brennan, against his suspension until December 31, 1911, for exhibiting at Sale show in his daughter's name, in amateur classes, he no longer being eligible to show in such classes.

A number of letters from various persons bearing on the case were read, and Mr. Brennan personally attended, and gave his explanation that his daughter, who was seven years old, was the bona-fide owner of the birds entered at Sale show, and Mr. Brennan produced birds which he stated were his daughter's, and others which were his own property and had recently been shown by him. After a very lengthy consideration, the Council unanimously agreed to confirm the suspension, and agreed to return Mr. Brennan the deposit he had laid with the appeal.

Another appeal was heard, made by Messrs. Fields Brothers against a decision of the District Committee to suspend them until December 31, 1911, for exhibiting in amateur classes at Sale show, the brothers having previously won the requisite number of first prizes to debar them from exhibiting as amateurs. Neither gentleman was able to be present, and after reading the letters it was agreed to reduce the suspension by three months, i.e., to September 30, 1911, and to return the deposit fee.

Correspondence was also read from various members of the Union, as to exhibiting at the recent L.C.B.A. show, and it was unanimously agreed that all that were not members of the L.C.B.A. and who were under the control of the Union by membership of an affiliated society, should be suspended for three months from the date of the show. This is subject to their right to appeal within seven days of notice being sent them of their suspension.

Letters were read in connection with this matter from members of various Specialist Clubs, and it was agreed that licenses should be granted to any shows applying for same, having the patronage of Specialist Clubs, up to the end of the present show season only.

It was agreed to ask the delegates to adopt a rule providing for the enlargement of the Executive Council by the addition of six fanciers living within reasonable distance of wherever the secretary may be located, and to provide for frequent meetings to be held during the show season, to discuss more readily matters of urgency, and to instruct the secretary. The present system was considered too cumbersome, and did not give as good an interchange of opinion amongst members of the Council as was desirable, besides leaving too much responsibility on the secretary.

Several other amendments to the rules will be submitted to the delegates' meeting, which is to be held at the Palace show on the Saturday afternoon. Notices and agenda for the will be sent out this week.

Under the White Rose.

BRADFORD EAST Show, held on Saturday last must be numbered amongst the successes. The entries came up fairly well for the time of the year, but undoubtedly the principal item was the "Rose Bowl" competition for the best young bird of the year, which was competed for in the two unflighted classes, bringing together 5 of the best. Mr. W. Cruise, one of their own members, carried off the trophy, an honour which has been won by their own members twice out of the three times it has been up for competition. No doubt they have some good birds West Bowling way.

THE C.M.Y.C.C. held a meeting at Bradford East show, the principal business being in connection with the late secretary's (Mr. Garnett) testimonial fund. Originally the date of closing was December 17th, but the meeting decided that it should remain open a little longer, in fact, until the next meeting of the club, some time in the early part of February, as soon as possible after the Palace show where the competitions of the Society close. I may say, in the meantime, that the subscriptions have come in fairly satisfactorily.

MR. T. OGDEN, whose illness I mentioned last week, is now on the turn for the better, though it will be some little time before he is out of danger. However, now that he has got on to the mend, let us wish him speedy recovery.

THIS week-end we have no open show in the Yorkshire Union district, and birds will get a much-needed rest. Some of them look as though they need it, too. Many have a washed-out appearance, especially about the neck, but this will require a moult to get out. Members' shows are held by a good many societies on Boxing Day, and this will be the meeting-place for fanciers during the holidays. Many a good time we have had at these events; they are invariably interesting, and in most cases they finish the competitions for the year's shows, this adding to the keenness, though it is, of course, always friendly.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

Food of the Owl.

Few suspect the Owl of being fond of fish. One species, the great Snow Owl, is known to be a regular fisherman. Motionless upon the rock on which he sits, he waits patiently till a fish passes, when with the rapidity of a shot he seizes it with his claws. The common Owls have been known to bring fish to their young.

BROXBURN.

Annual show held December 17. It proved a great success, close on 600 exhibits being forward. Scotch Fancies, although allowed a full classification, were rather poorly patronised, and, seeing the show was so near the home and Derby of this breed, and a well known fancier judged, the committee were rather disappointed. However, what were on view were representative, and some good ones were to be found among the winners. Mr. Menzies (Edinburgh) judged, and his awards were well received. Norwich, Crests and Crestbreds were under the patronage of the S.C.C., and taken all over were a good collection. Some real stunners were out, especially in the 1910 classes, competition being very keen. The old and respected veteran of this variety, Mr Hugh Moreland, judged, and we never saw awards received with more satisfaction. Plainheads were a little down in numbers, but the quality was good. Some of the classes were very keenly contested. The judge, Mr. Allan Chalmers, was to be congratulated on his choice, as he went for one type throughout and left little to be desired. We were sorry to hear that this respected Norwich fancier has had a visit of the dreaded "septic fever," and has unfortunately been almost cleaned out. Border Fancies were the feature of the show, such a fine lot having seldom been gathered together this year. The medal went to Mr. R. H. Douglas. Competition in every class was keen, and many well-known teams were forward. New faces, cropping up, upset some calculations. But very little was left for anyone to grumble at. They were ably judged by the well-known yellow lien speciallist, Mr. J. Hamilton. British birds and Mules were also forward in force. These classes were judged by two well-known fanciers, viz., Messrs. L. J. Arrighi and R. Bald, the former taking the odd numbers, the latter the even numbers, and their awards were well received. The management was of the first order, The committee is composed of genuine hard-working fanciers, all vying with each other to get through the largest amount of work, and they got through in a quite masterly fashion without a hitch. The hall is a good one, and is free from draught, and well lighted. The halls are capable of staging 1,200 birds. It is the committee's aim to get that number in the future. Birds were sent or taken home the same night. The show was under the able supervision of Mr. McLaren, the secretary, and he was well assisted by Mr. Workman, his worthy treasurer, while the energetic president and vice-president, Messrs. Murray and McCramer, did all in their power to make the show the success it deserved to be.

BOWHILL.

Third annual show of the Bowhill and Dis. O.S. was held Dec. 17th in the Gothenburg Hall. There were 205 entries in the cage bird section. Only 22 Scotch Fancies were entered in the eight classes; there should have been more when such a man as Mr. D. Low (Dundee) was to judge. The Plainhead Norwich were good, although they would be even better with the patronage of some more clubs like the Fife and Kinross Plainhead Club. The birds were staged in a well-lighted hall, and free from draughts. Everything possible was done by the stewards to make the birds and visitors comfortable. The secretaries, Messrs. Dodds and Mathieson, went about their duties in a quiet way, which showed that they knew their work. Mr. D. Low (Dundee) judged the Scotch Fancies; Mr. W. Hampton (Brechin) Norwich and Borders, Mr. J. Mackie (Markinch) the Mules and British birds; and they seemed to give general satisfaction.

A RECORD SHOW AT BLACKBURN.

A Splendid Entry and a Grand "Gate."

14th annual show of the Blackburn and Dis. C.B.S. was held in the Grange Hall, Richmond Terrace, on Dec. 16th and 17th. It proved a magnificent success in every way, and was without doubt the best show ever held in Blackburn, both as regards the number of entries, the quality of the exhibits, and the number of spectators. We think the committee would be well advised if they could find a larger room, as, although the present room is quite large enough for an ordinary show, it was not quite big enough for a show of the magnitude of the present one; so that the room was so packed at times on the Saturday afternoon that there was scarcely room to move about. As regards the exhibits they were of the highest class in every section, and never do we remember seeing such a number of "good ones" present at any one show, all the elite of the Fancy being on view. In the Norwich section Mr. W. Vardy (Hucknall) provided a sensation in the shape of his buff hen. All the Norwich men present voted her a gem of the first water, and one which has to be seen before her grand qualities can be fully realised. She is without doubt a "knock-out" possessing any amount of size combined with extra type and quality. The yellow hen (the gold medal winner at Liverpool) was also present and was also much admired. In the Yorkshire section the bird which took our eye most was the clear yellow of Mr. R. Leonard's, a real good one which will take some beating. Of the British and Foreign section we cannot speak too highly. They made a show in themselves, and the best of the respective varieties again met each other. Grand teams of about 50 each were staged by Mr. Jeff Walsh and Mr. J. M. Walsh. Special for best British was won by Mr. Jeff Walsh with a magnificent Waxwing undoubtedly one of the best of its species living. The novice classes as usual were exceedingly well patronised and contained some grand birds.

As regards the management of the show, it is impossible to say too much. Mr. Jeff Walsh, the secretary, is an old hand at the game, and understands it thoroughly, and everything was in A1 order. He was ably assisted by the popular chairman of the Society, Mr. J. M. Walsh, his assistant secretary, Mr. P. Proctor, and an energetic committee, consisting of Messrs. Dobson, E. Walsh, Cook, Johnson, Livesey, Barnes, W. E. Seed, Tweedie, Vignole, Fairclough, and Marsden, who all worked hard and well deserve the success they attained. The judges were Mr. R. Taylor (Preston), and Mr. J. H. Itoe (Birmingham).

WREXHAM.

Wrexham C.B.S. fourth annual show held Dec. 17th, the Institute. We doubt whether the society have improved on their room from last year, for when artificial light is required it does not do full justice to the birds or judge. We must deeply sympathise with Mr. Yates, who entered a big team, but did not send them through losing his little child this week. The society's challenge cup, which had previously ended in a tie between Mr. R. Parry and Mr. J. Jones, was won by Mr. Parry, who well deserved his success. The secretary's reins were held by that esteemed fancier, Mr. B. Bennett, who carried out his duties in a very able manner. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) judged all classes except the Rollers, which were taken by Mr. Ellis (Chester), and their awards were well received all round.

COCKERMOUTH.

Cockermouth and Dist. F.S. sixth annual show held in the Tweed Mill, December 2nd and 3rd, when a very fine collection of cage birds were got together. The numbers were good, but the quality was extra good. The staging was nice, and the birds could be seen to advantage. The management of the show is everything that can be desired. In Mr. E. Limb the society possesses a capital secretary, one who knows his duties well. He is courteous and obliging to all, and is to be congratulated on the success of the show. Mr. J. Dixon (Wigton) judged our section, and his awards appeared to give satisfaction.

EDMONTON F.A.

Annual show, held Town Hall, on December 8th. There was quite a nice little array of cage birds, seeing the Society does not contain within its ranks a superabundance of cage bird fanciers, and the quality of the stock was good. Messrs. J. S. Jackson and A. Burgess, the joint hon. secretaries, were indefatigable in their efforts to achieve success, the former gentleman doing the whole of the clerical work. Mr. C. Sorrell, ever popular as chairman, takes a keen interest in all our Unions. Cup for best members' cage bird was won by Mr. J. A. White, with a very nice Yellow Norwich. Mr. S. Williams annexed special for second best. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

THAMES DITTON.

For a first attempt, the show of the Ditton F.S., which was held in the schoolroom on Dec. 15th, was a very nice little affair. Mr. Booker, the secretary, had all the arrangements well in hand, and he was ably supported by Mr. A. Mason, the treasurer, and Mr. C. Ive, the Molesey secretary. Mr. and Mrs. Thynne and Mrs. Litchfield took special charge of the exhibits in our section, and needless to say, they were well attended to. Mr. C. A. House judged.

HETTON-LE-HOLE C.B.S.

Sixteenth annual show held December 10th head quarters, Crown Inn. The weather was very unfavourable, being dull and damp; but inside the room was a sight not easily to be forgotten; for it was a "red letter day" for the society, being the best and most successful show ever held, both as regards entries (which totalled 144), quality and the company present, the room being simply packed. The special feature was the presentation of a grand Silver Challenge Cup by our highly respected president, Councillor F. Piper, who, in a nice little speech, told us it was a great honour to him to be president, and to be able to give a cup. They were a nice, homely society, and all seemed to be on good, friendly terms the one with the other. He hoped that when this cup was won outright he would still be amongst us to present us with many more. After the opening address the cup was filled many times, and handed round for everyone present to take a drink. Many toasts were given, and smitably responded to. The winner of the cup was our worthy chairman, Mr. Hy. Wilson, with his grand young yellow Norwich. The secretary (Mr. A. J. Notley), backed up by a hard-working committee, had everything in apple-pie order. Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead) officiated as judge, and seemed to give every satisfaction, no grumbling being heard.

GLASGOW & WESTERN COUNTIES.

Annual show held in the Good Templars' Hall, Ingram street, Glasgow, Dec. 17th. Office-bearers: President, Mr J. Ramsay; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. D. King and D. Johnstone; Treasurer, Mr. P. Pettigrew; Committee, Messrs. A. Thompson, W. Munro, D. Knox, T. Forrest, J. Mann, T. Renfrew, A. Malcolmson, and J. Fulton, all of Glasgow; W. Johnstone, Blackwood; C. Small, Wishaw; G. Marlin, W. Shearer, Handilton; J. Liddell, J. Ballantyne, Cambuslang. Trustees, Messrs. W. Connelly, A. McInnes, A. McFarlane. Auditors, Messrs. A. Cant and W. Connelly. Secretary, Mr. T. Drysdale. It goes without saying that these gentlemen knew their way about—how to promote and carry out a show successfully. There was a young bird section for Canaries and Hybrids, and some very smart Norwich were to be found here. The Borders were a nice lot. The young Hybrids brought out a couple of very nice Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrids, and a very promising dark yell. Goldie-Canary. The old birds saw a very good lot of Norwich staged, and Messrs. A. McFarlane and A. Malcolmson respectively put down very strong teams, and shared most of the premier honours. Borders were not quite so good here as in the young bird section. The Hybrids, light and dark, were a nice lot, particularly the 6-pointed nearly evenly mkd. yell. Goldfinch-Can. This bird is large, young (2 years nearly), very smart, and it captured the handsome cup for best bird in the hall. The winning Lin.-Bullfinch in the young section captured cup for best young Hybrid, 1910 bred. The British bird classes were far and away the best and most numerous section of the show. Competition was very keen. A very fine perfectly spotted Thrush in the best of condition captured cup for best British. The hall is very suitable, well lighted, and free from all draught. The birds were well staged on tiers round the room and down the centre, and a big flow of visitors had plenty of room to get about to view the birds. It is good to see such whole-hearted enthusiasm and hearty support by these fanciers. They have no prize money to compete for, but they have several fine cups and a host of other special prizes—generously given—and a good deal is attached to the simple honour of winning. They are to be congratulated on their fine show; it was a really creditable one. The Gift class was a model for any society—16 fine birds, all sorts nearly, and no bad ones, as we see at some shows. Mr. Muir judged Canaries, and Mr. Chas. Houlton the Hybrids, British and Foreign, and the awards were well received.

HARLECH (Merioneth.)

This was the first show of its kind held at Harlech It took place at the Town Hall, Dec. 17th, under the patronage of the Countess of Winchelsea and Nottingham. It turned out very favourably as regards numbers and quality, which was of a high standard. The hall was well adapted for the purpose. The Fancy seems to be taken up well in the locality. The 10 classes provided contained nearly 100 birds. Norwich and Yorkshires were really good, and there was a grand lot of Goldies. Mr. H. S. Davies (Llandilo) won cup for best bird with his well-known King Parrakeet. Mr. J. E. Jones won special for best Yorks., Mr. R. P. Williams winning special for best variegated Yorks. Specials were given in every class. Birds were despatched in good time from the show. Mr. Jones made an excellent secretary, being a fancier at heart, and supported by a good staff of stewards, who shared well in the work. Treasurer, Mr. J. Morris. Chairman, Mr. S. Williams. Mr. J. Kershaw (Llanrwst) made the awards.

AYR, N.B.

The Ayr O.S. brought off their 49th annual exhibition of cage birds on 17th December. All the larger halls in this ancient burgh being booked far ahead, necessitated the dropping of the pigeon section from the programme. The show was held in the Masonic Hall (High-street), a very central one. It is well lighted, and is very cosy and comfortable; there was ample room to see the exhibits. The Norwich and Yorkshire classes filled fairly well, but the Borders and Scotch Fancies were disappointing in numbers, though not in quality. Some grand exhibits were on view in the Light Mule or Hybrid, and in the Dark Canary classes, and it was a pity that some excellent birds had to take a back seat. The British bird exhibitors responded manfully, and some rattling good classes were here. Many birds had to stand cardless—birds that are bound to be heard of later. The energetic Secretary (Mr. Colin W. Paterson) had everything in apple-pie order, and he received yeoman service from his brothers and a committee of good fanciers, who spared no pains in making the show the success it undoubtedly was. There was not a single hitch and Mr. Paterson must be heartily congratulated. We understand that with the exception of a few of the English exhibits kept over till Sunday evening, every bird had been despatched by 6.30 o'clock, and that all prize money was posted by Saturday evening, truly a record to be proud of. An extra effort, we believe, will be made to make their jubilee show next year a record one. We wish them all luck in their enterprise. Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield) made the awards.

BRADFORD EAST.

Bradford East O.S. third annual exhibition held December 17th in the Park Chapel Schools, New Cross Street, West Bowling, Mr. F. Armstrong (Halifax) placing the cards. The show was held under the rules of the Y.U. and the patronages of the Yorkshire C.C. and the National Green Marked Y.C.C. Entries totalled 429, the two classes for unlighted birds being exceptionally well filled, the competition for the Bradford East Rose Bowl attracting the best birds of the year. The winner turned up in Mr. W. Cruise's yellow. The room is a good one, and is very lofty and well lighted. The management is all that could be desired; each working member had his work set, and did it manfully. Mr. H. Hill is well able to manage a show, and he had everything at his fingers' ends. Cards were up in a very few minutes after the awards were placed, and prize money was ready to be paid out before three o'clock. The secretary was ably assisted by Mr. W. Cruise, and in the management Messrs. E. Suddards (president), Layrock, F. Cruise, Rushworth, Walker, Stables (show stewards), Hunt, P. Priestley, Wilkinson, Barker, Kemp, Ackroyd, Gornall, C. Cowgill, and many others as general stewards played important parts. All exhibits were off in good time for their return journey.

PALTERTON.

A pretty show was that of the Palterton fanciers held December 17th. Messrs. Thornhill and Richards, the popular secs., had everything in nice order, and the show passed off successfully. The cage birds were of nice quality, although in point of numbers somewhat disappointing, and several of the sections had unfortunately to be amalgamated. But otherwise it was a pretty show, and the birds were much admired. Mr. W. Vardy (Hucknall) placed the cards, and his awards appeared to give every satisfaction.

LLANDUDNO.

Third annual show of the Welsh Northern Counties F. and F.A., held Messrs. Jarvis and Woodyatt's Repository, Queen's Road, Craig-y-Don, Dec. 17th. The Society is to be congratulated on having as its members the cream of North Wales fanciers. The management was in the hands of Mr. G. E. Cragg (the secretary), who, with a staff of willing helpers, had everything at his finger tips, and was most obliging and painstaking in every way. The judge was Mr. Bowker (Nantwich). Nor. made a nice display, and contained several very notable exhibits. Yorkshires were strong in number and grand in quality.

BIRKENHEAD.

Birkenhead C.F.A. annual show held Dec. 10th, Co-operative Hall, Catherine Street. The entry of nearly 250 birds was a good one, and quality was well represented. Mr. A. E. Lloyd makes a courteous and very energetic secretary, and he was ably assisted by a first class committee. The cards were up in good time, and the prize money and specials all paid out during the evening. Mr. A. Wellings judged, and did not leave much, if any, room for grumbling.

BOOTLE.

Bootle and Dist. C.B.S. annual members' show, held in St. Matthew's Parochial Hall, Dec. 10th. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) placed the cards to the very evident satisfaction of every one interested. Mr. John Hunt, the secretary, had everything in apple-pie order. We noticed he had two young fanciers well up in the art of management and able to run the show during his enforced absence whilst judging was going on. A very fine collection of specials had been got together to please the "ruling powers" at the members' homes. Mr. S. McNulty again won the handsome silver challenge cup and gold medal, which, we were told, he has won four times in succession. Mr. J. McLean was runner-up, and receives a beautiful gold centre silver medal.

MEDWAY C.B.S.

The members held their annual show Dec. 14th, at High Street, Chatham, in a room kindly lent for the purpose. The Canary is not so popular among the members as British birds; consequently, the show was principally made up of various species of the latter, and among them were many open winners. Mr. Acland staged some beauties, notably a charming Goldfinch of good size, grand face and wings. This bird secured special for best British. The same owner also staged a fine col. Hawfinch. Messrs. Wickham, Webb, Brumhill, Phillips, and Furguson sent in birds of more than average merit. The last-named exhibitor won special for best staged bird with a charming Redstart, shown in faultless style. The members are not smitten with the charms of the Yorkshire, but the Norwich section was made up of some real good ones. Mr. Wickham took special with a bird of full size and col., hardly pressed by a good yell. belonging to Mr. Gooding, the latter being shown in rather too fat condition. The management was in the hands of Mr. Hunt, who makes a capital and painstaking secretary. Mr. H. Norman judged.

FELINFOEL.

Fourth annual show held in the Council Schools Dec. 17th. It proved a great success, there being well over 300 entries in our section, creating a record, we think, for the society. Quality as well as quantity, was well above the average. The schoolroom proved an excellent place. The birds were staged at a nice height in two tiers, and could be seen at a glance. Cards were up very promptly, but this is what one would expect from such an enthusiastic committee as the Felinfoel fanciers proved to be. Mr. T. J. Davies, the hon. sec., had everything in good working order, and the society should be proud to have such a capable man at the head of affairs. Mr. E. A. Lovell (Bristol) judged.

N. MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Show held Nov. 19th. Judge: Mr. A. Wellings. It was a combined show between the above named society and the South Manchester C.B.S. Some very fine exhibits were on view, Messrs. Pike, Deakin, and Dalzell showing some grand Yorkshires in the amateur classes, and Messrs. Deakin, J. Woods, and D. Bardsley in the amateur Norwich section. Borders were good, Messrs. Colley and Davey staging some very nice birds. In the novice Yorkshires Mr. T. Crowther sent a very fine team which does him very great credit. Mr. Self sent a very nice team, and Mr. Seddall (of the S.M. Soc.) also staged some fine birds. In the British, Mr. Tansey showed a fine Goldfinch, which was run very close by Mr. Willis, Mr. Fairhurst sent a good Greenfinch, which has been doing a lot of winning this season. Mr. Hall sent a fine yellow dark Goldfinch Mule, which was greatly admired. Sandiford's medal was won by Mr. P. Murphy. The show was very well patronised, and we heard no grumbling about the awards. Mr. Pike won spl. for best team, Mr. Deakin that for best bird.

CODNOR PARK AND DIST. C.B.S.

Members' show, held Dec. 17th, in the Club-room, adjoining the Portland Arms, when a grand lot of birds turned up. Norwich were the chief feature of the show, many notable winners being amongst them. Yorkshires turned up better, some nice exhibits being amongst them. The two novice classes were for those who hadn't won money prizes; they filled well, which speaks for itself that more classes must be made for the novices (by making two novice classes, we enrolled 8 new members within 7 days). The birds were comfortably staged, and could be seen to the best advantage without handling. Mr. J. Adnitt judged Canaries, and Mr. J. Driver British; their awards were well received.

COALTOWN OF WEMYSS.

First annual show held December 17th. An entry of nearly 300 birds rewarded their efforts. The Border Fancy and British bird sections were especially well filled. All the noted Border exhibitors favoured the show with their patronage, some capital teams being forwarded. This section was judged by Mr. J. Thomson (Newtongrange). The Norwich section contained some really grand birds, the unlighted cock class boasting some very fine birds. We were pleased to see our friend Mr. A. C. Dandie, late president of the Scottish National C.B.S., so far restored to health as to be able once more to take up the work of judging. His task was no light one, especially in the British bird section, every class being fairly well filled. The committee are composed of thorough fanciers, and looked well after the interests of exhibitors and visitors alike. The secretary (Mr. A. Storrar), who, we understand, filled that important position for the first time, has to be complimented on the success of this show. The hall in which the show was held was well lighted and comfortable, and was very well adapted for such a purpose.

POLMONT STATION.

Show held Dec. 17th when we had a fine display of cage birds; in fact, it was said by many that they had not been at a club show where there was better quality. We had a large turn-out of spectators. Cup for best young Norwich was won by Mr. J. Sharp. All the classes were very keenly contested, and everybody seemed pleased with the awards of Mr. D. Hamilton (Hamilton), who judged the Scotch Fancies and Borders, and of Mr. J. Jeans (Cameron), who judged the Norwich, British and Foreign. The latter gave his much-valued opinions freely. The sec. (Mr. R. L. Leitch) had everything in good order, and deserves praise for his able management.

LINCOLN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Second annual show held Central Hall, December 10th. Only members were allowed to enter, and the birds numbered 91. The Yorkshires struck one as being of very good quality, but they were a little excelled by the Norwich. Mr. Sindell's winning Goldfinch was much admired, and the prize for best bird in show was awarded to Mr. W. Coulson. Mr. Ramsden's medal for best fed bird on Ramsden's puro pepper was awarded to Mr. J. W. Lawson. Mr. G. Browning (Rotherham) judged and carried out his duties most ably. The secretarial duties were admirably carried out by Mr. W. Sindell.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING (Co. Durham).

Tenth annual show held Dec. 17th, White Lion Hotel, and was in every way a most decided success. Entries came up well, totalling about 200, nearly the same as last year, whilst the quality of the exhibits reached a very high standard. This was especially noticeable in the Norwich classes, where there were some real toppers staged, some of which have held their own in the keenest competition. The silver cup for best bird went to Mr. H. Wilson. The genial secretary, Mr. R. H. Dixon, had all the arrangements well in hand, and we found him always courteous and most obliging, and under his excellent management everything passed off without the slightest hitch. He was ably supported by a grand body of fanciers, headed by the chairman, Mr. M. Dixon, and the manner in which they worked was a credit to them all. The president, Mr. Norman Robinson, opened the show in a very fine speech. The chairman, Mr. M. Dixon, presented Mr. Robinson with a beautiful bird and cage, and expressed the keen pleasure of the members at the presence of the president, to which Mr. Robinson suitably responded. There was a grand attendance of the public, and the showroom was literally packed with visitors during the afternoon and evening. Mr. J. Stanger judged, and gave every satisfaction.

PETERHEAD.

Third annual show and competition of the Peterhead C.B. and P.A., held December 16th and 17th, in the small Music Hall. The exhibition was one of the best yet held. There was a record entry, competitors being forward from Aberdeen, Fraserburgh, etc, and the quality of the exhibits was excellent. There was a fine display of British and Foreign birds, an exceptionally good specimen of a Jay being shown by Mr. J. Johnston; it won special for best British, and the same exhibitor won the medal for best young (colour-fed) cock. Mr. J. Winton won Hyde's special, and Mr. J. M. Whyte medal for best foreign bird. The section for colour-fed 1910 birds was the best in the show. The secretary and treasurer, Mr. P. A. Jack, deserves great praise for the able manner in which the show was conducted, and he was well backed up by a willing committee, consisting of such well known fanciers as Messrs. Winton, Johnston, Wilson, Sim, Park, McKay, Thomson, Porter, Cowie, McIntosh, Sutherland, Lillie, Winter, Allardyce, Milne, and Cross. The awards of the judge, Mr. J. Forbes, were well received.

Annual supper party held Dec. 21st at Railway Tavern. At the previous meeting the balance-sheet was read, and same showed the Society to be still sound financially. Although part of the staging had been renewed and several necessary extras were incurred this year the secretary could show that the funds in the bank had not depreciated, but on the other hand had been slightly increased, the balance being in double figures of pounds. The President (Mr. W. Hampton), who occupied the chair, congratulated the members, and altogether a happy evening was spent in song and sentiment.—Yellow Green Cock.

MORPETH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual supper held on Xmas Eve at the Earl Grey Hotel, where over thirty sat down to a splendid spread, prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Dixon. After supper a pleasant evening was spent, Mr. H. He was ably supported by the President (Mr. Wolfe), the Secretary (Mr. Cottingham), the Treasurer (Mr. Elsey), and Messrs. Birch, Hill, Barnes, and Sharpe (members of the committee). Mr. Rhodes gave the members some good advice. It was announced that there will be three cups for competition next year, kindly given by Mr. Quinney and Mr. Hodkinson, and one by the members. Pleasing songs were rendered by Miss Quinney and Messrs. Wallis, Pratt, Barnes, Hill, and Clarke. The election of officers then took place for the year 1911, Mr. J. Smith being again unanimously elected chairman; Mr. T. E. Clifford vice-chairman; Mr W. Roberts treasurer; and Hy. Wray (late secretary of the New Brompton F.S.), secretary; the committee is as follows: Messrs. G. Clayton, G. Phillips, C. Warby, J. Lancaster, J. Skinner, G. R. Hall, T. Jones, T. E. Wray, C. LIVERPOOL B.B A.

Since the list of season's specials winners was put through the Fancy Press, it has been proved that Class 15, in the nest feather show, did not count, owing to there having been less than 4 exhibitors. The error arose through the Secretary having entered a bird to F. Handley, whereas he didn't show in the class, the 2nd and 3rd prizes being won by J. Walker. The champion section alone is affected, and the positions now are as follows: 1, Nimmo, 69; 2, Handley, 63; 3, Walker, 46; 4, Plunkett, 41; 5, Hullough, 39. Norwich open, F. E. Hawkes, 32.—Walker and Green, Auditors.

GALASHIELS O.S..

On Christmas Eve a well-attended meeting was held to hear the results of the financial year. Chair taken by the worthy President, Mr A. Todd. The painstaking treasurer, Mr. J. Brown, was called upon to give an account of his stewardship. It was found that after paying all debts there was a balance in hand which (it was agreed by all) was very satisfactory. It was the unanimous opinion that our recent Jubilee show had been a decided success from every point of view. The Scotch Fancy section was up in numbers, the Border Fancies were a show in themselves, and the Norwich were said to be "the best collection ever seen at a Border show." At the close of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the enterprising secretary, Mr. C. Lugton, his name being coupled with the hard-working committee, for the very able and efficient manner in which the respective duties had been carried out.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

First committee meeting of this newly-formed society held at the Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, December 20th, when a full muster of committee was present, including the following: Mr. T. Down (chairman), J. Woodall (vice-chairman), T. Bishop, Smith, Coltan, Crookes, P. Walsh, Fletcher, Wilkinson, Marshall, Hodkin, Drabble, Milns. Owing to this being the first meeting, the committee had a great amount of business to go through, to submit to the next monthly meetiug. After a lengthy discussion and various suggestions, an exceptionnlly good set of rules was drawn up, which the committee think will meet with the general approval of the members. The programme for the 12 months will, we think, meet the wishes of all, as it deals with every detail of the Fancy. It is as follows: January, Passing of rules, programme, and general business, submitted by committee; Feb., Table show matches pairs of Canaries for breeding; general discussion; prizes, 5s., 2s. 6d. and 1s. 6d for 1st, 2nd and 3rd pairs; Mar., Lecture on "Breeding, pairing, etc., of the Yorks. Canary"; April, Table show of British, prizes 5s., 2s. 6d. and 1s. 6d., and paper on "British Birds, keeping and feeding"; May, Arrangements for nest feather show and other business, show to be held on July 17th, 1911, fixed prize money, 4s., 2s., 1s.; June, Lecture on "Foreign Birds, keeping, feeding, etc.," by E. E. Smith, Esq.; July, Lecture on "The Norwich Canary, breeding, moulting and preparing for exhibition," by Mr. J. Woodall; a ramble will also be held on the third Sunday in July, to take place in the Birdy district of Worksop; Aug., Lecture, "Preparing birds for exhibition"; Sept., Arrangements for All England Show, to be held Nov. 3rd and 4th; Oct., Washing exhibition; Nov. (at present vacant), since meeting annual dinner and smoking concert has been suggested; Dec., Annual meeting, election of officers, etc., for 1912. Also decided to give prize money as follows at members, back-end show (date to be fixed), 4s., 2s., 1s. Next monthly meeting, Norfolk Hotel Cafe, Haymarket, King Street entrance, January 10th, for the adoption of above; also selection of President, Vice-President, etc. It is earnestly hoped that those who have already made up their minds to join, and all interested in the Fancy, will make a special effort to be present, when they will receive a hearty welcome from the committee, who have made up their minds to make this society second to none. Don't forget, January 10th.—John A. L. Woodall, Correspondent, S.O.S.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

Agenda for Annual Meeting of Delegates.

Sir, I beg to give notice that the annual meeting of delegates will be held on Saturday, February 4th, at the Crystal Palace at 1 o'clock, in the afternoon. I enclose agenda for the meeting. You will see there is a proposal to hold a show for C.B.U. members only, and I am instructed to ask societies to consider this proposal and acquaint me as to what support can be relied upon in order to make the show a success. It is suggested the show shall be held on popular lines, in December or January (entry fee 1/6 and usual prize money), and that any affiliated societies may contribute towards a special prize fund, the show to be run by some society of standing, the Union to find the show manager and guarantee the society against any loss. I am asked to invite offers from any society willing to conduct such a show, and on what other terms, so that I may submit these to the meeting. Nominations for positions of president and secretary of the Union should be sent in, as per Rule 14, and I should be glad to receive nominations for these positions.

*An Owl's Act of Service.

It is related that a certain Tartar, Jenghis Khan, had taken refuge from his enemies in a thicket. They followed hot in pursuit, and came upon his hiding place. But there sat a guardian in the shape of an Owl, and believing that it would never rest quiet if any man were hidden near, the pursuers passed on. In the night-time the Khan made his way to the camp of his followers, and told them the cause of his safety.—Sent by I. E. Howells (12 years), 7, Francis Terraco, Carmarthen.

*A Tomtit's Nest.

At Warwick Cemetery a pair of Tom Tits have for the last nineteen years built their nest in the letter box. Although it is close to the main entrance to the cemetery church they have grown very tame and take no notice of passers by. And when photographed they had no desire to leave their home.—Sent by A. Clements (age 11), 99, Dempsey Street, Stepney,

A Winter Visitor.

Ah! Who is this that's coming here,
Hopping across the snow?
I think, dear Cis, it's somebody
That you and I both know.
He does not seem to heed the cold,
He is so gaily dressed,
He wears a dark and showy coat
See he is tapping on the pane,
As if to say "I've come,
Please spread my dinner on the sill
And I will peck a crumb."
Yes, Robin dear, your dinner waits,
And you shall welcome be
Each day to dine with Cissy and with me.

Sent by Arthur Richardson, Pollington, near Snaith, S.O. Yorks.

We have fixed our next annual show for Saturday, Nov. 18th, 1911, writes Mr. J. Shaddock, hon. sec. of the Coventry O.S.

Owing to the holidays we are compelled to extend date of entries closing to Thursday, Jan. 5, writes Mr. F. Looker, Hon. Sec. of the Hertford and Dis. F.A.

Musselburgh Show report credits Messrs. Watt and Storie with second prize in the Border Fancy yellow cock class, whereas I won second.—J. P. LUMSDEN (Musselburgh).

Thanks for the last part (No. 8) of "Cage Bird Hybrids," which I think is grand. No hybrid breeder should be without this valuable book.—F. COLLINS (Camborne).

There is a small error in our schedule, writes Mr. Charles Ralley, secretary of the Keith (N.B.) show. Classes 84 to 87 are for colour-fed birds. Will exhibitors please note?

Our address is 69, Alexandra Road, Endcliffe, Sheffield, where all correspondence should be addressed, write Messrs. Bishop and Colton, the hon. secretaries of the newly formed Sheffield O.S.

Will the person who took the case of Canaries from Blackburn Show please return them, writes Mr. John Nickson (3, Cotton Court, Preston), as the owner is anxiously waiting for them?

I have been a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS for five years, and I cannot do better than advertise in CAGE BIRDS. I wish your valuable paper every success.—W. STAPLETON (Gwinear, near Hayle).

Kindly note that I have changed my address from Queen Street to 22, Leicester Street, Burton-on-Trent, writes Mr. W. Elliott, of Messrs. Elliott and Wood, the secretaries of the Burton-on-Trent C.B.S.

I wish your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success, as it is the advice given in its pages that has brought us into the front rank with the professional exhibitors.—HEMMINGS AND BRERETON (Over Winsford).

I was pleased with the framed plate of cage Birds which I won as a special prize. I may state that I have taken CAGE BIRDS for five years, and find it a good paper for anything hopping.—H. BISSET (Dysart).

"My aviaries and birds" is the subject of an interesting article in the December issue of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club. The foreign bird section of the L.C.B.A. show is described by Mr. Wesley T. Page, and Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A., writes on the Nesting of the Stonechat, the Reed Bunting, etc. There are also numerous notes and several full-page illustrations.

We have now ready the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with the Greenfinch (No. 15). It gives thoroughly up-to-date and reliable information on its proper feeding, caging, and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, hand-rearing, moulting and exhibiting this popular Finch. All for 2½d. post free. Send to The Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, and ask for "Nutshell" booklet No. 15, on the Greenfinch. A full list of these invaluable booklets is given on our back page this week.

I thank you for the prize which you sent me for winning the "Guinea for an eye" competition. I take a great interest in the bird fancy and I take in CAGE BIRDS every week, and I have recommended your paper many a time to my friends.—JAMES THORPE (Ashton-under Lyne).

Mr. J. Walsh, Bird Specialist, Pheasant Aviaries, Blackburn, is sending his customers a beautiful calendar that is both unique and useful, for, besides being of an unusual design, and in neat colours, it includes a thermometer, the usefulness of which in the bird-room will be at once apparent.

As I can't answer all the kind letters and cards I had from exhibitors at our recent Harlech and District Show, writes Mr. J. E. Jones, the Hon. Sec., will they kindly accept my warmest thanks? The little I did was done with the greatest pleasure. I wish all of CAGE BIRDS readers a lucky New Year.

I wish to express our best thanks to the fanciers who supported us at our last show, writes Mr. T. J. Davies, hon. sec. Felinfoel C.B. and P.S., and to say that it was a record entry. Mr. W. J. Harry (Felinfoel) has won the open cup for most points, and also our members' cup. We wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success.

The Bradford East O.S. are holding their annual concert on Jan. 3, 1911, in the Park Chapel Schools, New Cross Street, West Bowling, commencing at 7.30 p.m. The programme of music is a good one, and in the interval Mrs. E. Suddards will present the prizes won at the shows, and the secretary, Mr. H. Hill, will make a few remarks relative to the society's well-being.

In your report of Bangor Show (Co. Down), Mr. McQuade is credited with having won 1st with a clear yellow Yorkshire cock; this is not correct, as I won 1st in this class with a clear buff cock, Mr. McQuade's yellow being 2nd. I may state that I took three 1sts and a special with my birds at this show. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so well deserves.—C. A. O'REILLY (Dublin).

Kindly thank all who have applied for my Yorkshires advertised in "CAGE BIRDS." I have sold them all. I had about 20 applications for them.—P. S. MATHERS (Hebden Bridge).

It gives me great pleasure, writes Mr. J. F. Craig (York), to be able to inform you that as a result of my advertisement in your valuable paper, Mr. E. J. Davies, of Cardiff, has purchased the whole of my stock of pure Water Gluck Rollers, and has expressed himself well satisfied with his bargain. I cannot speak too highly of the very straightforward manner Mr. Davies performed his part of the transaction. I advise everyone to take advantage of your splendid advertising medium. Several other fanciers applied for various things separately, but I could only part with them in one lot, which I am glad to say has been satisfactorily carried out, for, I hope, the benefit of both parties.

Back to the Woods.

It is stated that if the eggs of the wild Woodpigeon be placed under domesticated birds, the young ones will fly off to the woods at the first opportunity.

Migratory Pied Wagtail.

Although the Pied Wagtail is generally described as a resident (for they may be met with all months in the year), it has been proved that many of them migrate in the

New Society at Kettering.

A meeting of the new Kettering Cage Bird Society will be held at the Rifle Band Club on Monday, Jan. 23rd, 1911, writes Mr. H. Jervis, the hon. sec. pro tem. Will all fanciers interested please attend at 8.15 prompt?

Wild and Domesticated Swans.

The chief point of difference between the Mute Swan and the British wild varieties lies in the beak. Our domesticated bird has a beak of reddish orange with nostrils and base black. The wild birds have more or less black beaks, with the base yellow or orange yellow.

Gilbert White and Chaffinches.

Gilbert White, in his Natural History of Selborne, remarks that for many years he had observed that about Christmas time vast flocks of Chaffinches appeared in the fields—many more, he used to think, than could have been hatched in the vicinity; and on observing them closely he was amazed to find that they seemed to be almost all hens. We now know that these birds spend the winter in flocks—the males in one, the females in another.

The Sailors' Parrots.

In the olden days (says the "Daily Telegraph") if a sailor did not bring home either a Parrot or a monkey, he was looked at askance by his relatives. An incident which has just been brought to light in the Liverpool police-court shows that the practice has not altogether died out. John Riley, a fireman on the steamship Matador, brought away with him from Brazil nine Parrots. Four died on the voyage, and the remainder he sold on arrival at Liverpool at 8s. apiece. There was a rule on the steamer that no birds or animals were to be brought on board. To a notice to this effect in the forecastle there was added in the captain's handwriting: "Ten shillings per head will be charged on all Parrots or animals." Accordingly when Riley went to receive his wages he found that 10s. had been deducted as freight in respect of five Parrots. A pleasant little conundrum was thus presented for the decision of the magistrates. The Merchant Shipping Act contemplates certain fines and deductions from sailors' wages in certain events, but it says nothing about sailors' Parrots. In the result the magistrates decided that the deduction was unauthorised, and made an order for the wages claimed. As, however, they consented to state a case, a higher tribunal may still have to say whether a sailor may bring home a Parrot.

Important Notice

To All Our Readers.

"Cage Birds" 1911 Annual

is now in course of preparation, and will be published early in February, as usual, and be on sale at the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show, and in the hands of all subscribers, we hope, by Friday, February 3rd next. To enable us to keep our word we ask the generous co-operation of readers in sending particulars required in its compilation, also their advertisements, at the earliest possible moment. Any suggestions for new features or for the improvement of present features will be welcomed, and will receive every consideration.

Secretaries of All Societies

devoted to the interests of the cage-bird hobby should send us full particulars of same at once for inclusion in our Alphabetical List of Cage-Bird Clubs. We want the full name of the Society, the latest list of its officials, the place and time of meetings and the nights, the entrance fee and the membership subscription. As this is the only directory in existence to those associations catering for cage bird fanciers no society can afford to be missing from the list. Members themselves should make a point of seeing that their society is included. Secretaries who have changed their addresses should not fail to notify us. We want our list to be thoroughly up-to-date, and thoroughly complete.

All Judges of Cage Birds

who have officiated at any recognised show can have their names and addresses inserted in our list of judges by sending us particulars on a postcard, stating what varieties (if any) they specialise in. There is no charge whatever. Any judge at present on our list who may have changed his address during the past year should notify us at once. This list, remember, is the only complete one of its kind, and is universally consulted by show officials.

To the Bird Trade.

Our directory to the bird trade is a feature that no dealer in birds, or foods, or medicines, or appliances of any kind whatsoever, can neglect. It is a permanent record of his address, as well as of his specialities, and forms an invaluable guide to the fanciers in his own town as well as all over the world. No charge is made for the inclusion of any bona-fide trader, but the name can be thrown up in heavy black type on payment of 1s. (one shilling).

TO ALL BREEDERS AND EXHIBITORS AND ADVERTISERS GENERALLY.

For Breeders' Cards, and other displayed Advertisements, business bringers from all over the World, see the low terms quoted on page 588 this week.

These are Advertisements which at a very low cost will bring you business for a whole year.

The Dainty Bullfinch and its Management.

A. & F. HARTLEY (York.)

The species inhabits the wooded districts throughout the British Isles, but is nowhere numerous on account of the persecution which takes place, because of its fondness for fruit-tree buds. This persecution is totally unwarranted, as the Bullfinch is really Nature's primer. It eats some of the buds and so decreases the fruit crop. Were this not so, some of the branches would be so overladen with fruit that they would break off, and the damage would take a few years to repair.

Its food, in the spring, consists of buds, and of all kinds of fruit in the summer. In the winter its food consists of privet berries, shepherd's purse, dock seed and groundsel.

It builds in a thick hedge or bush about four feet from the ground, and rears three nests in a year; the first can be found about May. The nest is formed of small twigs, woven together, and lined with fine fibres and horsehair. The eggs are four or five in number and are of a pale blue colour with brownish-black spots.

Treatment of Fresh-caught Bullies.

Bullfinches should not be caught in spring, as they usually have mates then, and if taken will pine away and die. A Bullie can be caught in three ways, viz., (1) By a spring trap and call bird; (2) by limed twigs; and (3) by nets. These methods have been fully described in CAGE BIRDS many times. Fresh-caught birds should, at first, be fed on whatever they were feeding on when caught. It is advisable to put them together in a small outdoor aviary, with plenty of natural food and plenty of water for bathing purposes, they being very fond of bathing.

Our aviary is 4ft.x3ft.x2ft.; in an aviary of this size they are easily tamed. They should be then accustomed gradually to seed.

Those wanted for exhibition purposes should then be caged off separately, and given berries only, from the hand; this not only tames them, but imparts to them that rich red colour which all fanciers like to see.

Hand-rearing Young.

Some fanciers like to hand-rear Bullfinches. If it is your intention to do so remember that the birds must not be taken from the nest until they are well feathered; this provision saves a lot of time and trouble, and the birds grow up to be much larger and stronger than those taken too early. To rear such a nest, take a fresh egg, boil it for about ten minutes, cut it up fine and mix with two Osborne biscuits finely ground. Damp some pieces of bread with milk, and add a little sugar. Mix some of this with the egg mixture in suitable quantities. Give this to the birds, and as they grow older increase the bread and milk mixture. The youngsters should be fed frequently from morning till night, and should be given only a small quantity at a time. Stuffing must be avoided, as they cannot digest much at a time, and a lot of birds become unhealthy and die from overfeeding.

It is essential to have hand-reared birds if you desire them to pipe. The tune you desire them to acquire must be whistled over to them every time before feeding. When they begin to whistle a few notes they should be encouraged—give them some dainty tit-bits—and, with perseverance they can be taught to whistle a tune and sometimes two airs correctly.

The whistling process should be continued until after the moult, as the birds are apt to forget during that period what you are trying to teach them. It is advisable to keep them away from untaught birds, or they may renounce their artificial air for their natural song. The period of tuition is about nine months.

The Way to Moult Bullies.

The Bullie, like other British hardbills, begins to moult about the end of July. We find that this species moults out far better in an outdoor aviary than in cages, as the birds have more room in which to exercise, and therefore moult out much quicker. The cages, if these are used, should be as large as possible, and be hung out in the open whenever the weather permits, but never in rain. Never place a bird in the direct sun-rays, as this draws out the colour. The birds should have plenty of berries—blackberries especially— as these are natural colouring agents. We don't agree, personally, with the use of artificial colouring matter for Bullfinches, as the natural ones are better for the birds, and give better results.

If moulted in an aviary, the birds should be brought in and caged as soon as they are properly moulted.

The Exhibition Bullfinch.

An exhibition Bullfinch should possess the following qualities: First, it should be a chubby bird; secondly, it must have a dense glossy cap; thirdly, it must boast well defined wing bars; fourthly, its feathers should be of a silky texture, the back to be free from any smoky appearance; next, the wings and tail should be well carried, and the breast colour must be as rich as posible.

If the above advice on moulting be carried out properly, the birds will not need any "getting-up" for the show-bench. A bath should be given every day. Before sending a bird out to an exhibition the bird should be thoroughly accustomed to the show-cage and also to strange people. The Bullfinch looks best when staged in a cage, the interior and wires of which are enamelled dark green. Birds should be dispatched, whenever possible, so as to reach the show the night before the exhibition opens, as they then have time to settle down before judging time arrives. It is not advisable to exhibit a bird too often; a lot of birds are spoilt by this means.

The subject of these notes is a very great favourite with the ladies, and makes a very affectionate pet. On account, too, of its hardy and healthy nature it is a good bird for the beginner. I find that Bullfinches thrive well on two parts canary, two parts teasel, a quarter part rape (summer), a quarter part linseed, with a little sunflower seed every day. Hemp should be given sparingly, as it has a tendency to turn the breast feathers black. Fed on the above-named mixture and given plenty of clean water for drinking and bathing purposes our birds have always thrived, and we have never in all our experience had a bird ill. A further thing about the Bullfinch which recommends it, is the fact that the hen is valuable in the hybrid breeder's hands.

We may say in conclusion that the time and trouble devoted to this beautiful bird are amply repaid in the pleasure derived therefrom.

Notes from Erin.

CORK'S valuable challenge cups will next be contested for at Sligo Show. Mr. Hawkins, the well-known South of Ireland Yorkshire enthusiast, is leading. Mr. Keating, of Dundalk, is making a strong fight for the Y.C.C.B.'s Senior Cup.

IT is with regret that I have heard that two of our Dundalk fanciers' stock show signs of a soft moult. This is too bad, as forthcoming shows will probably be without their support. It is to be hoped that this moult will confine itself to one or two birds in their rooms.

AT Cork City I am informed that owing to General Elections and the unsettled state of things at present a show will probably not be held until the end of January or early in February. The well-known Cork Society always caters well for fanciers, by granting a good classification, and by giving a large number of valuable specials.

SLIGO C.B.S. Show will be held on January 11th and 12th. Schedules are now ready. This club annually holds one of the most successful shows in Ireland. I consider their show room about the best in Ireland. Immediately after judging is over the exhibits are railed off and the public are not allowed within three or four feet of the staging, thus preventing handling or frightening the exhibits. The show this year will again be held under the patronage of the Cork and P.C.B.S., and the classification is undoubtedly the largest I have seen offered by any society. It is hoped fanciers will make this year a record for the club. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) is appointed to judge.

IT will be observed that the Novices are not forgotten by the Sligo Club, as there are ten classes for them—four in Norwich section and six in Yorkshire section. It is hoped the novice fanciers of Ireland will mark their appreciation by sending a bumping entry, and thus give a lesson to societies which apparently ignore the novice.

"CLOSED RING."

Wild-Bird Life.

The Seashore in Winter.

To the observer of wild bird life the winter months are as full of interest as any time of the year. Especially is this the case if he has the good fortune to be a dweller near the seashore. No doubt the best part of England for the observation of bird life is the Norfolk coast. It lies close to the line of flight taken by our winter migrants from across the wild North Sea, and as many of these birds are waders and dwellers by the sea, there is always something of interest going on. But there are other parts where, during winter, wild fowl may be found. On the Kentish coast, bordering the estuary of the Thames, there are miles of flat marsh lands intersected with creeks and ditches, and bounded by a solid sea wall, where birds of all kinds congregate in hundreds during the dark days of winter. To many there is a feeling of loneliness when on these marshes, to others the wide stretches of flat country have an especial charm, so much so that men born and bred on the marsh lands cannot endure the hills and valleys—they want more air and space. The miles of sea wall bordering the land makes a natural shelter for the seeker after wild creatures. Looking over the top on the widening expanse of shore, laid bare by the falling tide, the observer with good eyesight will find plenty to interest him. As far as the eye can reach it is dotted here and there with restless white flecks. Without the aid of the glasses we can make them out to be mostly Gulls, following the receding tide for food left bare upon the mud and sand. Groups here and there are resting or quietly making their toilet, each bird with beak pointing to the wind, for although the Gull is quite at home in all weathers, he is none the less careful not to get his feathers ruffled by the breeze. Among them a few birds are noted of nearly double the size of the majority; these are apparently the great Black-backed Gulls. They look like veritable giants beside the commoner birds.

The Breeding of Lancashire Canaries.

A Lecture delivered by W. HARDY before the Oldham and Dis. C.B.S. on Dec. 13.

Mr. Sharples (president) occupied the chair, supported by Messrs. Cope (secretary), and Messrs. Young and Ackroyd (vice-presidents). After explaining the object of the lectures, he called on their respected treasurer, Mr. W. Hardy, to give his lecture on the Lancashire Canary.

Where Success Lies.

Mr. Hardy said: I have just put together these remarks in the endeavour to assist you in the breeding of the Lancashire Canary. If any of you are thinking of commencing with this variety I should advise you to get a couple of sets from a reliable breeder; let them be the best you can get hold of, as it is in the selection of your first stock that your success lies. Get one pair each from different strains, so that you will be able to start with pairs that are unrelated. The first set I should get is a ticked yellow Plainhead cock, 18 months old, and a couple of young buff coppy hens, one clear and one ticked; the second set a ticked buff coppy cock, 18 months old, and a clear yellow coppy (young) hen and a clear yellow Plainhead (young) hen. My reasons for suggesting an 18-months' old cock are, first, that you get size from the sire, and secondly, that these cocks are more vigorous than young ones. You, therefore, stand a chance of getting stronger youngsters, as I do not think a Lancashire cock is at his best for breeding purposes till he has had a full moult. If, too, you get young hens you have a chance of breeding for two or three seasons with them before requiring to get fresh stock.

With No. 2 set you will be able to double-coppy. When buying your coppy hens be careful to ask the breeder if they have been bred in the ordinary way—that is, coppy to Plainhead—as in no case must you double-coppy twice in succession. When you double-coppy be sure to get birds that are perfect in coppy and well filled in at the back of the head.

Rough or "Mop-headed" Young.

In breeding after the manner I have described you may get some rough, or "mop-headed" young from the last set. These in the following season should be paired to the young ones from your No. 1 set, which have been bred coppy to Plainhead, and should show signs of an improvement in the size of the coppy in the following season.

As size is an important consideration in Lancashires you will have to double-buff or you will not be able to get the size or the length of head feather which are greatly prized by breeders. Every two or three seasons is often enough for this purpose, and then I do not think you will lose anything in colour by so doing.

It is customary to breed clear birds to ticked ones, but if you are breeding them nearly all clear ones, it is advisable to run two ticked birds together, as you will generally find that the ticked ones are the best headed and most massive birds.

After one or two season's breeding you should, in the ordinary way, have bred one or two that are particularly good in some one point—size of bird or coppy. It will improve your stock if you fix these points by judicious inbreeding and establish it in your strain. It will be worse than useless to attempt to inbreed your stock if you have not some good point to do it for; see, too, that the birds you inbreed with are in perfect health.

If at any time you own a pair of birds that have bred you some good stock do not be induced to part them thinking you have another one the same strain that will do quite as well, or you may regret it as many have done before.

As regards the points, the Lancashire Canary Association standard is as follows. Head, coppy, 25 points; neck for fulness and thickness, 10; back, round full, and long, 10; wings, meeting at tips, 5; length of bird, 20; quality of feather, 5; position, upstanding, 10; condition and cleanliness, 10; colour, 5; total, 100. The typical Lancashire should be a large bird of good length and stoutness, and should stand boldly and well up. The coppy should be round and full, densely packed with feather, without any split or break in its shape or formation, drooping all round and lying close at back of the head, so as to leave no roughness of feather at the back of the neck. The centre should be clearly defined, and the feathers radiated from the centre. The shoulders should be broad, the back and tail long. The chest should be bold and wide, and the legs long and sturdy in appearance. The bird should move with ease and elegance. When the bird is standing upright in its cage the tail should droop slightly, giving it the appearance of being slightly curved.

The description of the Plainhead is similar to that of the coppy, with the exception of head properties. In the Plainhead the head should be broad and long, and have overhanging eyebrows, thereby giving the bird a sulky appearance. The head feather should be good in quality, and must hang evenly. It must not be whipped or tucked up behind the eyes.

The Lancashire Canary should not stand across the perch, nor should it posses a hollow (not well filled-in) back. Last, but not least, if anyone intends starting to breed Lancashires he must get some good reliable feeders if he wishes to have a successful season. If any friend, or fancier, present has any questions to ask that are not touched on in these notes, I shall be pleased to answer them to the best of my ability.

The Discussion.

Mr. Martin: Will double-coppying improve length of head feather?—Yes; width as well.

Mr. Young: What do you consider the best feeders?—Any small active hens, such as Borders or Germans.

Mr. Ackroyd: What do you think is the number of young to be reared in one nest?—Two or three, as they have a better chance of being well fed.

Mr. Martin: Is double-coppying the only way to gain head feather?—Yes; the only sure way.

Mr. Steeple: Why have not the Lancashires the same wing carriage as the Yorkshires, Norwich, or Lizard?—As the same attention is not paid to wing carriage in Lancashires as in the other varieties, it is seldom we notice these small failings. A bird that does not have a quick moult is more liable to this failure—evidently due to being quill bound.

Mr. Young: There is less of it in Norwich through their being allowed to moult in flight cages.

Mr. Harrison: I had one that never moulted for two years, and yet it bred all right.—I should think it was a marvel.

Mr. G. Fitton: Why is there so much blindness in Crests and Lancashires?—I think blindness is caused through close inbreeding and with birds that have not been perfect in sight.

Mr. Young said he had bred one Norwich that went blind.

Mr. Harrison: I had a Scotch Fancy born blind.—Mr. Hardy: They are all born blind. (Laughter.)

Mr. Fitton: How would you pair hens that are short in body and legs?—I should pair them to cocks that are long in body and legs.

Mr. Lowe: Birds that are short on legs are so through the use of Crest blood. Blakston's works illustrate Lancashires with plenty of length and good on legs.

Mr. Martin: Is it a fact that double-buffing causes split coppies?—You might get split coppies thus pairing. These in the ordinary way should have been Plainheads.

Mr. Young: Why do the Crests beat Lancashires for size to-day?—The foremost men in the Crest variety purchased some of the best Lancashires, and by double-buffing and double-cresting have thus improved the Crest out of all recognition with the birds depicted in Blakston's masterpiece.

Mr. Steeple: What is the difference between a Crest and a coppy?—A coppy should be three parts round and should fall away behind; a Crest is full round, or hoop-shape.

A discussion here took place respecting the passed birds at the recent Rochdale Town Hall show for exhibiting too much droop.

Mr. Hardy: It is utterly impossible to get birds with any length of coppy that do not droop. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Steeple moved that the best thanks of the meeting be given the lecturer for the valuable information he had given. Mr. G. Fitton seconded the thanks, and said it gave him great pleasure to do so, as the lecture had been very interesting and full of points. Mr. Young moved a vote of thanks to the chairman, which concluded the meeting.

Can Birds Smell?

A German doctor says that birds are unable to smell. He has shot a deer in South Africa, hidden the carcase after disembowelling it, and returning some time afterwards he has found the vultures busy on the offal, totally unaware of the carcase hidden close to them.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Cause and Effect.

"All for Ireland."—You may set down the position of the cage hanging in the window as the root cause of the bird making these peculiar noises, as though it were cracking seeds. As I am frequently pointing out, it is almost impossible to prevent exposure to draughts in such a position, and even if there was no such exposure in your case, as you say there are no draughts, you still cannot avoid constant and often extreme, changes of temperature. You should move the cage further into the room, to a comfortable and fairly equable place, but not too near a fire nor in a draughty place. You might also see that it is not troubled with red mites. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Twice a week give separately a small teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternating days between giving sponge cake, add 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil to the drinking water, and shake well together.

An Outdoor Aviary.

"Cheshire Cat."—There are several important points besides mere size about an outdoor aviary, of which you make no mention, but which may make all the difference between the structure being suitable or altogether unsuited for your purpose So far as size is concerned, it would do very nicely for about a dozen—not more—Canaries for breeding, say, three cocks and nine hens. But to make it quite suitable, the closed in portion should be snug and comfortable, quite free from gaps in the boards, or similar vents for draughts, and nicely fitted up with perches, and sleeping places, such as wicker travelling cages, with the short bars removed, so as to make it sufficiently attractive for the birds to seek to roost in it voluntarily, instead of remaining out in the open wire portion. Then the whole structure should be perfectly free from damp, and if possible, well sheltered from rains and cold winds on all sides from north-east to west round by north. Given these conditions, any hardy strain of Canary would not only live, but would flourish, in such an aviary. The answers to your other questions are: (1) Start about the middle to end of April, and take advantage of a spell of nice mild weather to turn birds out. (2) Any hardy strain which has been bred, and kept, under quite normal conditions. Common Germans, Borders, Norwich, or Yorkshires, are the most likely to fulfil these conditions. (3) Canary and summer ad lib. in separate vessels. A mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, millet, and one part each linseed, black rape, and teazle. Give a little every second day, or daily in very cold weather. A small quantity of crushed dry biscuit, sponge cake, or bread and milk, once or twice a week. (4) Yes, they should thrive through the winter.

Still Moulting.

J. E.—You are probably keeping the birds in an unsuitable place, where they are exposed either to cold draughts or extreme variations of temperature. See that they are kept in a fairly equable temperature, not necessarily very high, but just away from the cold, chilly side, quite free from draughts, and not too near a fire or burning lights in the evenings. Examine cages well for presence of red mites, and if any are found, eradicate them at once. Feed on a staple of plain Canary seed only. Every second day give separately to each bird half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of ripe banana, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and also give on these days a pinch of hemp seed. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for one day, and afterwards give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel in the water every second day. Continue this treatment for a fortnight, and if birds are quite well in that time, suspend treatment for a week, and then re-commence and continue it for another fortnight in the same order. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager, and take "Our Canaries," now issuing in monthly parts at 6d. These will give you a thorough knowledge of the subject. Thanks for good wishes re this paper. Glad you find it so useful.

A Mating Question.

C. F. P.—In the first place you cannot breed pure Rollers from a Roller cock and Border Fancy hen The youngsters would be first crosses pure and simple, and although the two breeds blend very well and would produce very good songsters, you could not properly call the progeny pure Rollers. If you wish to preserve the purity of the Rollers, and are only anxious to get green colour, your proper plan is to get Green Roller hens, as the green colour exists among this breed already, and you should have no difficulty whatever in obtaining it. You omit to say whether your two Roller cocks are marked in any way. If not, you must not expect a large proportion of Greens the first year, as there will be many variegated, and some ticks and clears. For the yellow cock get a buff self Green hen as sound as possible in colour of wings and tail, and on throat and vent, and with dark legs and beak. Avoid the least show of foulness, or light feather, in either wing or tail. For the buff cock, get a yellow self green hen which equally complies with the above description for the buff self green. In the following season mate the heaviest variegated of the youngsters back to sound self greens and you will produce a good proportion of foul greens and some selfs.

Suitable Mates (Britisher).—(1) The two clear yellows are certainly not a suitable pair for a novice to start with. Get a lightly ticked or wing marked buff cock for the yellow hen, and a lightly marked buff hen for the yellow cock. It is quite possible the hen may feed her young in the coming season, although she refused to do so last season. It would, however, be advisable to put up a pair of common birds to act as feeders in case of necessity. (2) I should have serious doubts of this bird being a cock. Still, there are some such exceptional cases which are dismal failures as vocalists, and if he is really a cock his silence will not necessarily prevent him breeding successfully. But I would advise you to try to get his sex verified by some experienced breeder in your locality before the breeding season arrives, in order to prevent waste of time and disappointment.

Cinnamon or Green (Unionist).—I cannot gather whether the bird you wish to mate is a Cinnamon or a Green. If a Cinnamon, the Green cock from which you say it was bred had a big dash of Cinnamon blood in his veins, and this bird would be practically almost pure cinnamon. I would not, therefore, advise you to breed it back to Greens, especially as you seem to desire a pure green colour. You should mate this bird back to cinnamon, or cinnamon-marked, or clear pink-eyed, and get a pure sound, green dark-eyed cock, with no known trace of cinnamon blood, for breeding pure Greens. Sorry I cannot tell you the precise feeding value of Burdock seed for Canaries, as I have never used it to any extent. A little occasionally in the special seed mixture would doubtless be useful as a variety, but I rather doubt its utility in large quantities. Get "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants, for Cage Birds," 1/2, post free, from our Manager, which will clear up a lot of these matters for you.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

The Ailments of Birds (T. Allen).—It is curious, but it so happens that an article on the lines you mention will be one of the attractions of CAGE BIRDS forthcoming 1911 ANNUAL. You should place an order for a copy; it will be out in a few weeks' time.

Cock Bullies and Hen Canaries (G. B. F.).—This is a question I have answered an awful number of times. It has not yet been satisfactorily proved that a cock Bullfinch will breed with hens other than those of his own species; it has been stated (which is not quite the same thing, of course), that hybrids have been produced by a cock Bullie when paired to a hen Canary.

Shore Lark for Song (F. Shore).—The Shore Lark has a song, but it is a poor sort of song compared with that possessed by the Skylark. And judging by my own experience, it is a shy vocalist in captivity, for I have only had one bird that made any real attempt at singing (I think as the result of a free supply of live ants' eggs), whereas I have had several that never uttered a note. Whether this is the experience of other fanciers I can't at the moment say.

Identity of Bird (B. Harriman).—Judging by your description, I should say that you have a cock Reed Bunting. If the bird is a warm tone of brown on the upper surface, and grey underneath, and with a longish, forked tail, this is of a certainty its species. It will eat practically nothing but Canary seed. In addition, it should be given a few mealworms frequently, and a little of a good insectile food; also sprinkle a few good ants' eggs on top of the seed now and again.

An Outdoor Aviary (Aviary). I think the place you describe is very promising indeed. It will easily accommodate 50 birds, and upwards, the size of a Bullfinch, and they should flourish and be a source of great pleasure. It is not altogether advisable to turn out absolutely fresh-caught birds; it is much better, and avoids many losses, if they are kept for a time (which need be but short) in a cage or small flight, to get them used to a captive existence, and to their seed diet. It might not be safe now to turn out Canaries until the spring; everything depends upon how and where they were bred, I strongly advise you to protect the end of the outer flight, which faces the east, and the side which faces the north—not necessarily all the year round, but during the wilder weather of winter and early spring. You could achieve this by means of a stout tarpaulin (though in the high winds it is difficult to prevent this flapping violently about), or, better still, a movable wooden screen, or a glazed screen. Your aviary would then be very snug, and a most excellent place.

Two Matters (R. G. P. Nelson).—You cannot do anything to bring the deformed claw to a normal shape and position. It can't be nitered now. So far as I can gather from your sketch, however, it will not be at all a serious disadvantage to the bird if it (the Starling) is good in all the points that go to make up the exhibition specimen. It would be worse if the claw was missing. Keep it cut fairly short. (2) Sanitary distemper is one of the best possible coverings for the insides of cages, aviaries, and the like, and not in any way injurious. The brand you mention is very good.

Loss of Feathers (George K.).—Please note rule 9: the rules must be observed. There are many causes of birds losing feathers—unnatural food, over-heated, stuffy rooms, skin diseases, the presence of skin parasites, or of bird lice, etc. I should think the latter might be at the root of the trouble, seeing that you have several birds losing plumage from head and neck. Couldn't you give me a little more information? Are the birds continually pecking amongst their feathers, scratching themselves, and the like? Do they get a bath, or a spray, frequently?

Fails in Colour of Blaze (Anxious).—Some Goldfinches are naturally pale in the colour of their blaze, and no system of treatment can heighten this colour (legitimate treatment, of course). It is necessary to choose a rich-coloured Finch in the beginning—a Jonque—with a "face" that is both deep and clear (free from black) in colour. The blaze will then come up a fine, deep crimson if the bird does a good moult (quick and early), and is properly treated, and fed so that he gets into high condition and a tight, glossy state of plumage. The method of feeding is given in detail in the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch (post free, 2½d., from the offices of CAGE BIRDS).

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

What Bird?

Scottie: It is rather difficult to form a definite idea as to your bird. It would appear to be a Madagascar Weaver. This bird has a Finch-like beak, and its diet would be Canary, white millet, and millet sprays, with a couple of mealworms or other insects daily. On the other hand, it might be either a Pine or Scarlet Grosbeak. Cannot you make a rough diagram of the bird, and you could give it a mixture of hemp, Canary, sunflower, teazle, rape, and oats; apple cores and any other fruit it cares for; two or three mealworms, and a few ants' cocoons (as bought). If the bird turns out to be a Grosbeak, you had better repeat query as to treatment, etc., to our Mr. G. E. Weston. It will in the interval do well enough on treatment given above.

Quarters for Foreigners.

Beginner: (1) If you can secure light and air without damp or draught, the arrangements you quote will answer well enough. (2, 3) These cages will answer well enough, but the all wire one should have a screen formed of two pieces of 11 inch board nailed together at right angles, fixed along one end or both ends as screens for nest boxes. Put in pairs of Zebra Finches and White Java Sparrows,

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

or leave the cages as they are and put in one pair each of green and yellow Budgerigars, and in the other cage either a pair of Black-cheeked Lovebirds or Redrump Parrakeets. The latter are a little larger than a Thrush, and full details as to breeding them in a cage are given in Foreign Birds for Beginners, 1s, 1d. post free, from our manager. All the above would thrive without artificial heat.

Parrot in Moult.

E.P.: This bird would be the better for a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. Will colour the drinking water with same. Damp a crust of household bread, a piece of biscuit with water, and dust with flowers of sulphur. Let the supply of fruit be liberal. Most Parrots are fond of apple (especially the core), grapes, and sweet orange. A few nuts may also be given. If the bird will not take the damped bread as above, then it will be best to supply for a time a little boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day) daily—boil till soft, drain away all water, and then dust with flowers of sulphur. I should also spray the bird twice weekly either with a weak solution of fir tree oil or quassia chips. At this season take special precautions against a chill till the bird is dry again. Note: The bowels must be kept moving freely, but should not be watery-loose—a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water occasionally in lieu of the chemical food will effect this. Report progress in two or three weeks.

What Birds (E. T., Jun.) I shall have much pleasure in giving you a list in next issue, or will send you one by post in the course of the next fortnight. We shall be glad to hear from you.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

An Acknowledgement (G. C. Morgan).—Thanks for your kindly letter; contents duly noted.

Two Items (A.S.T.).—(1) He buys birds from noted English breeders, and (2) supplies birds that can, and do, win. You may confirm this, if your friend requires it, by obtaining a copy of the catalogue he issues, and perusing the testimonials therein.

Friendly Admonishment (A. M. Firth). The same to you; and many of 'em. The poor old Editor is always striving after the ideal, and sometimes (usually as the result of a good dinner and a generous helping of soda water) he feels that at last he has it within his grasp. But your postcard, like the double helping of pudding he incautiously negotiated on 'Xmas day, lies heavy on him. His only consolation is in the fact that you are wrong on one point out of the two, for only part of the report in question was published.

Owing to the Xmas Holidays, a number of queries have necessarily to wait an answer until next week. —Editor.

The Shows.

WIGAN ROLLER C.C.

Singing Contest, held Dec. 16 and 17, at the Legs of Man Assembly Rooms, Market Arcade. The arrangements were good, and the secretary, Mr. W. Ridge, was painstaking and untiring in his efforts. Messrs. W. Massey and G. Wareing judged, and their awards appeared to give satisfaction. The show was a great success.

WHITTINGTON MOOR.

Annual show held Dec. 27th. The Victoria Hall was utilised for the purpose. Entries came up well, exceeding last year's total. President, Mr. J. T. Roe, is one of the most enthusiastic fanciers it has been our pleasure to meet for some time. The committee consists of a band of very willing workers, and great praise is due to the following for the manner in which they officiated, viz., Messrs. Hulley, Blank, Thompson, Dodd, Thorpe, Roe Harris, and Boyce. Treasurer is Mr. W. Smith. The Secretary, Mr. E. Barber is young and energetic, courteous, and obliging, and is the right man in the right place. Staging was of a neat description. The stewards were Messrs. G. Dodd, J. T. Roe, Buck, Blank, Boyce, and Smith. Each and all deserve complimenting for the exertions they put forth. Judging was over in good time; prize cards were displayed promptly, and the management throughout was excellent. Our Whittington friends are genuine fanciers and deserve all the support the Fancy can extend to them. Mr. J. T. Roe presented a handsome silver cup, to be won outright (members) for most points. The lucky fancier was Mr. J. Hunt, who staged a very fine team. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) placed the awards, which were well received.

Classes for the Scotch Fancy Canary.

SIR,—Where, oh, where, are the Scotch Fancy Canaries? The entries have been small, and the whole classification will have to be revised if things are to improve. From a show point of view, eight or ten entries are not sufficient. Let us have a couple of classes filled in place of twelve or sixteen starved classes, with nothing to look at in them.

SCOTCH FANCY.

Yorkshire Novice Classes at Blackburn Show.

SIR,—I think "Fair Play" would be doing the correct thing by giving the exhibitor's name. If all such were exposed—and they want it—it would be doing societies and exhibitors a good turn. I don't think any society would disregard an objection of this sort, even if held two or three days after a show. Prize money thus obtained could no doubt be recovered.

JOHN LEALMAN.

The Close Season for Goldfinches.

SIR,—As a bird lover for the past 25 years I have come to the conclusion that the close season for Goldfinches should be extended until October 1. In my early days I have seen young Goldfinches hatched in May, but now there are none hatched sooner than the middle of July. This present year I was keeping a watch on a pair of birds that were about my father's orchard to see when the young would be fit to be caught. The first nest: the young left the nest about August 10; the second nest: the young were hatched about October 1, and reared, so that they must be Greypates yet if they are alive. As for the first nest, a person I know caught the young about the end of August, and they were so young that they all died. So, as I say, the close season should be extended, say, from May 1 to October 1. One bird catcher told me he caught over 50 young birds in September. I would like to see a stop put to this. If you can do anything through your paper, CAGE BIRDS, I would like it very much.

JAMES BOGUE.

Ireland.

British Birds at Lancashire Shows.

SIR,—As another old reader of your incomparably good CAGE BIRDS, I should just like to say a little on the above subject. "Brown 'Un" (whoever he is) deserves the highest congratulation. He is quite right, and I have friends who are of the same opinion. It is simply a waste of money entering your British birds at these shows. I think that when the visitors notice these glaring cages given leading honours, instead of birds with superior merit, it is time someone spoke on the subject. I also agree as to uniform cages, the same as other birds have to be shown in, and, better still, as to the rad'us; then the small shows would perhaps get entries. I hope some more able pen than mine will give a few lines on this subject. We novice exhibitors don't mean to show next year if it is not adopted. I, for one, keep my birds at home to look at, rather than pay hard-earned cash for one or two exhibitors to win (I mean have), when it is only for the sake of advertisement that they show. I hope the judges enjoy their Christmas, and I wish CAGE BIRDS a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year. Also thank you for your weekly treats. Success to the paper devoted to fair play to our feathered friends.

SEEN IT.

SIR,—I do not shine as a Scribe, and, in consequence, rarely indulge in letter writing to the Press generally, but I am tempted, on reading the letter from "Brown 'Un,' and recent correspondence regarding drinkers, seed boxes, etc., to enter your columns. I am a novice of about three years' standing, have shown locally for the first time this season, and have had fair success. I am told that my show cages could not be equalled at the Palace. I have not "swept the hoards," so it is surely reasonable to conclude that your correspondents' contention fails, if not altogether, in considerable degree. Again are we to assume that the "large exhibitor" is a man of such substance that he pays pounds, where others—like myself—pay shillings, or pence, with proportionate result? My own case refutes that also, because I make my own show and stock cages—fronts excepted—paint and finish them. I suggest that your correspondent is lacking in "love for the thing," and feel sure, having lately had agreeable proof, he could, if very keen, equal the large exhibitor in the direction complained of. Let the cage be "standard" in size, shape, and colour, if you will—I think black depressing these watery days—but why should it be roughly finished, loose jointed, with colour (jaundiced) laid on in furrows and blotches, in short, "cheap and nasty"? It was with feelings of trepidation I made my initial entries last July, having been told that my cages would disqualify me and the essence of the reason supplied amounted to this, that I had been too painstaking and thoughtful. But, Sir, I hold that it is quite possible, on the other hand to send up such an "outrage on nature," in the shape of a cage, as would dwell for all time in the memory of the most inartistic judge. I have seen some! Last week I had the pleasure of winning special for "best staged bird." (I did not sweep the board.) The prize was given by a keen amateur, with the view to increasing the desire for better staging among the members of our little club The Medway Cage Bird Society. Now, "Brown 'Un,' if you are in earnest, you will find plenty of help and guidance from CAGE BIRDS and its publications, which will enable you to rise above the ordinary standard, and reap gratification, not disappointment.

D. FERGUSON.

The Birds in Winter.

SIR,—Once more I take the liberty to trespass on your valuable space on behalf of the wild birds. My own experience of the difficulties wild birds have to get sufficient food and water during frosty weather was during a recent spell of frost, when we had ice on the local park lakes very nearly one inch thick. We have a large garden at the rear of our house, and I was turning it over. When I started not a bird of any sort was to be seen; but in the space of about half an hour I had round me about twenty Starlings, half a dozen Robins, and Sparrows innumerable. But the Robins had the pick of the feast, I supplied, one even perching on my spade whilst it was still in my hand, and not once but many a time. I was never further than three feet away from them all the while I was working. They did not seem to fear me in the least. As for the Starlings and Sparrows they had to "look on," or else now and then make a sudden dash away with a grub or something. Since that morning I have made it a practice of giving the birds all table scraps and now and then a handful of mixed seed, so that we have both a caged up aviary and a "wild one" as well.

The Exhibition of British Birds by Novices.

SIR,—I would like to see more of the common softbills shown by novices, and this might easily be brought about by having one rule for them all over the kingdom. There are no open novice classes provided for British birds at the open shows, so some clubs allow the novice to enter his British birds at any open show and win if he can without it affecting his standing as a novice in the Canary section; and I contend this is the only sensible way. But other societies count the British bird wins against the novice, and though in all probability his Canaries are hardly good enough to win in novice members' classes, he is at once dubbed a full-blown professional. What an encouragement for "the backbone of the Fancy"! I have known a novice buy a newly-caught Linnet for a few coppers, moult, and steady it, show it in the open, get in the money, and be forced thereby into the professional ranks before he could hold his own among the novices with his Norwich Canaries. A rule like this would be all right for one of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic operas, but is a big stumbling block to the Fancy, and I would plead for its alteration

A Railway Clerk's Long Sleep!

How the Ebbw Vale Exhibits "Got Left."

SIR,—Kindly allow us to inform exhibitors who favoured the Ebbw Valo Society with entries at our late show (Nov. 30th) on the promise made through the Fancy Press that their exhibits would be forwarded in time for judging at Pengam and Pentre Bach shows, that we, the Committee and officers, did all in our power to fulfil the promise. We therefore regret to hear from several exhibitors that their exhibits did not arrive in time for judging. Perhaps a word in explanation will convince exhibitors that we are not to blame. Before making our promise through the Press we approached the L. and N. W. Rly. Co. and were informed they would despatch in time. This was the only communication we received up to Nov. 29th, the day preceding our show. We were then waited upon by both station masters from L. and N. W. Rly. and G. W. Rly. Cos.' who stated they had been instructed to inform us that they could not clear exhibits away on Wednesday night after the show. In the face of this and in our endeavour to carry out our promise, one of our secretaries, Mr. Cook, kindly arranged for his pony cart to deliver all the exhibits to the station. This pony and cart were at work from 9.15 p.m. to 12.30 a.m., and practically all the exhibits with the exception of 3 lots for Pengam, were delivered into the Railway Co.'s hands; these latter were delivered at the station at 7.40 a.m. Thursday morning, 25 minutes before the departure of the first train, and quite in time for dispatch. However, we were surprised to find, on journeying to the station, that only 6 or 7 lots had been booked out. The Secretary, Mr. F. H. Cook, immediately complained to the station master. The excuse made by the station master was that the clerk had overslept himself and had not had time to book them out! The station master therefore promised to communicate by wire to the station masters at Pentre Bach and Pengam the fact that there were a number of exhibits left behind. It was pointed out to him the impossibility of getting exhibits to Pengam, as they would not arrive there until 11.30 a.m., whereas had they been despatched according to our arrangement, they would have reached there at 9.30 a.m., ample time for judging. In perusing the list of prize winners at Pentre Bach and Pengam, we notice some birds amongst the winners which had been sent from Ebbw Vale. Now this, I think, points favourably to us, because if one lot could arrive in time the others should have been there too. Therefore the fault lies entirely with the Railway Co. We paid charges from Ebbw Vale to Pengam and Pentre Bach at a loss of 5s. 2d.—14s. 8d. paid out and 9s. 6d. received.

New Society for Newport & Dist.

SIR,—A very enthusiastic meeting was held at the Old Bush Hotel on December 20, when it was decided to form a cage bird society, to be known as "The Newport and District Cage Bird Society." The next meeting will be held on January 3rd, 1911, at 7.30 p.m., at the above-named hotel. All interested are asked to communicate with me.

Untimely Death of a Noted Crest-bred.

SIR,—Evins Bros. say "on the arrival of our birds home from Gateshead show we found our young green Crest-bred dead at bottom of cage." I don't know whether Messrs. Evins Bros. are casting any reflection on the Gateshead Society or not, but as I packed the birds I think it will be as well if the following is stated. When the bird arrived at the show it was found to be in a very exhausted condition. The Judge's attention was drawn to it, and every care was taken to try and revive it, but unfortunately it died on the Friday night. I understand the Secretary acquainted Messrs. Evins with the facts of the case, and also that a reply was sent by Messrs. Evins accepting the explanation.

The Use of Artificial Heat in the Birdroom.

SIR,—May I crave a small space in which to heartily endorse the remarks of your correspondent "Moderation" on the above subject? As he says, it is not a summer-like temperature we want to maintain, but some apparatus to guard against sudden variations of temperature; and in my opinion this is absolutely correct. Another point, which he does not mention, is

You will be Delighted

WITH OUR

BIRTHDAY NUMBER.

IT WILL BE WITH YOU SHORTLY.

dampness. Why, hardly a week passes but Mr. Claude St. John warns some correspondent in the queries column against the evil effects of damp. We all know that a room in which a fire is never lighted will in time become damp, and, therefore, we light a fire in a room which is only used occasionally, simply for the sake of the furniture. If we study our furniture, how much more ought we to look to the welfare of our birds. Personally, with my Yorkshires, I have had as little trouble as one could hope for. Such a thing as an egg-bound or non-feeding hen I have never had, and I attribute my success largely to the judicious use of a little heat, both prior to, and during, the early part of the breeding season. In conclusion, I may say that my apparatus cost less than ten shillings, is extremely simple and effective, and in use costs about three half-pence for ten hours' heat. Any fancier is welcome to come and see it, or, with the editor's permission, I may perhaps contribute a short article and sketch to our premier journal, CAGE BIRDS.

A. W. FARMER.

[We shall be pleased to receive and publish the article and sketch as suggested by our correspondent.—Editor, "C.B."]

SIR.—I never attempted to stifle or discourage fair and honest criticism, though one might imagine from the way in which "Moderation" informs me I must submit to it, that the reverse was the case. On the contrary, fair and open criticism, or even correction if necessary, I am always willing to listen to, and reply to; but when made under cover of a nom de plume I think one might reasonably expect to find it presented in a different tone to that which pervades this missive, which savours too strongly of the spirit of the proverbial tradesman's sign:—"Don't go over the way to be cheated; step in here." Why did not this self-constituted public critic send you a description of his excellent method instead of wishing to send it privately to a single enquirer, and thus give scores of others the same benefit, and also have the credit which is his due if he has evolved any unique method of more service than the usually known methods? Instead of doing so he seems to have mapped out all my own ideas and opinions on this subject to his own satisfaction from reading a reply to a single question, about the particulars of which he can know nothing at all. If he had read or acknowledged the advice given in more than one of my replies, in many articles from time to time in CAGE BIRDS and in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, he would have admitted that his own vaunted forty-five degrees is exactly the average standard I have always given for winter use when heat is applied. But when dealing with definite queries, if I consider that degree needs varying, either higher or lower, to meet the case, I unhesitatingly vary it. As my critic says, I take no especial pains to conceal my dislike for heat in birdoom—whenever it can be safely dispensed with (note the italics please)—but neither, I would remind him, do I persistently shout it from the housetops, so to speak, as these disciples of "a little heat" seem so often to consider necessary. After having literally several thousands of queries through my hands I could say much about these "little heat" theorists. Beyond this I will not waste your space further than to commend the several other letters in last issue on the subject to my critics notice, and others on both sides which I trust you will be asked to insert. It was surely a strange irony of late which brought Mr. P. Victor Williams' remarks anent the feelings of the fancier who goes to bed with an easy mind leaving his stock cosy and comfortable, and finds them next morning victims of an unforeseen mishap, and his own vivid pen picture of the worried fancier who goes to bed with an anxious mind expecting to find them ill at ease next morning. It is just as likely he will find them "peart" and lively. No, Mr. Williams' remarks quite take the sting out of "Moderation's" wail of anxiety.

CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

The Recent Bangor (Ireland) Show.

SIR,—Bangor (Co. Down) held their first show on December 17, and for a money-making venture I award them the palm. Their schedule states prize money as follows—1st 9s., 2nd 5s., 3rd 2s. 6d., with an entry fee of 2s. per bird. But nine birds must compete, otherwise half prize money will be paid; if only four birds, entrance fees only will be paid as prize money. So anyone can see they stand to lose—nothing! They must get 18s. before they pay full prize money, viz., 16s. 6d., and five entries before the unfortunate exhibitors receive 8s. 3d.; but, worst of all, they do not carry out their contract as per schedule, as in classes of four birds they only paid on three—instead of paying back entrance money as they state they only pay 6s. and grab the other 2s. It is a case with them of "Heads I win, tails you lose." They out-Shylock Shylock, as they want a pound and a half for every pound! Many of the Belfast exhibitors would not have supported the show but for its being a first venture, and they wished to give them some support, but I do not doubt the unattractiveness of their prize list kept many away, as well as reduced the entries of those who did exhibit. If the Bangor show committee hope to continue their show, they must offer better inducements to fanciers if they expect their support.

ULSTERMAN.

SIR,—I see in the "Notes from Erin" this week "Closed Ring" gives Larne C.B.S. well deserved praise for the manner in which they conducted their show. But I doubt if the same can be said of Bangor as of Larne. I noticed a prominent Yorkshire exhibitor (who had travelled almost 100 miles to take his birds home that night) come into the hall and show the doorman an exhibitor's ticket. He passed on, but was quickly followed by two committee men and the secretary, and ordered to leave the hall. Apparently they have a spite against Yorkie exhibitors, as a few minutes previously another was treated in like manner! As they were the only strangers in the hall at the time of judging, I think the suggestion to the secretary by Mr. Alexander to let them remain inside would have been more fancierlike, and I was glad to see them come back again, and pay for admission and see their birds judged. However Bangor will not be troubled next year with the above-mentioned, and, I venture to say, with several others to whom I have been speaking. They had 27 open classes, and there was only one full. They will know next time fanciers don't send their exhibits out for 2s. specials, as this is what the majority of them were. In the report of the show you don't give the winners of specials; they were not given in the catalogue either. Some of your readers may enlighten me as to "what is a novice"? I understood if an exhibitor wins 3 firsts in novice classes he would have to show in champion classes. I also want to know if an exhibitor wins 3 firsts in members' classes, will he have to show in open classes in future?

Is It Cruel to Keep British Birds in Cages?

SIR,—I am a market gardener and a bird fancier. I have sixteen Linnets, all in the hop cages, and they are all in the best of health and on full song, both by daylight and lamplight. I turn them into a big box cage now and then to enable them to use their wings; then I put them back. I have had Linnets in hop cages for eleven years, and I think they are suited to Linnets. Now, if Mr. B. is short of birds, let him sow his seed in his garden, and they will be there too soon for him. But I suppose his "cake is baked." Plenty of working men have to go out and earn their breakfasts before they can have them. What are we to do with the birds—have all our crops eaten up? The district council is paying sixpence a dozen for birds' heads at Blackpool. We have "tons" of birds about here, and cannot get away from them. In all the gardens you have to "stand on" the seed you sow, or it is gone. If a man can make a few shillings with his clap-nets, let him. I think the man that keeps a bird in a cage and does not look after it should let it out or be punished very hard—those that use birds cruel, give it them cruel! It will be a lesson to them and to others. If we cannot catch birds and cage them they will simply have to be shot. I think this is more cruel than ever, for in one cartridge there are about one hundred and eighty pellets. Fired into a flock of birds, how many get away wounded? If the birds were all shot dead that would do, but you can find them lying in the fields here with both legs broken or shot off, so they cannot move to get food—starved to death. Let anybody go and watch the covert shooting and see the birds going away lamed. That is what I call cruel. I think it very hard lines for birds to be shot at and lamed. My own birds get 12 to 18 hours of feeding time; those outside about 8 hours.

GARDENER.

Proposed Cage Bird Society for Cheetham Hill, Manchester.

SIR,—I have often thought that a good strong society could be formed in this district. There are many fanciers living here who are members of other societies, and again, there are many who do not belong to any society at all. Prestwick and Heaton Park fanciers would find this a central place in which to meet. For those who have never been members a new society could offer many inducements which are often overlooked by the older societies. Anyhow, I shall be glad to know what Cheetham Hill fanciers and those on the outskirts think of this idea.

CHEETHAM HILL.

A Hint to Societies in the Liverpool District.

SIR,—I think if novices pay a 1d. for your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, and look down the club reports each week they will find all the secretaries of the various Liverpool and District clubs, place of meeting and time. The B'head C.F.A. meets every third Tuesday in the month at Ablett's Cafe Room. Now I am quite sure "A Novice" is a man who is held "in camera," and not the secretaries of the various clubs he mentions. I am quite sure some of the novices, so-called, were at the L.B.B.A. Old Show. If "A Novice" misses the Amalgamated Show, held on January 2nd, 1911, let him call or send a post-card, and I will oblige him with all the particulars of our Association. I have heard from a friend of mine you are not a novice. Perhaps you have had a misfortune—no one would give you a complimentary ticket. Now, novices, don't forget, send all your names and addresses, and I am quite sure if you fall out of one Society you will soon be in another.

Who is "Auld Reekie"?

SIR,—If I am to believe the writer of last week's letter, "Auld Reekie" is of the gentler sex. If so, she is remarkably thin-skinned, and I'm really very sorry she got such a shock on opening her Budie paper. But, beyond disclosing her sex, "Auld Reekie" hasn't said much, certainly, and this is a very strange thing for one of her sex. She speaks of her great sympathy with the owner of the "gem" which so captured her fancy. Well, I understand the bird in question has met with an accident and won't be fit for showing, so that "Auld Reekie's" sympathy will not be wasted. But what a tragedy, to appear for once on the stage of life and to receive the highest awards possible (and, further, a warm place in the heart of "Auld Reekie") and then to vanish. We have "our exits and our entrances," but this appears most dramatic. Surely its owner did not require a permanent reminder of its short but great and glorious career? "Auld Reekie" says she has shaken the dust of Caledonia stern and wild from her feet—off she goes to the Sunny South with her three gold badges in her pocket. Let her think of the Edinburgh Norwich Club members shedding the tears of unavailing regret over the loss of the most generous yet most mysterious donor ever associated with this or any other club

"SEEKER AFTER TRUTH,"

The Cage Bird Union: Some Recent Suspensions.

SIR,—I was surprised on reading the report of the executive meeting of the C.B.U. to learn that they suspended a number of exhibitors for exhibiting at non-Union shows, for I fail to see where the suspensions will have any effect now the show season is almost over, as some of the men that I personally know will only exhibit at the Palace. Where has the suspension affected them? They will be free again on April 1, at the latest. But myself and several fanciers around here it may cost dearly, as we are members of various societies affiliated to the C.B.U. (some two, others three), and as two of us are members of the L. and L.F.A. also, it has affected us more, as this association gave its patronage to the L.C.B.A., which meant a lot to a member of this specialist club after championship honours. But we remained what they asked us to be—loyal to the Union. They have shown us now what their loyalty means—a case of the ship sinking, and look out for yourselves! The meeting seemed to consider one question only, and that was: if we suspend these men, how will our next shows be affected by their entries? Then they find out that they are their best supporters in entries, so they suspend them not to show at C.B.U. shows for three months! Then they can accept their entries when their show comes round again. I shall move at our next meeting that we withdraw from the C.B.U. My reason will be that the executive have failed in their work of upholding the Union rules respecting defaulting members at Non-Union shows, so that it is not to our society's interests to pay our annual subscription. I have no fear but that I shall be well supported. Never again will my hands be tied in any hobby where I have to pay my own way, as I keep my birds for pleasure, and in future a pleasure it shall be—free to exhibit where and when I like (that will be loyalty to all societies). In conclusion, I do not blame Mr. Lythgoe for this business, as he has to carry out their work, and to me he has always been very courteous and obliging.

THE SHOWS.

HUNTLY (Strathbogie).

Strathoogie Cage Bird, etc., Association first annual show held Stewart's Hall, Huntly, December 22nd. The hall is of a nice size, and suitable for a show of the kind, being well lighted from the sides. The cage birds were placed at the top end of the hall. The staging was on the tier principle, but five tiers up is too high for the exhibits to be seen to the best advantage. Entries numbered 78 in the cage bird section, which was good, especially considering it was a new start. The arrangements were well carried out by Mr. S. Denison, the secretary, who was very obliging to all, and was supported by a good committee. Mr. J. F. Dewar judged.

Last show of the year held December 26th, St. John's School. There was a record entry, 136 birds being staged. Mr. H. J. Chittenden placed the cards, and his awards were well received. Competition was very keen for the society's medals and specials. Some grand birds were on view, and were much admired by the good company, who visited the show. PERCY MAIN AND DISTRICT S.C.

Annual show of cage birds held in the Institute, Dec. 17. The show room is an ideal place for a show, being well lighted and quite free from draughts. The entry was good considering the indifferent season some of the members had. Some good birds were staged, especially Britishers, some of them good enough to hold their own in grand company. The management was all that could be desired, everyone doing his best to make the show a success. The clerical duties were in the capable hands of Mr. G. Keedy, who had everything in apple-pie order. He was very nbly assisted by a good committee of the following members: Messrs. Armstrong, Conchman, Little, Elliot, Holding, Errington, and the worthy chairman, Mr. M. Gillander, Mr. Little captured special for best Can. in show, and Mr. Elliot that for best British bird. The judges were Messrs. A. Allaway (North Shields), and J. Johnston (Wallsend).

BANKFOOT & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Last show of the year, held Dec. 24th, Bankfoot Schools. Entries came up rather badly, owing, no doubt, to those at the low end of prize list holding back their birds. However, 81 birds faced the judge, Mr. H. J. Chittenden, whose awards gave every satisfaction. Mr. J. Taylor won cup for most points by the narrow margin of one point, Mr. F. Gelder being second with 24 points, and Mr. C. Priestley 3rd with 17. The 2s. 6d. special for best vhc bird was won by Mr. J. Lawson, whilst that for best hc was won by Mr. F. Gelder, and the one for best c, by Mr. J. Taylor. Special for best cock was won by Mr. J. Taylor, and that for best hen by Mr. G. Hudson. In the Ladies' Section, where a blouse length (given by one of the members) was competed for, the winner turned out to be Mrs. C. Hardaker, who just scrambled home by a single point. Mr. C. Bastow was 2nd, and Mrs. H. Taylor 3rd. The first prize in the extra novice section was captured by Mr. H. Taylor, Mr. W. North taking second. The six highest point exhibitors for the year are: 1, Mr. G. Hudson (130); 2nd, Mr. F. Gelder (119); 3rd, Mr. C. Hardaker (98); 4th, Mr. B. Wilman (88); 5th, Mr. J. Taylor (84); 6th, Mr. O. SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD.

The amalgamated societies held their first annual show in St. Modwen's Hall on December 27th and 28th. This is an ideal hall for a show, being well lighted and quite free from draughts. The birds were grandly staged, and arrangements were carried out A1. We were rather sorry to see that there were no catalogues, which makes it very inconvenient for fanciers, and makes the reporter's work very heavy. We think the Society will be well advised to go in for a few in future. The Crests were quite the feature of the show, many noted birds being staged; and the quality was A1. Norwich, too, were a capital show, not many in number, but in quality excellent. Mr. W. H. Howe had a grand team. Yorkshire classes hardly filled to expectations, but were of nice quality. British birds, too, were a nice collection, and were all in capital form. The Foreign bird classes were rather off, but we expert fanciers hardly like their birds on railways at holiday times. The Society have two capital secretaries in Messrs. Parnall and Nuttall, who had things admirably carried out. There was a nice "gate." Messrs. W. Varly and Richards judged, the latter taking Crests only; and all awards gave satisfaction.

CHESTER.

Chester C.B.F.A. (under Cage Bird Union rules)—open to Cheshire, North Wales, Shropshire, Hereford and Monmouthshire—held their sixth annual show, Assembly Rooms, Newgate Street, Dec. 26th. Some capital birds were staged, and were well looked after by Mr. Secretary Swindley, and his committee, who are deserving of the highest praise for the excellent manner in which the show was conducted. The Norwich of Messrs. Winnard, Bracegirdle, Cave, and Humphreys, were first class specimens, as also were the Yorkshires shown by Messrs. Swindley, Richards, and Baxter. The 10s. 6d. special for best British bird in show went to a magnificent Goldfinch, shown by Mr. Yates. Special for best Norwich Mr. Winnard, best Yorkshire, E. Richards; best bird (massive Green Crest), W. Guy; Ramsden's special, T. Gardner. Mr. A. G. Davis (Manchester) judged. NOR. CL. WOMBWELL AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual members' show held December 24th, Wesleyan Schoolrooms. Entries came up well, there being 87 birds in the 22 classes. There being only a small membership this speaks well for them. Mr. M. Mr. Scargill won special for best Buff Yorkshire hen. Messrs. Eyre and Taylor (Dodworth) judged, and their awards gave every satisfaction.

HIGH WYCOMBE.

Annual show of High Wycombe F.S., held December 28th. The Oakley Memorial Hall is an excellent place for such a purpose, and unlike many provincial show rooms, was beautifully warm and cosy. This was needed, as the day was bitterly cold. A large number of people visited the show, and the praise of the management was general. Mr. S. C. Pearce is hon. secretary, and Mr. C. Stevens the assistant secretary. The committee are all energetic fanciers. Messrs. F. Abbott and S. G. Spriggs were the cage bird stewards, and the arrangements were very satisfactory. Special for best bird in show was won by a spanking fine buff Nor., shown by Mr. F. Rayner. Yorkshires were grand in quality, so were Norwich all through, and the British section was very good. For a radius show the result was excellent. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

DONCASTER.

Doncaster C.B.S. held their Christmas open show in the Drill Hall, Dec. 27th. The hall is an ideal one for a cage bird show, being lofty, free from draught, and well lighted. The hon. sec., Mr. Geo. Bescohy, had the birds nicely staged, and was ably assisted by a hard-working committee, viz., Messrs. Crundall, Raynes, Parkinson, Fielding, Cooper, Whitaker, Brearley, Lee. Whittington, and the president, A. Speucer, Esq. The exhibits were a fine lot, quality throughout being excellent. The Yorkshires and Norwich did not turn up well in numbers, but some fine birds were on view. British birds were a fine lot, the Waxwing exhibited by Mr. Walsh was much admired during the afternoon. The attendance was the best we have ever seen at any of the Doncaster shows, and we hope the society will prosper. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) judged the open classes, and the president of the society (A. Spencer, Esq.) the Members' Classes.

MARAZION.

The Marazion and Western District of Cornwall Bird F.A. held their 5th annual show St. Thomas's Hall, Marazion, December 27th. Although show is confined to the district nearly 200 birds were staged, which is a good augury for the success of the society. St. Thomas's Hall is admirably adapted for a cage bird show, being perfectly free from draught of any kind. The birds were staged in double tiers around the hall, and were so arranged that visitors could have a good view of each exhibit. The details of the show management were very ably carried out, and could not be bettered by the oldest or most important show in the Fancy, being quite up to date in every respect. The committee are workers to a man, and in Mr. P. Phillips the society has a most enterprising and obliging secretary. Mr. White, sen., also was busy doing his best to make everything work smoothly. The officers and committee are as follows: President, Lady St. Leven; vice-president, Mr. H. Phillip; treasurer, Mr. W. A. Phillips; committee, Messrs. J. S. White, W. Philp, H. Richards, B. White, C. Rowe, W. Halse, and A. White; hon. secs., Messrs. P. Phillips and W. J. Rodda. Mr. Thos. Pope (Plymouth) judged.

OVER, WINSFORD.

12th annual show, held as usual on Boxing Day in the Assembly Room of the Black Bear Hotel, Over. About 120 cage birds were on view, being a good average, quite equal to former years, although limited to a radius of some miles around. Some very good class Nor. and Yorks. were shown; also a fine class of Hybrids, which was led by a good Goldie Bullie. The Britishers were very nice in both quantity and quality, and a grand compact Bullfinch secured special for best in British bird section. A grand yellow hen secured special over Yorkshire section, and a fine yellow cock secured special over Norwich section. Composed almost of all artisan toilers, the officials and committee are real workers for the hobby, and all do their utmost to make the show an attractive and successful one. A new feature was introduced with success: a Redpoll class was put on for boys. This brought out the youngsters with some well conditioned birds, and they deserve credit for the enthusiasm and care displayed. It would encourage young fanciers if a class or classes for boys' exhibits became a part of shows generally. Competition was keen all through, and the spoils were well divided up. Mr. Chas. Houlton made the awards, and his placing were well received.

ELGIN.

Elgin C.B.A. first annual show held Academy Hall, December 21st. The hall, which is of a very fair size, is nicely lit from the sides. The exhibits were ranged round the sides, with a double tier in the centre, leaving plenty of room for visitors. The arrangements were most admirably carried out by the energetic, courteous and obliging secretary, Mr. A. W. Douglas, who was well supported by a willing band of stewards. The entries totalled 198 altogether, there being some grand specimen staged in both the Norwich and the British bird sections. Mr. Garden won the silver bowl and silver centre piece for best Plainhead Norwich, and Mr. Lumsden the silver medal for best Canary. In the British bird section Mr. Taylor won the silver centrepiece for best bird, also special for second best. The judges were: Mr. G. Scaife (Pauldhouse) for the Canary section, and Mr. F. A. Watt (Banff) for the Hybrid, British, and Foreign bird sections.

KIRKINTILLOCH AND LENZIE.

Annual show (confined to districts as per rule), held Town Hall, Kirkintilloch, December 24th, for the cage bird section. Office bearers: President, Councillor R. Johnston; vice-president, R. L. Pattenhausen, Esq.; hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. M. Morton; assistant secretary, Mr. J. Smith; Mr. J. Dickson, the general secretary; committee, Messrs. Barr, Scott, McLay, Thorn, Taig, Muirhead, Cameron, jun., Donald, Sneddon, Reid, Taylor, Bain, Withers, Chalmers, Dickson, Martin, Jarvie, Hood, Lamont, Chaplin, etc. The Town Hall is large, and well adapted in every way for show purposes, there being abundance of room for the exhibits and visitors alike. The birds were well staged, and well looked after. Though entries in the cage bird section were not so large as could be wished for, the quality in the Norwich and Border sections especially was all that could be desired, many season's champions being staged. The members' classes were a typical lot in the British Bird Section. Mr. R. Martin won the Brit. cup with a lovely Yellowhammer, very closely pressed by Mr. McLeary's Greenfinch. In the Norwich section Mr. J. McLay's Crest-bred carried off the "Brock Cup" for best young bird. Mr. Martin's buff Plainhead Ck. was runner-up. Of the management of the show, we cannot speak too highly. From the president downwards, all lent a willing hand to make the show as perfect as possible. Their efforts were rewarded with a nice "gate." Secretaries Morton and Dickson deserve a special word of praise for their excellent management, likewise the able committee composed of well-known breeders and fanciers; one and all kept things moving nicely. Mr. A. Sloan judged the cage birds to the satisfaction of all concerned.

TRURO.

Truro and County F.S. 22nd annual show held in the Market House, Dec. 26. Only 143 birds turned up—far behind the average, many classes having to be cancelled. It seems a pity this annual event with good classes and specials should drop. Where are the Norwich fanciers of Cornwall? Plenty of them are about, but they are having a "day off," we expect. This county fixture ought to have bigger numbers, seeing there is some grand stuff down west. The Mule and British bird exhibitors responded manfully. It is good to see such whole-hearted enthusiasm and hearty support by these fanciers. Mr. C. Coad made his first venture as judge, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

IMPORTANT TO ALL

But Foreign Buyers especially so.

It proves the value, the stamina, and condition of birds I supply.

South Africa, October 10th, 1910.—The birds, with the exception of a German hen (which died on the voyage) arrived here safely, and in good condition, taking into consideration after a 7,000 miles sea voyage, a few hundred miles by train, and to finish up with, a two days' journey by bullock waggon, along a parched, hot and dusty road. They undoubtedly did well. I must thank you for the way you carried out my instructions. The birds ARE GOOD VALUE FOR MONEY, and I am charmed with the song of the Rollers, which soon got going after they had refreshed themselves. W. L. F. to W. Rudd.

Victoria, B.C., Canada, December 10th, 1910.—Just a line to you to let you know that the birds have arrived. I am very pleased with them, and they are doing well. Thanking you very much for the good birds you have sent me, and wishing you the compliments of the season, B. T. J. to W. Rudd.

KNOW IT'S RUDE

to point, but I must point out to you the exceptionally good value I offer in Roller Canaries. I care not how good other advertisers say their birds are, I distinctly say mine are better, and to prove this I want you to have a Roller from elsewhere and a Leipzig Roller from me; test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not far the best return it, and I will refund every penny of your money. I am the only importer in England of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and now have a grand lot all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, soft roulades, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or objectable notes whatever, price 7/6 and 8/6 each; special bandmasters, which excel in the hollow and bass rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. I also have a magnificent collection of pure Seifert contest Rollers, in glorious song, price 15/-, 20/-, and 30/- each. All sent on full week's trial at my risk, either on receipt of cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system, and money returned in full if every satisfaction not given. I care not how hard a man is to please, I guarantee to do so if humanly possible, as the following letters will show:—"8, South Eaton Place, London, Dec. 28.—Sir,—Rollers have turned out a treat, and want a lot of beating at price. I am very well satisfied. — Yours, A. Frederick." "1, Leicester-st., Phibsborough, Dublin, Dec. 26th.—Sir,—I am well pleased with Hartz cock you sent. It soon started singing. GLASGOW WEST END C.B.C.

A Very Successful Concert.

First annual smoking concert and presentation of trophies held December 27th in the "Grill Restaurant," West Nile Street. There was a large gathering of members and friends to inaugurate what I may say is intended to be an annual social gathering. Several kindred clubs in this city were represented, as well as friends from the country as far away as Dumfriesshire. One of our esteemed members, Mr. C. Campbell, was unable to be with us owing to a serious illness in his family. The concert was presided over by Douglas Pearson, Esq. (Hon. President), who welcomed one and all (especially those representatives from kindred clubs), and hoped they would have a very pleasant and enjoyable evening. Proceeding, he said that though this was a new club, only about ten months old, a very successful show was held in November, due to the hard-working and enthusiastic officials and members. The toasts of the evening were "Glasgow West End C.B.C." and "Kindred Clubs." To the latter toast Mr. Thomson (President of Queen's Park Club) very suitably replied. These toasts were duly honoured in the "grand old style." Our Hon. President now presented the trophies won at the annual show, viz., To Mr. Andrew Miller (our worthy President), the Douglas Pearson challenge rose bowl for best young bird in Crest and Norwich Plainhead sections (won by a Plainhead). Mr. Miller thanked the Hon. President for this beautiful prize. He said he had won a variety of prizes (one cup in particular four times in succession), but he looked on this rose bowl with pride as the best prize ever he had won. He hoped when the next annual show came round, some young fancier would win it from him. Mr. Archibald Hendry was presented with the W. Gibb Macnab challenge cup for best young bird in Border and Yorks. sections (won by a Yorks.). Mr. Hendry very suitably thanked the donor of this beautiful cup, who was also present. Mr. James Smith was presented with the Glasgow School of Massage cup for the best young Mule or Hybrid (won by a Linnet Mule), and Mr. Smith very suitably returned thanks. Mr. W. Proudfoot was presented with the President's gold medal for best bird in hall exhibited by a member who had never won a first at an open show (won by a King Parrot), and also returned thanks. These pleasing incidents being over, the evening was harmoniously spent with splendid talent in music, songs, recitations, and conjuring, contributed by the following gentlemen:—Mr. M. Emery (who opened with a pianoforte solo and also played the accompaniments); Mr. W. Emery, song; Mr. Burrell, song; Mr. A. Hendry, violiu solo, with Mr. Robert Reid accompanying him on the piano; Mr. A. Proudfoot, a few good selections on the gramophone; Mr. Jas. Chalmers, a solo on the 'cello; Mr. Cooper, selections on a Japanese fiddle. Then Mr. Chalmers and Mr. Cooper played together, and the music was charming. Mr Charles McKenna, a very fine baritone; Mr. Crawford, selections from Burns's poems; Mr. W. Gibb Macnab, a fine recitation, encored again and again, he very kindly obliged then with a song. Mr. Newton, conjuror, gave a very interesting entertainment. An exceedingly fine selection was given by Mr. Reid, Mr. Hendry, Mr. Chalmers, and Mr. Cooper, on the following instruments: piano, violin, 'cello, and Japanese fiddle. To the artists who had contributed to the splendid entertainment, the vote of thanks was accorded enthusiastically. The Hon. President said that great praise was due to the committee, Messrs. Jamieson, Hendry, Gibb, and Proudfoot, in whose hands the arrangements for our first annual concert were, and who carried it to a successful and happy conclusion. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Douglas Pearson (who had foregone the pleasure of another engagement to preside).—William Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

The following were exhibitors at the recent L.C.B.A. show, who are suspended from exhibiting at any Union shows until February 24, 1911, viz.:—Messrs. G. C. Ley (Nottingham), A. Herdern and J. Hampshire (Oldham), J. Brotherton (Bolton), W. Dewnap (Glossop), J. Minty (Frome), J. Tottle (Frome), Litchfield and Son (Luton), J. C. W. Meadows (Luton), and T. Dixon (Morecambe).

Will your readers please note that Spalding show, on January 12, and Llanelly, on January 17, are open to C.B.U. members?

In his letter appearing in CAGE BIRDS of Dec. 24, Mr. Daniels complains of bad treatment meted out to the Liverpool O.S. by the Union. I rather think it is the L.O.S. who have treated the Union badly. He says at the end that he is strongly in favour of a controlling body, and adds that if it can't enforce its rules, how can it expect its members to observe them? I ask him: Is his society and its members helping the Union to enforce rules, when they, on his own showing, have apparently all along been doing their best to break the Union's rules, first by allowing its members to ostensibly resign the society, in order that they may break the rules to show at non-Union shows? To (as he says) obviate a recurrence, they send a resolution to the delegates' meeting, held at Leicester last August, and state that the answer they got to it was to form a rule making it impossible to terminate membership without giving three months' notice in writing; whereas this rule was adopted in February, 1909, and the L.O.S. would appear now to wish to break through this rule, which was formed with a view to preventing societies joining the Union for the sake of receiving support of Union members at their shows, and as soon as the show is over, resigning. The resolution submitted by Liverpool was discussed at Leicester, but could not be adopted except at an annual meeting, and it is down for the meeting next month.

Mr. Daniels asks, among other questions, whether it is advisable to publish for the information of members and secretaries, the names of suspended members? if not, how can secretaries refuse entries from such? The names of suspended members have always been published, and secretaries of shows individually supplied with a list of same. Then he asks if one member is suspended, why is he singled out, and all others who have similarly transgressed allowed to escape; and if it is lawful for delegates to break rules, and not ordinary members? I do not know of any being singled out, and no distinction has been made to delegates. Mr. Daniels may possibly have seen or heard of lists of names being supplied me of exhibitors at non-Union exhibitions; many of these, however, have turned out not to be members of the Union, or were members of the society holding the show. Anyhow, their names had not been supplied to me by the various secretaries with their lists of members. Very possibly they also have been allowed very conveniently to resign their societies. I have in my mind one case of an exhibitor at a non-Union show, whose name appeared as a committeeman on the schedule of a show, not 100 miles from Liverpool, and who, I believe, also exhibited at the show as a member; but on being reported and written to, he denied membership of any society in the Union; and on the secretary of the show in question supplying me with a list of his members, I find this gentleman's name not included though a committeeman at the show. And this, I believe, is not an isolated case. If societies and their members will not help the Union to attain its objects, but deliberately break the rules, it seems hopeless to attempt to go on.

It appears to me that if the Liverpool members, who are also members of the Green Canary Association have any complaint, it is against the G.C.A., for not backing up its members by withholding its patronage from non-Union shows; and this applies also to Mr. Adams's complaint last week in regard to the Lancashire and Lizard F.A., which body, after first being told in reply to an enquiry that a certain show would not be open to such of its members as were Union members, finally decided to give it their patronage, and thus seriously handicapped those of its members who would remain loyal to the Union by causing them to lose points.

You have a further note in one of your issues to the effect that you were not aware you had published information re the Union, and you complain of a lack of information. It is a fact, however, that within the last three months I have twice or thrice had to deny totally misleading statements of the doings of the Union, which have been published in your paper, presumably supplied by irresponsible parties, and the matters have usually ended with my denials. Further, my recent report does not, as you say, confirm the accuracy of your statement as to suspended members. Your note read: "We know for certain the C.B.U. has suspended some of its members for exhibiting at non-Union shows, and one of these is the L.C.B.A."; whereas, at the time of publication, the L.C.B.A. exhibitors had not been suspended, and all the others were awaiting confirmation before they could be announced. All the information which it was expedient to publish has been sent, and certainly a notification of all suspensions. If little has appeared from me, it is because there has been nothing to report since the Leicester meeting, until recently.

I omitted two items from the agenda of the Crystal Palace meeting, items which came in at the last moment. Altrincham Society submit a resolution: "Where more than one person shows birds from the same place of residence, that they all show in the one section, viz., professional, amateur, or novice"; and the Clapham Society: "That Rule 22 be removed from the rules, or modified in some way for the present, until the Union is of sufficient strength to reintroduce the rule, and that a feeling of all societies should be taken on the proposition."

Illustrated Ideas

No. 472.
A Use for Old Baths.
Sent by Mr. F. W. Hudd, 3, Kensal Rise, Victoria Park, Bristol.

Here is an idea for utilising old enamelled tin baths which leak. Cut out a block of wood, ½ inch less than would fit in the bath. Grease it well and place same in the bottom of the bath. Lift it about ½ inch from the bottom, run in plaster of Paris or cement, and when set pull out block; you then have a nice bath. I utilised several in this way. I trust the sketch will explain fully.—FRIEDRICH W. HUDD.

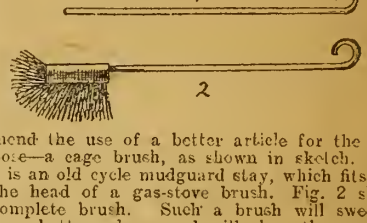
No. 473.
A Cage Brush.
Sent by Mr. H. Boddy.

Having noticed that most people when cage-cleaning proceed to remove by means of a duster the sand, seed husks, etc., which accumulate underneath the sand tray (which at best is an unsatisfactory method, and one which inevitably terrifies the bird), I recommend the use of a better article for the purpose—a cage brush, as shown in sketch. Fig. 1 is an old cycle mudguard stay, which fits into the head of a gas-stove brush. Fig. 2 shows complete brush. Such a brush will sweep a cage bottom clean, and will clear the smallest seed from a corner. The use of a brush such as this, which is worked through the space into which the sand tray fits, instead of through the door, will not disturb the bird the least.—HAROLD BODDY. (Will Mr. Boddy kindly forward us his address?—ED.)



Wild-Bird Life.

Remember the Wild Birds.

Winter with its hoary hand has not yet, at the time of writing, reached us. It is generally after the turn of the year that we are likely to get days, and possibly weeks, of frost, sleet, and snow. But it is as well to remind bird lovers that they should be prepared to do something for the feathered tribe when the earth is covered with "the silent white mantle." The writer has seen crumbs from the table thrown into the fire, when with a little extra trouble they might be put outside for the benefit of the wild birds. The excuse is that the weather is not wintry enough to commence feeding them; but if the scraps are regularly distributed the birds can either eat them or leave them, and should a severe time come they will at once flock to the spot where the supply, however small, is regular, and bring with them many strangers, and possibly more interesting species than the common Sparrow. If the distribution of food is left until the severe times arrive, in many cases the birds are unable to find it, because it is so little expected. The number of birds visiting one's garden is in a great measure regulated by the size and position of the plot, also by the absence or otherwise of the trees and shrubs. In large gardens, even near London, where a shrubbery of evergreens is part of the schemes of gardening, many species may be encouraged to dwell. Blackbirds, Thrushes, Tits, and all the Finches prefer to roost in the thick evergreens to the exposed trees in the open; and where they roost, they will naturally spend part of the day at least.

If the Sparrows are too numerous and pugnacious, a simple bird table will prevent them from taking the whole of the food put out; this should have a post at each corner and a wire or string tied round it from post to post. The Sparrow is so suspicious that he sees danger in everything that is at all unusual. This string does not affect other birds, and one can see the Robin, Thrush, Finches, etc., feeding on the table while the artful Sparrow skips round and pounches upon stray bit dropped by the other birds. Where scraps are not plentiful a little barley meal can be mixed with them, and made crumbly moist.

HIGHGATE & HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Judging competition held Spencer Hall, 29th Dec. A fair number of birds were staged, and competitors in champion, amateur, and novice sections competing for medals in each section. The birds were split up into three classes—Norwich, Yorkshire, and British. Mr. J. Oldaker (who is shortly coming out as a judge), very kindly placed the cards. The members ran one another very close, as in both the amateur and novice two members made the same number of points, Messrs. Pile and W. Knight in the amateur section, and Messrs. Street and Milsom in the novice. After a draw in these two sections the winners were: Champion, Mr. W. Armstrong; amateur, Mr. G. T. Pile; and Novice, Mr. G. Street. Four new members were nominated for election. Mr. Shakespeare was elected to judge February pair show. The Vice-Chairman (Mr. Dann) in Mr. Gardner's absence, said he hoped all members who possibly could would come to the next meeting, as it was the annual general meeting, when the officers for 1911 would be chosen. The Secretary asked for adverts for rulebook, and also that all outstanding subs might be paid, also all ticket money sent in from annual show. Votes of thanks were passed to Messrs. Oldaker and Dann.—Chas. W. Law.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Meeting held Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle, 21st December. Present: Messrs. Robson, Almond, Swan, Farrar, Armstrong, Dobson, Hutchinson, Currah, Scott, Bewick and Son, McColl, Heslop, and Taylor. Mr. Robson, who presided, said he was pleased to introduce our president (J. Ford Maling, Esq.), who had, at considerable inconvenience to himself, come to present the cups and medals to the successful members; also to present to the club a very handsome silver challenge cup for the best old Crest or Crest-bred exhibited by a member at our annual show. The cup was on view, and was greatly admired by all. Mr. Maling, in a nice speech, presented the challenge cup to Mr. R. Armstrong (Tyne Dock), who won it at Blaydon Show with the renowned "King of Kings." Mr. Armstrong thanked Mr. Maling for his remarks, and hoped he would be long spared to come amongst them. The Chairman said the "King of Kings" had proved one of the best Crested birds ever seen on the show bench. Messrs. Bewick, Scott, Almond, Farrar, concurred, and Mr. Currah said it had won the challenge bowl at Gateshead for the best bird in show 3 years in succession, so that it was now Mr. Armstrong's own property. This wonderful bird had been most successful in its career, amongst its many honours being the Blaydon challenge ornaments for best bird in show, the Dewar shield at the Scottish National twice in succession. He was sure the cream of the Crest fancy were to be found on the banks of the Tyne and Wear. Mr. Robson said Mr. Currah's well-chosen remarks were only the sentiments of every member. In reply, Mr. Maling said that anything that he could do to further the interests of the Crested Canary, he would be pleased to do, as the Crests, to him, were the most beautiful of all cage birds. What graced the show bench now were far in advance of those of former years. He then presented medals to the successful members. He spoke very highly of the young crested bird shown by Mr. J. L. Martin (Gateshead), winner of challenge cup and gold medal, also of the young crest-bred shown by Mr. J. G. Hutchinson (Newcastle), winner of the challenge cup for best young Crest-bred shown by members at our club show. Mr. Currah proposed a hearty vote of thanks to our worthy president. Mr. Farrar seconded, and Messrs. Almond, Scott, and Bewick supported the resolution, which was carried with loud applause. In reply, Mr. Maling said he would be pleased to come again, as it really had been a pleasure to him to be present. Also he would give a medal next year to go with the Maling challenge cup. (Applause.) Mr. D. Scott spoke in a very eulogising way about the "King of Kings." Mr. Robson made a few remarks about the origin of the club. It really first saw light, he said, at Sunderland, when Crests were not so good as they are to-day, although at that time there were some very good grey Crests, which he regretted to observe were on the decrease. A vote of thanks was accorded to the secretary for past services (to which he rather shyly replied). Mr. Scott raised a very interesting discussion about attaching N.C.C. slips to our cages at shows. Mr. Currah thought it as well to abstain from any appearance of evil, but he thought that young classes should have labels on. Perhaps it would be as well to leave them off the old classes. After the chairman, Messrs. Swan, Farrar, Armstrong, Taylor, Bewick, and others had spoken, what has been one of the pleasantest and most successful meetings since the commencement of the society terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman, and a mutual agreement to leave the question about N.C.C. slips on cages over till some future date.—For J. G. Hutchinson, Hon. Sec., N.C.C.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held Fawcett Street Cafe, Dec. 24, Mr. J. Farrer in chair. Mr. W. F. Swan moved that Mr. T. Davison become a member. Mr. Richborough gave notice of motion that in future the rules be strictly enforced. Next meeting Jan. 7, when the election of officers will take place. Will all members please attend".—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

ADMIRAL DUNCAN (Nott'ham) OS.

31st annual Christmas members' show, held Dec. 17, Admiral Duncan, Coalpit Lane. Nearly 100 good birds were placed before the judge, Mr. G. Hoult, who gave satisfaction. The premier special prize, another handsome silver cup, was again won by Mr. R. Holmes, for most points gained during year. About 14 members competed for this. Mr. J. Goode running well for 2nd special. Each of the others was awarded a grand special, which gave satisfaction to all. The "gate" was a bad one, owing to rain falling all day.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Result of competitions for 1910:—Champion medals, Newcastle, R. Butler, 16 points; Hartlepools, G. W. Cuthbertson 19; Blaydon, J. Stewart, 17; Whitehaven, G. Tweedie, 17; Darlington, T. C. Crawhall, 10; Gateshead, C. S. Dix, 7. Mr. Cuthbertson wins cup for most points with 80; this being the second time in succession, it becomes his own property. Mr. Stewart wins gold medal with 76; Mr. Tindale 49; Mr. Ellwood 47; Crawhall, 45; Dix, 41; Butler, 40; Tweedie, 39; O'Neal, 22; Douglas, 14; Carr, 6; Wigglesworth, 4; Mather, 1. Novice Section: Silver medals, Chopwell, Tomlinson, 14; Newcastle, Kent, 10; Hartlepools, Mather, 7; Blaydon, Bryden, 8; Whitehaven, Coomber, 9; Gateshead, Curry, 5; silver cup won by Mr. Tomlinson, 38; Mr. Kent gold medal, 37; 3, Mr. Coomber, 21; 4, Mr. Bryden, 13; Messrs. Hall and Curry 10 each; Mr. Mather, 7; Mr. Atkinson, 8. The challenge cup for best young bird bred by a member was won at Whitehaven Show by Mr. Tomlinson, with an unlighted yellow hen. This is the second year in succession that the challenge cup has been won by a novice, so we doubly congratulate Mr. Tomlinson on his popular win. Meeting held Dec. 29, Lockhart's Cafe, Mr. Armstrong (Halifax) gave a most interesting and instructive address upon the Yorkshire Canary, and dealt minutely with every point from the beak to the tail, and from position to feather, not forgetting size, which he said was one of the things breeders were to watch, being a most important thing in exhibition Yorkshires, many of the present-day exhibition birds failing to the standard length by quite a quarter of an inch. He also dealt with the marked bird, and mentioned the rapid strides made with this variety since the formation of the N.G.M.V.C.C., and he expressed the opinion that ere long the marked variety will become the popular variety. After speaking for over an hour, Mr. Armstrong was bombarded with questions. All voted it the best meeting ever held. It was regretted that owing to the short notice more members could not be present, but those who were there were delighted with what they heard. Votes of thanks were heartily passed to Mr. Armstrong and to the Chairman (Mr. Curry).—T. C. Crawhall, Sec.

Just 50, including members, their wives, and friends, partook of the good fare provided by the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Elfick, and a friend whose name is not quite clear rison, Miss Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Clarke, Miss Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. F. Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bartlett, Mr. F. Wallace, Miss Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Pering, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Parr, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. A. Skinner, Mr. and Mrs. J. Shankley, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Forse, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Forse, Mrs. Hearn, Miss Hearn, Mr. E. H. Webb, Miss Webb, and two friends, Mr. S. C. Rhodes and friends, Mr. F. J. White and friend, Messrs. Hounslow, S. Griffin, Crowther, F. Marshall, Teasdale, and Wyatt. As soon as the tables were cleared music was the "order of the day. Mrs. Murray, and Messrs. Stevens, White, Carr, Harrison, Rhodes, Teasdale, Elpick, and a friend whose name is not quite clear to us, very kindly gave us some songs, and we were also much indebted to Mr. White's friend for his splendid accompaniment. The chairman said he had a very pleasant duty to perform; he had been asked to make a presentation to someone on behalf of the members, as a mark of their appreciation of services rendered from time to time. He therenpon produced a very nicely fitted dressing case or traveller's companion, remarking that he had better read the inscription engraved on it. It read: "Presented by the members of the Leyton and District Cage Bird Association to J. S. Clarke, Esq., as a mark of their appreciation of the many services rendered." He therenpon handed it to Mr. Clarke, who was completely surprised, and for once taken off his guard, for so carefully had our worthy president wrapped up his words, that although Mr. Clarke was following his remarks with much interest and attention, he had not the faintest idea that he was to be the recipient until his name was pronounced at the last moment. Our old friend, however, although very much moved, was soon upon his feet, and thanked the members. Mr. Clarke gave the toast. "Leyton and District C.B.A.," naming Mr. B. F. Forse, who briefly replied. Mr. S. C. Rhodes gave "the Pianist and Artistes"; Mr. C. H. Cooper "The Press"; Mr. Skinner "The Ladies"; and Mr. Harrison "Our Host and Hostess." The singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King," brought one of the most enjoyable and memorable evenings of the Association to a close.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

I wish CAGE BIRDS every possible success. This is my first year at breeding Canaries. I do not know what I should have done without "C.B."—F. BANES (Potton).

Our show falls to be held on January 12, writes Mr. W. T. Woof, Hon. Sec. of the Ludlow C.B.S. Entries close on January 9. We trust fanciers will support us.

Class 31 in our schedule should read "Hybrid A.V., including Canary-Bullie," instead of "Canary, Mule," writes Mr. A. Nicol, sec. of the Bathgate show to be held January 14.

The Dover and Dist. F. and F.S. hold their next annual show on Nov. 8 and 9, 1911, write Messrs. Abbott and Austen, hon. secs. Will secretaries please try and avoid clashing?

OBITUARY.

Mr. T. CHARLESWORTH (Wellingborough).

It is with deep regret that I have to announce to the Fancy the death of Mr. Thomas Charlesworth, age 44 years, who passed away on Dec. 28, after a short but very painful illness, writes Mr. W. Howe, hon. sec. of the Wellingboro' C.B.S. Mr. Charlesworth was taken ill about seven weeks ago with a new growth in the throat; the doctor gave no hope from the first of his recovery. Deceased leaves a widow to mourn his loss, to whom all fanciers and workmates tender their deepest and heartfelt sympathy in her sad loss.

I am sorry to state, writes one of our correspondents, that Mr. A. J. Hughes, of Bangor, lost his Variegated Yorkshire after his return from Ruthin Show. I understand that he and Mr. W. Aitken, of the same city, have started with a few good Borders, and wish them every success, as there is plenty of room for the "Wee Gems" in North Wales.

The Event of the Year.

OUR SUPERB BIRTHDAY NUMBER OF "CAGE BIRDS" WILL APPEAR NEXT WEEK.

This will celebrate the Ninth Anniversary of our natal day. It will be one of the finest issues of the paper ever produced.

There are some very special features in our Birthday Number for 1911, interesting and amusing prize competitions, three absolutely unbeatable coloured plates, and an illustrated fine art supplement, the whole involving a tremendous outlay.

There is certain to be a sensational run upon this issue, so we advise all our friends to give in their orders to their newsagents forthwith, so as to make certain of securing this wonderful number of "Cage Birds."

Advertisements will close finally on Tuesday, January 10th, and as a unique opportunity for appealing to the widest possible collection of purchasers our Birthday Number holds the field.

May we earnestly beg our friends, not only to make certain of securing this number for themselves, but to tell all their bird-loving friends about it, and advise them to secure a copy also.

Finally, remember all communications must reach us, at the very latest, first post Tuesday morning next, Jan. 10th, and as the bulk of copy to be got through will entail a very heavy strain upon all departments, including our printers, we shall appreciate the early receipt of advertisements, etc., intended for this special Birthday Issue.

I have resigned the secretaryship of the Fife and Kinross Norwich Plainhead Club, through my appointment as secretary of the Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A., writes Mr. A. Dickson, 37 Adams Terrace, Kelty, N.B. All communications to the Fife and Kinross N.P.C. should be addressed to the new secretary, Mr. Gilbert Fisher, Jamphlars, Cardenden.

We find there is an error in our schedule writes Messrs. Elviss and Mouncy, hon. secs. of the Spalding and Dis. Show, Jan. 12th. Class 84 reads, "Norwich, any variety, bred 1910 ,unflighted)." This is wrong; it should be: "Norwich Plainhead, any colour, unflighted, bred 1910." All fanciers are aware that our show was not a success financially last year, and we are very anxious, if possible, to make it a successful show this time. We trust to receive the support of fanciers and exhibitors.

The committee of Doncaster Show wish to thank all those exhibiting at our show on Dec. 27th for their kind support at this our first attempt, writes Mr. G. Bescoby, the sec. All prize money was paid out by the 31st ult., and all birds were in the railway company's hands by 7.30 p.m. on show day. I might say that we were complimented by an expert on having one of the best rooms he had seen for some time. Together with the above, and improved classification, another year we hope to merit a continuance of the Fancy's support.

The annual meeting of the South Shields, North Shields, and Dis. C.B.S. will be held on Jan. 11th, 1911, writes Mr. J. Barrass, the sec., when the election of officers will take place; also the balance-sheet will be submitted for our late show, which has been the most successful the society has had for a number of years. I am also drawing up a subscription list for a testimonial for our most worthy chairman, on behalf of the members, for the manner in which he has attended to his duties at the meetings. I hope to have a good response. A number of new members are going to join us, and we hope for another year as successful as the past. Fanciers are welcome to join; there is no limit, and we are open to the British Isles.

Entries close for the Llanelly and District Show on Jan. 12th next, writes Mr. D. John, the sec. If any fancier does not receive a schedule will he please drop me a postcard? In our coming fixture, to be held on Jan. 17, we shall leave nothing to chance, but will do everything in our power to please everyone.

L. and P.O.S. Annual Dinner.

The London and Provincial O.S. annual dinner will take place at the Horse Shoe Hotel, on Jan. 19th, at 6.45, writes Mr. C. W. Law, the hon. sec. Our president, George Crubb, Esq., has very kindly consented to preside. He will be supported on this occasion by most of the committee. Special attention has been given to the musical arrangements, consisting of sentimental and comic songs, and humorous sketches at the piano. Ladies are specially invited; as a rule, there are as many ladies present as gentlemen. Evening dress is quite optional. Tickets are 4s. each, and can be obtained from me (9, Oak Villas, Archway Road, Highgate). The committee hope to see as many members present as possible, and also invite all friends of the society to join them at this function. This is one of the pleasantest and most social affairs the society hold throughout the year. Several old friends have already promised to be present. All those intending to be there must let the secretary know by first post Jan. 16th, at the latest; earlier if possible.

KILMARNOCK.

Kilmarnock O A brought off their 59th annual show and competition on 31st Dec and 2nd Jan. The Agricultural Hall, in which the show was held, is a most suitable one. The lesser hall upstairs in which the cage bird section was housed is very comfortable, and well lit from the roof. This association offers a capital classification, but are badly supported by the local fanciers. This is much to be wondered at, as in Mr. Blaue, the secretary, they have a very hard working and energetic official. He was ably supported by a committee of experienced fanciers, and we hope that in future ventures the old established association will receive a very great deal more support, especially from the fanciers in the district. The judge for Scotch Fancies and Norwich was Mr. Martin (Kirkintilloch); for Borders, Mr. Clark (Irvine); and for British and Foreign birds, Mr Bald (Bathgate); each had a fairly easy task to perform, and their awards met with general approval.

SWANAGE.

Swanage and Isle of Purbeck F.S. show held Dec. 29, Central Hall—a commodious building and a capital place for a mixed show, although a little more light would be an improvement. The cage birds under the stewardship of Messrs. W. Edmunds and A. Fowles were staged upon the poultry pens, presumably on account of the smallness of the entries, which it is hoped another year may be avoided. Some of the exhibits were very meritorious, notably Mr. W. E. Edmunds' pair of purple capped Lories, and Many-coloured Parrakeets, also Mr. S. M. Davis' Linnet-Bullie Hybrid, which was much admired. There were also several good Finches. The secretary, Mr. R. B. Slade, and the committee generally, were both courteous and obliging, and may be congratulated on the results of their first venture. They were much disappointed with the catalogue, the printer dropping some of the type; consequently it was incomplete and without awards or list of names. Judge Billett had a heavy day's work. The "gate" appeared good, and it is to be hoped the show generally will prove a success.

CHOPPINGTON S.C.C.B.S.

Members' first annual show, held headquarters, Choppington Station, Dec. 24th. It turned out a great success. The quantity and quality of the exhibits were excellent, most of the winners being magnificent examples. We can safely say that this new Choppington Society has "come to stay." All the members did their utmost to make the show a success, and they accomplished their task in no half-hearted manner. We think this is the first cage bird club show to be held in a workmen's social club in the country. There were 214 entries in 24 classes. Extra specials were won by Mr. French with a magnificent yellow Norwich for best in show; this bird has been out eight times this year, at such shows as Gateshead, Newcastle, etc., and has never been beaten. Sandiford's medal, J. Douglas; best novice, J. Hodgetts; best hon. member's, Mr. John Dixon, out of Mr. Woollett's flights. The "gate" was everything that could be desired, and Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead) gave every satisfaction. The secretary's duties were ably carried out by Mr. Woollett (Barrington).

GT. HORTON (Good Intent.)

Great Horton Good Intent O S annual open show held Dec. 31, Church Schools, Southfield Lane, under the rules of the Yorkshire Union. Mr. W. A. Cowgill officiated as judge, his awards giving satisfaction throughout. Twenty classes were provided, but the entries came up badly, several classes having unfortunately to be cancelled, and others received only half prize money. The total entries numbered 183, the holidays being probably responsible for this meagreness. The officials worked hard. They have a very good room for a show, quite big enough for three or four times the number of birds staged; it is very lofty and well lighted, and free from draughts. Mr. H. Chubb, the secretary, had all matters well in hand, and he was ably seconded by his assistant, Mr. H. Worsnop, backed by a strong committee, consisting of Messrs. Rushworth, Schofield, Ackroyd, and Halliday (show stewards), Briggs, Holden, Oldfield, Bartle, and others as general assistants. The birds were all packed up in good time for home, and prize money paid out during the afternoon.

BOLTON ROLLER C.S.

Annual open contest of the Bolton and Dist. Roller C.S. held Dec. 31 and Jan. 2, Joiners' Arms Hotel, Deansgate. The show was under the British R.C.C. patronage and their young birds competition; consequently the best Rollers of the day were present. The entry, we were pleased to see, was a grand one, totalling 128 in 5 classes; and the attendance was also good, so that the show should prove a success in every way. Mr. W. Massey, the sec., assisted by an able band of stewards, had everything in good order. The judges were Messrs. T. W. Walton (Leeds) and A. Foulds (Manchester).

GLOSSOP, HADFIELD & DIS. C.B.S

Annual show, held Dec. 24th, Wood's Reading Rooms, High Street, East, Glossop. Three open classes were provided, but the response was a poor one. The quality, however, of the birds throughout was gratifyingly good, and the members classes contained many excellent specimens. Mr H. S. Waters, the secretary, had things well in hand, and the success of the show as a whole was a credit to him and to his fellow officials. Mr. J. Garner (Hazel Grove) judged. The cup was won by Mr. E. Thompson, Mr. H. Cartwright being runner-up.

S. MANCHESTER. C.B.S.

Third annual show held December 26th, Jolly Carter, Ashton Old Road. On this occasion a new venture in the way of putting on open classes was tried, but did not prove successful in producing many entries; but what was short in numbers was made up for in quality. A special feature of the show was the good attendance, which should prove very beneficial financially to the society; and another feature was the real good birds produced by some of the amateur and novice members. Mr. F. Washbourne (secretary) proved he knew how to handle the reins for running a show successfully; he was ably assisted by Mr. J. Davey, sec. of North Manchester, together with a good working committee, including Mr. Slater, of North Manchester Society. The "jolly" host did his level best to bring up a "crowd," which no doubt increased the gate. Mr. A. Royle (Sale) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

KENDAL AND DIS. C.B.S.

Members' annual show held Town Hall, Dec. 27. The hall is an ideal one for a cage bird show, being lofty, free from draught, and well lighted. The entries were larger than last year. The birds were nicely staged. The hon. sec., Mr. W. Vart, had everything well in hand, and was backed up by a hard-working committee, viz., Mr. John Thompson (chairman), and Messrs. W. T. Briggs, J. W. Crossley, J. Dickinson, F. and W. Dixon, G. F. Fell, W. B. Lewthwaite, J. C. Parker, and G. Sumpter and W. Heywood (hon. treasurer). The exhibits were a fine lot throughout, quality being really excellent. Norwich were strong in both numbers and quality. Birds that have won in open shows could only secure cards here. Yorkshires were a capital class both for quality and numbers, but Borders were not as strong as in previous years; nor yet were the British bird classes well supported. Now, you British bird men about here, wake up. But Mr. Bond's Palace winning team of mules and hybrids were a treat to see, including the old clear Goldfinch-Canary, which could only secure second, being beaten by a stable companion. Selling and gift classes were especially strong. The show was well patronised by the public. Mr. Sam Wilcock (Eccleshill) judged, and was through in good time.

Mr. W. S. Williams made a capital secretary. Mr. H. Tams (Longton), judged.

WICK.

Wick O.S. annual show, held Temperance Hall, 14th and 15th Dec., when the cage bird section was largely represented, showing an increase in the number of entries over those of previous years. The weather was mild and favourable, and we noticed some entries from as far south as Beauly and Inverness. This was the finest arranged section in the hall. The section devoted to boys and girls under 14 years of age was also well filled, the youthful exhibitors showing keen interest in the show. The visitors were not so numerous as we would have liked to see, especially after the committee exerting themselves in order to make the exhibition attractive. The arrangements were ably carried out by their indefatigable secretary, Mr. Corner, assisted by an active committee of management. The judge for this section was Mr. Donald Shearer (Thurso), whose awards seemed to give general satisfaction.

GUISBOROUGH (Yorks).

Third annual show, held December 31st, in the Chaloner Hall. It proved the best ever held by this progressive society. Entries came up splendidly, totalling 305, constituting a record for the society, being 106 over last year's entry. This grand increase is in a large measure due to Mr. R. Mays, the popular and energetic secretary, and without a doubt the society is much indebted to him for the keen interest he takes in his work, and the excellent manner in which he performs his duties. We found him always courteous and obliging, ready to place his services at the disposal of anyone who required them, and with his practical knowledge of his secretarial duties, it is easy to understand how the society is making such rapid progress. He was very ably supported by a grand, hard-working committee, headed by the genial chairman, Mr. J. Cook, and vice-chairman Mr. F. Jones, the committee being composed of Messrs. J. Allinson, G. Barker, E. Blackburn, F. Dixon, F. Dauncey, J. Dunning, H. Hood, G. Jobling, C. Jackson, A. W. Knaggs, J. Meaburn, J. T. Wilson, J. Wesson, G. Wear, W. Wilson, G. Atkinson, and B. Hurn. The Chaloner Hall is one of the finest places we have yet seen for the purpose, it is beautifully panelled and decorated inside, is large and roomy, is well lighted, both by day and night, and is entirely free from draught. The hall is placed at the disposal of the society absolutely free of cost, by the president, Mrs. Chaloner, who is herself a keen and enthusiastic fancier, and the members are to be congratulated upon having such a kindly lady to take so great an interest in their welfare. Throughout the show the quality was right up to the mark, all sections being good, the British Hardbill section being really fine. The silver cup presented by Colonel Chaloner for best bird (Canary, Mules, or Hybrid), was won by Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle), with his well-known clear Goldfinch Mule, which thoroughly deserved the honour. Members' special winners: 1, biscuit bowl, Mr. J. G. Cook, 89 points; 2, Mr. H. Hood, silver medal, with 37 points; 3, cigar case, Mr. G. Jobling, with 31 points. The chairman, in calling upon Mrs. Chaloner (the president) to open the show, testified in a few well chosen words the great obligations the society were under to Mrs. Chaloner, and expressed the great pleasure it gave the members to have her amongst them that day. Mrs. Chaloner expressed her great pleasure in being there to open the show, and congratulated the society upon the progress they had made, and hoped that this excellent show would be the means of many others taking up a hobby which she knew from her own personal experience was a most pleasurable and instructive one. The chairman then invited Lady Edna Vaughan to present the special prizes to the winners, which she kindly consented to do, and in handing over the prizes expressed her keen delight in visiting the show. A vote of thanks to all concerned concluded a most pleasing ceremony. Fine weather favoured the show, which was well patronised by the public, and we understand from the officials that the show will probably be a record in every respect. Mr. R. W. Battye judged.

UTRECHT (Holland.)

Seventeenth International Show of the Utrecht O.S. held Dec. 24th, 25th, and 26th, in the Fruit Hall, Utrecht. The cage birds section contained a nice display of birds, and were well looked after. In addition a large slow combustion stove was kept burning all the time of the exhibition for the comfort of our smaller feathered favourites. The president, Mr. N. Wafelbakker, and the secretary, Mr. J. Mantel Jac, gave their special attention to this section, which is as good as saying that everything was carried out in a first class manner. The judges for cage birds were Messrs. C. and W. Noorduijn, and W. J. M. de Bas.

DITCH CAN. (27): In six classes the principal prizes were won by Messrs. Santen, Borden, and Schuurman, with neat little birds shown in good form. LANCS. (10): 1, van Leeuwen, nice size and col.; 2, Sutherland, rather nice bird all over. NOR. (15): Very nice in type and feather, the winning birds being shown by Messrs. S. F. de Leeuw and W. A. van Leeuwen. YORKS. (12): Mr. S. F. de Leeuw also won in these classes, with very nice lengthy birds shown in good condition, and repeated his success in the Lizard and Border Fancy classes. BULLFINCHES mustered 10 birds, the 1st and 2nd prizes being won by large and good col. birds shown by L. Marechal, the 3rd going to a smart bird exhibited by A. Sutherland. In the soft-billed bird class Mr. H. W. Ferrée exhibited a very pretty Gold Crested Wren in splendid condition; it was in a nice cage, fitted with pieces of fir tree, which greatly added to the appearance and enjoyment of the little bird. In the class for Cardinals there were five exhibits, J. L. Nieuwenhoven winning 1st and 2nd with a couple of nice specimens, and A. Sutherland 3rd. PARRAKEETS (6): 1, Sutherland; 2, Hennevelt; 3, Nieuwenhoven. PARROTS (5): 1, spl, 3, Sutherland; 2, Marechal. COCKATOOS (5): 1, Sutherland; 2, 3, Nieuwenhoven.

PEMBROKE (Wales.)

Thirteenth annual show, held Market Hall, Dec. 28th. The entries came up very well, considering the small classification, only one judge for all sections, and the little advertising it received. Mr. Rosser judged.

DALBEATTIE.

Dalbeattie annual exhibition, held Town Hall, January 2nd. Despite numerous counter attractions, the entries were slightly in excess of those of the previous show, while the quality surpassed anything ever seen in this district. The hall in which the exhibits were staged is in every way suitable for such an exhibition, being centrally situated, very commodious, and affording excellent lighting facilities. The arrangements were carried through in a very admirable manner, which reflects the greatest credit on the committee of management, composed as it is of right good fanciers, with such active men as Mr. D. Johnstone, as president, and Mr. W. Rae as vice-president. The society are fortunate in having such a capable man as Mr. G. C. Robertson as secretary and treasurer, and it is undoubtedly through his personal exertions and the excellent management that the show is one of the leading fixtures in the South of Scotland. Bullfinches were the outstanding class in the show, there being some very meritorious exhibits here. Goldfinches were close on Bullies for quality, while there were several exceedingly fine birds in the clear mule class. Numerically, Border Fancies were few, but the quality excelled anything we have seen this year. Norwich were a fine show. Mr. J. Bennett (Edinburgh) was to have judged, but at the last moment was unable to attend owing to a family bereavement. At the eleventh hour the services of Messrs. J. Bell and G. Benson (Dalbeattie) were procured, and these gentlemen got through their work in good time, their awards giving general satisfaction. The day being a holiday locally, the show was very well patronised by visitors, and a good "gate" was secured.

In Praise of the Bullfinch.

SIR, I have read with the greatest interest Messrs. Hartley's paper on the Bullfinch in your last issue. This is my favourite bird, and from time to time I catch a good many in this neighbourhood, and have observed their habits very closely. Possibly the fact that in their wild state they are very fond of the "keys" or dry seeds of the ash tree (Fraxinus excelsior) may be new to your readers, especially as I don't remember ever having seen it in print. Ash keys are easily obtained throughout the winter, which is not the case with privet berries, or to any large extent with dock seed.

The New Vale of Leven C.B.C.

SIR,—The adjourned meeting of the above C.B.C. was held in the School Room, Alexandria, on the 27th ult. The secretary intimated that Mr. A. Lees had accepted the position of hon. vice-president. The draft rules submitted by the sub-committee with a few alterations were unanimously agreed to. The meetings are to be held the first Tuesday of each month in the village school room, Susannah Street, Alexandria, at 8 p.m., and the annual show in the middle of November; the Juno meeting is to be devoted to arranging classes and selecting judges. Four new members were admitted, viz., Messrs. J. McIntyre, R. Malbourn, W. Crow, R. Barr. It was decided to have a matched pair exhibition at next meeting, Tuesday, 7th Feb., at which the principal pairs will be criticised for the benefit of young fanciers.

The Untimely Death of a Noted Crestbred.

SIR, In answer to "Member of Gateshead's" letter, under the above heading, we may say that when we received our birds home from Gateshead Show on Dec. 11, and found our young green Crest-bred dead, in the bottom of the cage, we came to the conclusion that he must have died on the journey back. We penned our letter to you, Sir, on Dec. 12, and at the same time wrote the secretary, informing him that the bird arrived back dead, asking for information. His reply, giving particulars, was received on Wednesday, Dec. 14. But "Member of Gateshead" will see that our letter to you simply stated facts, as far as we knew them at the time of writing. No reflection whatever was cast on the Gateshead Society, and none was intended. We think, and suggest, that in a case like this, when a bird dies at an exhibition, the secretary should notify the owners at once, or at the very least enclose a note with birds when returning same. In this instance, no official information was forthcoming until we wrote for it.

Are Birds Fruit Eaters?

SIR,—I have seen several instances lately where birds have been put down as destroyers of fruit, and I have been waiting for some abler pen than mine to write in their defence. The soft-billed birds are mostly blamed, but some of the hard-billed birds are blamed—the Bullfinch, I think, the most so. We will take the Softbills first—those that I have mostly seen on the slabs in game-dealers' shops killed for food. First of all comes that most beautiful bird the Starling, which is slaughtered in very great numbers, not only for food purposes, but to provide so-called sportsmen with something to shoot at. This bird is not a fruit-eater. His food consists chiefly of the larvæ of the chafer and click beetle, but also of scores of different kinds of pests which fall a prey to his most wonderful eye; and the energy he displays in seeking them is something marvellous. He is the farmers' and fruit-growers' best friend, and it is a great blot on modern civilisation to shoot, trap-net and slaughter him for food, etc. The next bird is that melodious songster and beautiful bird, the Blackbird. As a mellow songster with a pure delivery, this bird, I think, stands alone amongst our large Britishers, and is most beautiful to hear as the shades of night are falling. Pay a visit to any large fruit-growing district and get in touch with the working men on the same, and they will tell you he is a bird that ought to be protected with the utmost rigour, as he is of the greatest help to the master of the farm. His food is chiefly slugs, caterpillars, snails, and other allied pests and larvæ; and the quantity he gets through in a day, even where the ground is very dry, is something amazing. He will sometimes eat a little fruit, mostly when it is over ripe; but the balance of good is greatly in his favour. The Thrush is another bird I have seen on the slab to be sold as food; but I will say this, he is caught in great numbers on the sea coast and other isolated natural haunts by men who are very poor in the winter, and are really in want of food. All the same, it is a great pity that this, the loudest and, I think, the best whistling bird this country possesses, should fall by the hand of man. The Thrush is an expert slug-catcher, and, generally speaking both the fruit grower and market gardener have no greater pest to deal with than the slug and the bird is not a fruit-eater. I shall have to admit that the Bullfinch, at the first glance, seems to be doing a lot of damage to the fruit buds in spring, but if you make a close inspection you will find he is after grubs in the interior of the buds, and as he doesn't visit the orchards in very great numbers, shrubberies and the woods where the cover is thick are the haunts of this beautiful Finch. The Sparrow is another hunted culprit. I know for a fact that this bird is doing a lot more good than harm, as he is a great devourer of that nasty pest the green fly; and in a field of corn, where he seems to be doing no end of damage, he is doing so to get at the greenfly which, if left alone, might destroy the whole crop. I don't agree with the species getting too numerous, but if farmers and other people who have no idea what they are doing would keep down the gun and give Hawks and other birds of prey a little more liberty, nature would balance itself in the most wonderful manner, as the Creator with his Masterful hand intended it should. The Skylark is the greatest sufferer, I think, at the hands of the "pot-hunter," and with my own eyes I have seen thousands on the game-dealers' slabs to be used as food; and how any man (unless he is starving) can kill these beautiful birds, takes my comprehension. The authorities have tried to stop me keeping birds, but they haven't done it yet, and I don't think they ever will do.

Suggested Border Fancy Club for the South.

SIR,—I noticed the question of a Border Fancy Club for the south, as mentioned in CAGE BIRDS of December 3. I think that a club could be successfully started, as the Borders have been making rapid strides during the last four years, and quite strong classes are to be seen at southern shows. If a Border Fancy Club were formed for southern fanciers, I think show managers would give better classification, and more fanciers would take up with the "wee gems," and I for one would welcome such a club. I should like to learn what other fanciers think.

Proposed Cage Bird Society for Cheetham Hill, Manchester.

SIR,—I was pleased to see the letter re the above in CAGE BIRDS, and think it a very good idea, as there are lots of fanciers both in Cheetham Hill, Prestwick, and Heaton Park. I am sure they would join and make a good society. I have only just commenced in the Fancy myself, and have a few nice Yorkshires. I should only be too pleased to join a society as suggested, as I think it is wanted, and would encourage others. However, I should like to know what other fanciers think of this.

The Birds of a Western Island.

SIR,—Tory Island lies in the Atlantic some ten miles from the West Coast of Donegal. It is about five miles long, and averages half a mile in width. It has a population of about 300 persons, who live principally by fishing; a little barley and a few potatoes are grown in the few spots where there is any soil capable of growing anything except stunted grass and heather. The surface is generally bare rock and stones. The Western side presents to the Atlantic high broken cliffs; from the summit of these the ground slopes gradually to the boulder beaches of the eastern shore. There is no trees or bush, or even a cabbage plant on the Island; so, as may be expected, the birds are not numerous in species except the sea fowl. Of these nesting on the Island there are eleven species, viz.:—Greater Black-backed, Herring, Common and Kittiwake Gulls, Cormorant, Crested Shag, Common and Black Guillemot, Razor-Bill, Puffin, and Stormy Petrel. All except the last are well known. The Stormy Petrel is never seen to fly in the daytime, at all events, in this neighbourhood. I have taken it from its nesting hole, and it has laid quietly in my open hand until placed at the entrance to the hole, when it will scuttle back to the darkness like a young rabbit. It is about the size of a Swift, sooty black in colour, with a white rump, tiny black webbed feet and a curiously pigeon-like head and beak. It lays a pure white egg, large for the size of the bird—about the size of a Thrush's egg. Two Hawks nest on the Island—the Peregrin-Falcon and the Kestrel. The Ringed Plover nests in some numbers, also the Oyster Catcher, one or two pairs of Lapwings, and occasionally the Golden Plover. Other nesters are the Skylark and Titlark, the Linnet, and, of course, the Sparrow. In winter, especially in hard seasons, a large number of birds of kinds never seen on the Island at other seasons, appear, namely, Greenland Falcon (occasionally, two specimens were shot last winter, both while perching on the high gable of the church), Blackbirds, Thrushes, Fieldfares and Redwings in considerable numbers, Snow Buntings, Snipe, Woodcock, Wild Duck, and occasionally geese (Anser albifrans). This completes the list of twenty nesting species and ten winter visitors recorded. That the number of nesting land birds is so small is not surprising considering the absence of cover. The Linnets have to build among the rocks, and the Snipe in winter, when flushed from the pools and soft ground, seek cover among the boulders on the shore. There are no rats in Tory. A pot of soil from the Island, kept in a house, is said to prevent rats from entering or remaining in it. What price Tory earth for banishing mice from a bird-room?

The Thatto Heath & Dis. O.S.

SIR,—Our second meeting was held on Dec. 5 in the Nutgrove School, when the election of officers and rules were passed for the coming year. Four new members were enrolled, and the prospects of the club are very bright. Curing a Linnet's Nasty Habit of Twirling.

SIR,—Reading in last week's CAGE BIRDS re a bird always going backwards, in fact seemed almost if it were going to break its back, I may say I have a Linnet, which was caught about two months back. I have tried different sorts of cages, but all were of no use. Now I am trying him in a large box with Sparrow mesh wire front, and three perches. I have a Redpoll in with him, and I have been watching them to-day, and I think he will break of it. As you know, a Redpoll is rather a lively little bird, and the Linnet is following whatever he does; that is, flying from the middle perch to the wire front and back to the perch. I am inclined to think it is something to do with the eyes, because wherever he attempts to fly he wants to go backwards. But anyhow, I certainly think he will break of it. So I should advise your correspondent of last week to try it; only I should certainly get a Redpoll to put in with him.

The Protection of British Bird-keepers.

SIR,—I noticed our friend Mr. Slack appealing once again to readers on the subject of forming a society for the benefit of bird-keepers, etc., which I think would be a very great boon to lovers of the feathered tribe, and a big chalk against the R.S.P.C.A., for we could properly protect ourselves. When a man gets in trouble now, and has no help from any source, the R.S.P.C.A. simply put their spoke in, and it is all over with the unfortunate man, whoever he may be. I have been one of these, so I know what they do. As our friend says, I think it is time we formed some sort of a society and not allow ourselves to be trampled upon as we are now. I would myself be willing to take any part in forming a society, which is greatly needed; and I hope it will soon be commenced. It would be more to the R.S.P.C.A.'s credit to let some of the poor feathered creatures out of their "slums" (the birds which may be seen in filthy cages). If they would deal with some of these cases of cruelty instead of prying into the business of the proper British bird fancier, it would, I say, be more to their credit. Let us fight for our birds and form a society so that we can help one another when in trouble.

ONE INTERESTED IN CAGE BIRDS.

Some British Hardbills which I Have Kept.

SIR,—Here are a few notes respecting British Hardbills which I have taken a great fancy to ever since I was old enough to go birds-nesting (I am sorry to say I robbed a great lot in those times). I think the Goldfinch comes to the top of our British pets, followed closely by John Bull, or Master Bullie, as he is variously called. The Goldie when first caught should be put in a cage not too large, say, 14ins. by 12ins. by 9ins. deep, with canvas top, wire in front only, with seed and water utensils inside. I prefer canvas tops to all cages for fresh-caught birds, as they are liable to jump up and knock the tops of their heads, and we all know that at the very top there is a tender spot on a bird's head. For a good stock mixture, plenty of cracked hemp, rape, Canary, maw, niger, and sunflower seeds should be given, and safflower seed for a treat. A good mixed wild seed is thistle, dandelion, gold of pleasure, parsnip, and cornflower, which may be given occasionally as tit-bits; these you will find an excellent thing for bringing them on full song. I think that if Goldies could be inbred and the size kept up for a few years, we should get at the bottom of light Mule-breeding, as I think it is in the Finch where the mystery lies. And I don't see why this should not be managed in suitable aviaries out of doors, and plenty of natural food. The sexing of Goldfinches is not an over easy matter for a novice, as both birds resemble one another very much, the hen being perhaps a trifle the smaller. I generally pick the cocks by the bars in the wing, these running further over the back than in the case of the hen. The black on the head and wing butts also are more velvety. The hen's head and wing-butts are duller, and the bar does not go nearly so far. The Goldie builds in small trees such as hawthorn, apple, pear, cherry, and such like trees, and the branches of large oaks, etc. The nest is rather small, and contains usually four eggs in a clutch. The young of all species should be taken when they are about ten or twelve days old, and should be kept in a small basket lined with an old nest or a piece of flannel; they should be fed from sunrise to sunset. The Linnet is another popular favourite of all lovers of British Hardbills. And no wonder, seeing what a fine songster he is for so small a price. The Linnet is a splendid mimic, imitating all kinds of birds and their call notes. He is easily entered for Canary, tensle, rape, charlock, and a few linseeds, and the usual wild seed mixture occasionally. The cock may be distinguished by the white edgings on the flights and sides of tail, the red breast and cap when at liberty in summer plumage; but he lacks the red in confinement, which is a great pity. The hen is more soberly clad, having none of the afore-mentioned markings; but she is more heavily pencilled all over. The Linnet nests on commons and waste grounds, where plenty of furze abounds. She lays from three to five eggs in a clutch. Master Bullie, or "John Bull," as I call him, is a good type of "John Bull," the same as the bull dog. The Bullfinch is advancing "hand over fist" as an exhibition bird. And no wonder, seeing what a lovely bird he is when looked after properly. The Bullie has not much song, as we know, but he will pipe several tunes if patiently taught, especially when hand-reared, which requires study as in everything else. The same stock mixture will do for him as does for the Goldie, omitting the hemp, which you must give very sparingly—only as a treat, in fact, now and again. Bullfinches are easily sexed, the cock having a jet black cap, flights, and tail, cheeks, and breast, belly a rich tile red, and a lovely slate-coloured back. The hen is not so gorgeous, the black being duller and the breast a dirty brown. Bullfinches are shy birds when wild. They build in low trees, thick-set hedges and bushes, and lay from four to six eggs. The nest is flimsy and of platform shape, with a small cup in the middle—which you may call cup and saucer shape. The hen Bullfinch, like the cock Goldie, is greatly in demand for Mule and Hybrid breeding, both with Canaries and with British Finches; therefore catchers can find a ready sale for them. The Chaffinch and Bramblefinch are becoming more popular, both being very prettily marked; and they are what we might call cousin Finches. The Chaffinches may be seen feeding by hundreds under the beech trees at this time of the year, while their cousins keep more to the open country. The Chink is one of the cleverest of our nest builders, being a very able architect. He builds his home to suit the surroundings. When the hen is sitting she is almost hidden from sight, her nest being so deep. From three to five eggs are the usual run of both birds. Their diet varies from that of the other Finches. They like spiders, earwigs, flies, and all kinds of small insects, besides taking the usual run of seeds. I procure plenty of flies during the summer time by putting wire work catchers all over the place. A drop of stale beer serves for bait with a bit of sugar soaked in. When the catchers are full put in the oven for a few minutes, and you will soon get a good supply of dried flies to last all the winter. These, when offered through the wires, greatly help to steady the birds, as they will soon take them from your fingers if coaxed a little. When they are steadied down they should be transferred to a stock cage, say, about 18 or 20 inches long, 14 inches high, by 10 inches deep. A Quaker Oats box makes a good cage, allowing plenty of room. Plane it and paint it inside a nice pale blue, or size green, and black outside, enamelled or varnished. Give two seed drawers, one each end—one for stock food and one for tit-bits—with water bottles outside. A turnrail is preferable to a sand tray, as it is not so much trouble to keep drawing in and out. Allow plenty of bathing on suitable days, as this is the finest "conditioner" for keeping them in perfect health. When picking out birds for exhibition, always pick the largest, most evenly marked, and best coloured birds. You can always find in CAGE BIRDS what an exhibition bird should be like. Steadiness is one of the main points when exhibiting. I think all Britishers should be moulted out of doors in a small aviary on plenty of natural food. Allow plenty of fresh air, and a free supply of baths; and I don't think anybody will go far wrong. The Siskin, Greenfinch, Twite, Redpoll, and all the Bunting family are all very interesting Britishers, and can be managed practically on the same lines.

A LOVER OF BRITISHERS.

A Hint to Societies in the Liverpool District.

SIR,—Allow me to inform Mr. A. E. Lloyd, sec. of the Birkenhead C.F.A., that the novices referred to in my previous letter do buy their CAGE BIRDS—wouldn't miss it, in fact, at three-pence a copy. What would the novices do without it? I have looked over several back numbers of CAGE BIRDS, and failed to find any preliminary announcements relating to the principal shows held in Birkenhead, Wallasey, and Bootle, quite recently. What we complain about is that we have not had the opportunity to visit these shows, from the mere fact that we have not known when they were being held. The first intimation we got was the report of the show in CAGE BIRDS. And here again, it would be interesting to know how Mr. Lloyd makes out that "A Novice" is held in "camera," unless it should be because "A Novice" has not applied for membership of any club within forty miles of the above district, but with a little encouragement might do so. Then, again, "A Novice" has not taken any firsts on the show bench. So much for Mr. Lloyd's information. Thanks to the advt. in CAGE BIRDS, we, the novices (not the so-called novices), were at the Liverpool B.B.A. old show, and also the amalgamated show. We are out for knowledge, as we hope to do something next season. Perhaps the professors would like to hold us in "camera." No, Mr. Lloyd, we intend to be in the picture. We desire no complimentary tickets—it is not our way of supporting a show. So the misfortune must be, we can't all be secretaries. As we have not fallen in any of the above societies we can't very well fall out. Have another guess. I write at the request of the owners of over four hundred birds, and we all buy that wonderful pennyworth, CAGE BIRDS. A mystery, isn't it? Now, Mr. Lloyd, keep to the point, and your membership may go up with the addition of

A NOVICE.

Points about Bird-breeding and Exhibiting.

ARTHUR A. PINNION

The first thing to be considered is choosing a room. Light and ventilation are two important factors in the choice of a bird-room, and if you have a room that gets the early morning sun and is sheltered from the midday heat, you have an ideal situation for a successful bird-room. But do not be discouraged if you have not such a room; good results have been obtained in rooms with N. and N.E. aspects.

Having chosen the room, strip it of everything in the shape of furniture, hangings, etc., and even the wallpaper must be sacrificed, as it is apt to harbour vermin. Whitewash the ceiling and use a sanitary washable distemper for the walls. A light green or blue shade will give a very nice appearance to the room.

Furnishing.

The furnishing will next engage our attention. In order to facilitate the removal of any particular cage, it will be necessary to make racks, so that the cages are not piled one on top of the other.

It will not require any great carpentering knowledge to fit up a staging for the cages. If necessary the wood can be bought ready planed and cut at the local timber yard.

To prevent draught, and to ensure perfect ventilation, a screen of perforated zinc in a wooden frame, made to fit the window sash, will be found very useful. This should be made about a foot deep, and the window sash pushed up until it holds the zinc firmly in position. If the sun shines strongly into the room, tissue paper can be pasted over the windows, or, if preferred, ground glass can be substituted. All cages should be marked with a plain number; this will facilitate the keeping of a breeding register.

Buying the Birds.

No time should be lost in getting the birds into their new quarters. I am in favour of buying cold-room birds, i.e., birds that have been bred and kept in unheated rooms; and you should make the dealer understand this when ordering. Give as much as you can afford for your birds, and go to a reliable firm. Plenty of such can be found by means of the advertisement columns of CAGE BIRDS.

Six pairs would be a nice little stock to start with, but remember that a few good birds are better than a lot of bad ones. I advise the beginner to start with Norwich, Yorkshires, or Border Fancies; he will have plenty of opportunity of trying the more delicate varieties when he has gained more experience.

To keep the birds in good health, and at the same time prevent them getting into a too forward condition, they should be fed on a staple diet of Canary seed, with a little German rape two or three times a week and a little green food or sweet apple daily. An occasional pinch of niger seed is useful for the hens, as it is supposed to be a preventive of egg-binding.

Pairing Up.

In a room not artificially heated, it would be unwise to pair up before April. The birds should then be given a little egg-food daily or every other day, and a little green food. They should then be put in the double-breeding cages, parted off by a wire partition down the centre. It will be advisable to look at the birds' claws before pairing them up, and if these are too long cut them with a sharp pair of scissors. Eggs sometimes get punctured by the hens' claws when these are allowed to get too long. Care should be taken, however, not to go too close to the "quick," as this will cause the bird great pain.

When the birds have been in the breeding cage a few days, the cock will begin to "call" the hen, and if she comes to the wires to be fed and caressed, you will know that all is well, and the slide can be withdrawn in a few days. Nesting material should then be supplied; a small quantity at first, increasing it when they commence to build in earnest.

Incubation.

When the first egg is laid it should be taken away and put in a partitioned box containing bran, and a number put on the box corresponding to that on the cage. This will enable you to put the right eggs back when you replace them on the evening of the appearance of the third egg. In about fourteen days you will probably have the pleasure of seeing a nest or two of young birds, but this is the critical period of their lives.

On the eve of hatching the old birds should be given half a teaspoonful of hard-boiled yolk of egg in addition to their seed diet. The next day add breadcrumbs to the egg in the proportion of two parts egg to one part breadcrumbs. After this, up to the seventh day the proportions should be one part egg to two parts breadcrumbs. It is not advisable to use the white of egg until after the fourth day.

When the young are a week or ten days old, crushed hemp should be supplied in a separate vessel, as the young birds grow quickly when fed on this seed. At the age of a fortnight it will be necessary for sanitary reasons to give them a clean nest. Procure another nest pan, fill it with nesting material, and twist your hand round it until it is well pressed down all round; then quickly transfer the youngsters into the new nest.

Weaning.

If all goes well, the young birds will leave the nest when about twenty-five days old, and then you will have to keep a sharp eye on the hen. If you find her plucking them, they must be placed behind the wire partition in one half of the cage where the cock will feed them, while a little scalded rape and egg-food can be given them in separate vessels to induce them to pick up for themselves. No green food should be given until they are thoroughly weaned from soft food, which must be done very gradually.

Supply crushed and uncrushed seed until you find they are able to crack it themselves. Scalded summer rape is good for young birds, but it must be thoroughly dried before being given to them; and be careful not to leave it until it turns sour. When five weeks old the young should be put on a hard seed diet, and can then be removed to flight cages to gain strength for the coming moult.

Moulting Matters.

Although the moult is a natural process, the birds require some attention during this trying period. A more nourishing diet is necessary, and plenty of room for exercise. If you have any birds you intend to show, they should be moulted in separate cages. The remainder can be turned into flight cages, about six in each. It is usual to tone down the light during the moult, as a strong light will affect the new plumage. This can be effected by fastening a piece of cambric over the cages. The bath may still be given on suitable days, and an abundance of sharp, gritty sand always supplied.

Preparations for the Shows.

If you have had the luck to breed a few likely winners you should get them used to the show cage, and train them to hop from one cage to another. Get them accustomed to people passing by the cage, for unless they are absolutely steady they will not stand much chance of winning prizes.

The way to get a bird steady is not one of the easiest things to demonstrate. Some young birds are particularly obstinate, and no amount of tips will make them steady enough for the show bench. Try to get them to take tit-bits from your hand, or make a sound that the bird is unfamiliar with to engage his attention. Patience is the great secret, and if you can get an "old hand" to help you, you should in a very short time see your name in the show reports.

Owls in Captivity.

Some Curious Traits of Little-known Pets.

There is an old English proverb to the effect that "no one but a fool would give a groat for an owl." The saying is, no doubt, a relic of the days when Owls, bats, toads, witches, and black cats were all banned together as uncanny. As a gibe at Owl-keepers it may still weigh with those who regard the birds as merely uninteresting. The present writer (says Francis Irwin, in "Country Life") has in his time spent many a groat on Owls, and has never regretted the extravagance. To those who have never seen Owls in an aviary the idea may suggest a row of solemn, sleepy birds, looking like a bench-ful of pious old ladies sitting through a dull sermon. A visit to my Owlery would soon dispel such notions. With the exception of the Barn-Owls, these caged Owls are a very wide-awake little community, whose demeanour, though dignified, is yet withal sufficiently entertaining.

The hand-reared Owls can be distinguished at a glance from their wild-caught neighbours. The latter when approached sit bolt upright, tucking in their plumage and narrowing their eyes to slits, while the tame birds remain open-eyed with their plumage expanded. Several of the Owls in this aviary have been hatched in an incubator and reared by hand. It is quite easy to rear them in this way. Very soon after leaving the egg, young Owls—and the same applies to Hawks—will take small points of rat, mouse or Sparrow from the fingers of their human foster-parent. Moreover, owing to the nutritious character of a meat diet, they need feeding much less frequently than non-carnivorous birds of the same age. In common with all fledgelings they must be kept very warm at this early stage. A simple means to secure this is to leave them for the first week in the moderately-heated upper chamber of the incubator.

When chickens occupy this compartment with them it is comical to witness the attempts made by the Owlets to swallow the chickens. The Owlet, as yet quite blind, a downy white ball with disproportionately large head and throat, gropes open-mouthed at a chicken and swallows his head, making desperate efforts to gulp it down. The chicken, meanwhile, submits patiently to these clumsy efforts without showing the least alarm! Owls reared from the incubator naturally become very tame, but if they are to remain so they should be handled frequently during their first year. Such Owls never grow irritated when disturbed by day like those which have been caught wild with fully developed nocturnal habits.

A few moments passed in front of the Owl aviary on a sunny day would serve to dispose of the widely current impression that Owls are helpless in daylight. There the Owls may often be seen revelling in the warm sunshine. All Owls require an occasional bath to keep them in health, though in winter they are seldom seen in the water. In warm weather they bathe regularly, usually in the early morning, and again towards evening.

Caged Owls bolt shrews eagerly and with no further sign of distaste than the usual hideous grimace which all Owls make when they eat. Not even a schoolboy taking medicine can ever hope to compete with an Owl in the art of pulling wry faces. But as a master of facial contortions your Owl is at his best when, with violent convulsions, he disgorges the oblong pellet of bones, feathers and fur called a casting. Gamekeepers who trap and shoot Owls would do well to notice that these castings rarely, if ever, contain the remains of young gamebirds, which is not surprising, when one reflects that as a rule when Owls are abroad the young gamebirds are asleep under their mothers.

Tackling Rats.

I have never found the remains of large rats in the castings of wild Owls. The single experiment which I tried to verify the power of tame Owls to tackle big rats ended ludicrously, to the discomfiture of the Owls. A nearly full-grown rat was placed in the Owls' cage. Instantly the Owls were on the alert, craning their necks and bobbing their heads up and down. Soon a Tawny Owl swooped down upon the rat, gripping him by the back with both claws. Turning on his aggressor, the rat bit him on the leg. With a squeak of surprise the Owl dropped him and fled. When a second attempt was similarly met by the rat, the Owl finally retired from the fray. But hand-reared Owls have never had a chance of learning from their wild parents how to grip a rat correctly.

Possibly the Barn-Owls, who are specialists in ratting, might have been more successful, but they refuse to perform before an audience in the daytime. As a destroyer of vermin he is probably without a rival among Owls, and he is consequently sure of a welcome in any barn or stable he deigns to inhabit. It is quite possible to induce Barn-Owls to take up their residence in a suitable building hitherto untenanted by them. The method employed here with success was to confine a Barn-Owl in a box inside the bull's-eye gable window of an old barn. The box contained a wired aperture on both sides to familiarise the captive with the appearance of the interior of the barn and its outlook, and also to enable him to summon a mate to visit him. When these objects were attained, the wire was removed, and the Owl and his mate lived happily together in the barn ever after.

Affectionate Regard.

Though apparently so undemonstrative, the Barn-Owl is not devoid of proper feelings of affection for his keeper. For some months after his liberation from this aviary a Barn-Owl used to come every evening to visit his whilom gaoler, feed from his hand and sit near him in the shed where he worked. Friendly cows lying side by side lick one another's faces; an Owl shows his affection for his neighbour by scratching his head. It is a funny spectacle to watch a sleepy Barn-Owl roused from his siesta by a wakeful and officious Tawny who insists on nibbling and trimming his head for him.

In general, caged Owls are not quarrelsome companions, but it is not safe to introduce a very young Owl into the society of his grown-up elders. I have lost more than one of my Owlets in this way, the blood on the white stockings of the Barn-Owls pointing them out in each case as the murderers.

Even the Little Owl, the smallest of our native species, will live unmolested in the company of Tawnies, Long-Eared and Short-Eared Owls and Barn-Owls. But his immunity from attack may be due to some extent to constant watchfulness. My Little Owls were never happy unless they could perch above the heads of their bigger cousins, and so near the roof of the cage that no enemy could pounce upon them unawares. The fierce looks of the Little Owl do not belie his disposition. He is in reality the most savage, and for his size the most destructive of our British Owls. My tame Little Owls used to attack larger birds than one of the other four species would venture to molest. From time to time different kinds of Hawks, with Jackdaws, Magpies and Jays, have been placed in the aviary as companions to the Owls. The Hawks, with the exception of the small male Merlin, were always safe from attack, but the others soon found it necessary to seek the shelter of a thick evergreen shrub to avoid the onslaughts of the Little Owls. The moment a Magpie alighted on the ground these little desperadoes would stalk him with stealthy, cat-like movements till within striking distance, when they leapt on his back—and this in broad daylight, for the Little Owl is absolutely unaffected by the glare of sunlight.

Some Recent Arrivals from Abroad.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

The American Robin.

Since the appearance of my note on the above species last month, I have had an interesting letter from Mr. Ch. Burrows, who tells me that he is a fancier and exhibitor of British birds. Mr. Burrows writes from 20, Payton Street, Stratford-on-Avon, as follows:—"I caught in my garden early in February one of the American Robins and kept him, moulted him, and sent him to the recent L.C.B.A. show in the Albino class, thinking it was a coloured Blackbird. Of course, he was wrong-classed. He was in company of two cock Blackbirds for a month before I caught him. He was in lovely feather, but must have been a young bird, as the beak was only just turning yellow when caught."

Mr. Burrows also very kindly wrote me again on December 21, telling me that a friend of his had seen another Robin, also in company with Blackbirds, only a few days before, close to Stratford, and forwarded me a copy of the "Stratford-on-Avon Herald" of March 18, 1910, which states that no less than three "American Thrushes" had been seen in the neighbourhood shortly before the latter date, the first of which arrived just before Christmas (1909).

I not only take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Burrows for his courtesy, but I must also congratulate him on having brought forward quite the most interesting information that has yet been obtained with regard to the Robins bred in Surrey in 1909. As I mentioned in my former note, the latter mysteriously disappeared, and, from the fact that some were subsequently seen in the Eastern counties, it had been assumed that they had taken an easterly direction. We now know that some took an exactly opposite direction, and are now apparently resident at a place no less than ninety miles distant. I wonder what can have attracted them to Stratford. Was it the fame of the "Bard of Avon," or that of Miss Marie Corelli? I have asked Mr. Burrows to try to ascertain if there is any evidence of any Robins having nested in his district during the past summer, or of having mated with Blackbirds. I hope that any of our readers who can contribute any further information will not fail to let us know of it.

Some European Species.

The autumn of 1910 will be ever memorable for the great numbers of European species which have reached our shores both by importation and by immigration. Never before probably have such quantities of Siberian Bullfinches, Rosefinches, Goldfinches, and Waxwings been imported. One dealer received 102 Waxwings in one consignment, and I can safely say that never before have I seen so many Bearded Tits from Holland. More than 30 Hoopoes have been sold by one importer. Starlings and Gold-crested Wrens have crossed the North Sea in myriads. In many parts of Europe it seems to have been an exceptionally good breeding season, and in this connection we may note that, although we have had such a dreadfully wet summer in W. Europe, over a large area of E. and S.E. Europe the summer has been exceptionally fine and warm. We must also remember that since the great winter of 1895-96 we have not had any long spell of severe weather, the result of which is that the majority of European species have greatly increased in numbers. As an instance of the phenomenal character of the past autumn we may take

The Mealy Redpoll.

A year ago it was impossible to obtain any Mealy Redpolls; at the present time they are spread over the whole of the country; and a friend who lives on the Yorkshire coast tells me that there are literally dozens in his garden. There has probably not been such a Mealy Redpoll year since 1847, though 1881 was also notable. Whenever this species crosses the North Sea in exceptional numbers, a certain proportion of the closely allied R. exilipes, which has the rump almost white, is found in company with it. Although one constantly sees the distinctions between the Lesser and the Mealy Redpoll pointed out, the most obvious point of difference seems to be hardly ever mentioned, namely that, while the Lesser has a brownish rump, the Mealy is light-grey on the same area. Another distinction, which may be of interest to aviarists, is that the Lesser Redpoll will pass through "three-quarter-inch mesh" netting—the Mealy cannot.

The Serin and The Citril Finch.

There are certain desirable European species which cannot usually be obtained from our own dealers, but which are in some years quite common in other bird markets, as, for instance, the Crested and Calandra Larks, the Barred and Orpheus Warblers, the Black-headed and Red-headed Buntings, and those charming little Finches, the Serin and Citril.

The Serin Finch (F. Serinus) is smaller than our Siskin, and may be easily distinguished from the latter by the absence of the black crown (of the male) and by its small and stumpy beak. The breast, neck and sides of the face are a bright yellow. It is a most indefatigable songster, and, though its notes are high pitched and rather squeaky, I remember being delighted with them when I first came across these little birds on the slopes of the Esterel mountains in S. Europe. I have several now singing out of doors, and in an aviary this active and brightly coloured little species is seen at its best. Although Serins are plentiful on the Continent just now, I have not heard of any being imported lately. Last winter Mr. Lucr had two nice specimens. I obtained mine from Germany.

The Citril Finch (F. Citrinella) is larger than the Serin and is not nearly so brightly coloured. The back is dull greenish, the wings blackish with a dull yellow bar, the upper breast ashy, and the lower breast gamboge. The male has more yellow on the face than the female. The call-note, which has a curious vibratory tone, can be heard at a considerable distance. Citril Finches have been abundant this autumn in Central Europe, from which locality I have just received some. It is said to possess a very melodious song, but I have not yet heard the latter. I trust that the above brief description will be sufficient to distinguish these two attractive little Finches, which do not seem to be as well known as they deserve to be. Boelstein, for instance, seems to regard them as identical, and compares the song of the Serin to that of the Lark.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Troubled with Diarrhœa.

C. J. Radclyffe.—You should first look into the general conditions, and see that the conservatory is not subjected to extremes of heat and cold, is not damp or stagnant in atmosphere, but fairly equable and efficiently ventilated without cold draughts. See also that your seeds, especially rape and hemp, are sound and good. In addition to the staple of canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately to each bird, and a morsel of ripe banana every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed plain dry biscuit, with a pinch of maw and a few grains of hemp added to it. Give no green food or any other fruits than the banana, whilst this trouble lasts, but you may stick a piece of cuttlefish in the wires for them to peck at. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for one day only, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Ventilating Outhouse.

T. B. (Pendlebury).—It is no easy task to tell you how best to ventilate your outhouse without fuller details of its description than you give, or, better still, a rough sketch of it, just enough to convey a general idea of its main features and construction, and whether built of wood or brick and mortar, and whether the floor of the house is on the ground level, or raised above it, and if raised above ground level, whether there is free space underneath it. In a general way the syphon air pipe system, which you will find described and illustrated in Part III. of "Our Canaries," now publishing in monthly parts, applicable to practically every kind of structure, second to none as a means of securing a constant supply of fresh pure air without draughts. Apart from this, and in the absence of more definite particulars regarding the structure, I should say your best method would be to remove a pane of glass (or two if small) from the window, and fit in the space a frame work of thin blades of hard wood with a small space between each, and set at an angle running upwards from the outside, so that the air coming between the blades would be directed upwards from the cages. Look at a venetian blind with the slats turned at rather more than a right angle, and there you will see what you want. A shutter may be fitted over these spaces for use when considered advisable. If this does not meet your needs write again and give the above particulars.

A Question of Sex and Feeding.

A.T.—If you have the two birds in question caged separately I am afraid they will prove to be hens, notwithstanding your opinion to the contrary. Apart from the song and general demeanour, the shape of the vent is the most reliable guide at this time. Get an undoubted cock and hen, blow up the feathers of the abdomen and note the comparative differences in shape of vent; that of the cock being prominent and pointed, whilst that of the hen is broader and flatter, and almost, or quite, on a level with the abdomen. If you then similarly examine the two doubtful birds you should be able to tell to which sex they belong. If the birds are not caged separately put them in separate cages at once and feed as follows for a few weeks. Give plain canary seed only as a staple. Every second day give separate by half a teaspoonful of summer rape. Twice a week, on the alternate days, give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and on each of the remaining alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga and teazle, and one part each maw, gold of pleasure and sesame seeds. It is quite a matter of individual taste whether you use both yolk and white of egg when feeding up for breeding. If you have only a small stock of birds so that the yolk of one egg is sufficient for one all-round feed, then discard the white, but in the reverse circumstances use both yolk and white, or sufficient white to make up the usual proportions—one part egg to two parts biscuit.

Out of Condition.

H.M.S.—I suspect the bird is more or less exposed to extremes of heat and cold or cold draughts, and not being so young as usual had not sufficient recuperative powers to quite throw off these effects after its moult a year ago. To have stood a really good chance of curing the bird you ought to have commenced treatment at, or just prior to, the proper moulting season: about three months ago. However, give the following treatment a good trial for the next two months. First see that the cage is quite free from cold draughts and the fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and that it is in a fairly comfortable and equable temperature—not necessarily very warm, nor yet on the chilly side. You might also examine all the joints and crevices, probing, if necessary, with a pin, for traces of mites, and overhaul cage to eradicate them if any are found. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled with maw seed. After the first month omit these additions, and mix in the sponge cake instead four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion. On two other days each week give a pinch of a mixture of one part each hemp, linseed, teazle and millet; two or three times a week give a morsel of raw carrot, sweet apple, banana, or watercress. In the drinking water add a small pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid and six of tincture of gentian every second day. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. Allow bird to bathe freely in mild weather. Anoint the bare places sparingly twice a week with carbolised vaseline.

Deformed Toe (Spivinix).—It is useless trying to improve the toe now. It should have been treated as soon as the bird left the nest in the way described and illustrated in Part VI. of "Our Canaries," when it would very probably have been quite cured. It would not affect the bird breeding to any material extent, if at all, so there is no reason why you should not mate him in the coming season. It would be advisable, however, to take particular note of the young from this pair, and if any material percentage of this deformity is noticeable among them when leaving the nest, discard him for future breeding, in order to avoid any possibility of getting the trouble hereditary in your stock.

Sudden Fits (R. Clements).—As you do not give the slightest clue to your feeding or general treatment, it is quite impossible to say what affects your birds in the way described. I am inclined to think there is something seriously wrong with the food or treatment, and would advise you to send the body of the next that dies to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem. You might also write us again, and give full particulars on all points mentioned above, and say how and where birds are kept, and describe their symptoms as fully as you can. Meantime, feed on a staple of plain canary seed only, and give half a teaspoonful per bird of summer rape every second day. Twice a week on the alternating days, give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water for two days. Keep cages and perches scrupulously clean and well strewn with clean gritty sand.

Weakly Bird (Hopeful).—Continue the same system of feeding as before advised, except the bread and milk, which you should discontinue, and give instead a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake once a week, to which you may add four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, and sprinkle a little maw over the top of it. You might also with advantage give a morsel of banana instead of the carrot, and a piece of cuttlefish in the wires for it to peck would do no harm. Omit all medicines from water for a week, and after that add twenty drops of chemical food every second day for a month. I assume you have looked to see if the toes are all correctly shaped and placed. Shall be glad to hear result at end of another month.

Too Vague. (G. S.).—Your query is altogether too vague for a definite reply to be given. You must see that it is necessary to know how far removed your proposed Green-variegated hen is from the Green before it is possible to say what percentage of Green blood would exist in her progeny. It is quite possible for such a hen to have 75 per cent. or even more of Green blood. You must also know whether the wing-marked cock has much or little Green blood. As regards the crossing with the Cinnamon-marked hen, if the cock is quite free from Cinnamon blood the young would probably be heavily Variegated, Green-marked and Greens, according to the strength of light blood in the birds. Roughly, the young may be credited with 50 per cent. blood of each parent, but to know what percentage of any particular colour they possess you must know the proportion of such colour which exists in each parent.

A Lost Tail (Junius, Junior).—Yes; that is, if the feathers have been plucked out and not broken off and the stumps left in the tail will at once commence to grow again, and will reach a respectable length in a month from the time of the accident. If the feathers do not appear in this length of time catch the bird and examine it to see if the old stumps are retained, as will most likely be the case. If so, gently draw them out one at a time, taking two from each side every other day, which will enable you to remove them all at three operations. No special treatment is necessary, but a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and maw seed three times a week whilst tail is growing will do no harm.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Siskin with Growth.

M.B.W.—Continue treatment already advised in every particular, and do not actively interfere with the growth at present other than as follows:—If there appears any breaking away, well cleanse with tepid water, and then anoint with a little zinc or spermaceti ointment. If it is a humorous growth, then when ripe it must be carefully pricked, well cleansed, and anointed as above. If you find it is a hard growth and does not contain pus, then it must be lightly touched daily with tincture of iodine, using a camel-hair brush and exercising care that the tincture does not enter the nostrils. The main thing is to keep the bowels moving freely by an occasional dose of the magnesia, and its strength up as much as possible by the chemical food. Let its diet remain as usual, but supply liberally green-food (tender lettuce), ripe apple, banana, or any fruit it will eat. I have had many similar cases, and they have usually recovered, and I expect yours will do so, unless the growth is of a really malignant character. It should be kept quite separate from all other birds till the growth has disappeared.

Out of Condition.

J. Tait.—Though I presume you have given me as much information as possible, it leaves me very much in the dark. But I do not think there is much the matter, and that its relapse of talking capacity is but temporary. I prefer the following seed mixture, and it will at any rate make a change for the bird:—Two parts each Canary and White Millet, and one part each hemp, wheat, dari, paddy rice, oats, and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed. Also give ripe fruit, nuts (walnuts for preference), and a piece of plain biscuit occasionally. Get a box of honey and borax and smear a little on its tongue, or place it inside the beak with a camel-hair brush; you can mostly manage this while the bird is hanging on cage wires. Also give one or two doses of Dinneford's magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ordinary sized drinker of water—with at least two days between the doses, and on the alternate days well colour the drinking water with chemical food. The bowels should be kept moving freely, but the voidings should not be watery-loose. I anticipate the bird will be talking as usual in a few weeks, but report progress, say, three weeks hence.

An Ailing Budgerigar.

A.M.P.—I should catch this bird and give it a couple of drops of Dinneford's magnesia direct to the mouth from a quill every other day for a week or longer, and while you have her in your hand examine the vent, and if that is at all inflamed or swollen, anoint it with sweet oil; but do not use sufficient for it to run among the feathers to any extent. Also keep the drinking water well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food, this will not harm the other birds at all, quite the reverse. If the birds become worse, you had better cage it at once and repeat query with full particulars. Your diet is quite satisfactory; as she is a new purchase, she may have come from an indoor aviary, and is consequently feeling the cold; but unless she becomes worse I should leave her out of doors. If you have to repeat query kindly give me size of your aviary and a few details as to furnishings. In case of sudden exhaustion give a few drops of weak brandy and water (chilled), she will suck this from a quill if it be placed against the side of her mandibles near the base.

Parrot's Illness.

E.W.—I cannot give you a full reply till you inform me how you have been feeding and treating the bird. In the meanwhile confine its diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and a few nuts. As you have had the bird for three years I take it, it will let you handle it; cleanse all sores with tepid water, and lightly anoint with either zinc or spermaceti ointment. For one day let its drinking water consist of equal parts of Dinneford's Magnesia and water; then the following day, and continue till relief is given, or you hear further; put one teaspoonful of the following mixture into an ordinary sized drinker of water; mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, glycerine and oxymel of squills in equal parts; you must only use a crock or china drinker when giving drugs. Bathe the eyes with a dilute rose water and zinc eye solution (from any chemist). The nostrils should be well cleansed daily with dilute glyco-thymoline. Keep the bird warm, but not in a stagnant atmosphere, and guard carefully against draught while the bird is being cleansed and bathed. On receipt of this, send me the details asked for, and I will try and help you further per return. Parrots have such powers of recovery that I never consider their case hopeless, save newly imported specimens.

Budgerigar's Overgrown Beak.

Miss W.—There is really nothing for you to do but to continue to cut as required. I have, however, no doubt but that it will ultimately yield to treatment—i.e., not be continuous. In addition to keeping cuttlebone and pieces of stick in the cage, also keep in it several pieces of old mortar rubbish, renewing them as they get fouled. Supply as much green-food and ripe fruit as they will eat; apple is usually eaten, and at this season a leaf of fresh lettuce is about the best green-food. Suspend a stick of hard wood with a piece of twine from the top of cage; this may induce the bird to cling to same with beak and claw, and a certain amount of keeping the beak trimmed or ground down takes place. Budgerigars are very fond of clinging to such swinging branches, and seem to do a lot of cutting up when in such positions. I think you will find this and the mortar rubbish prove ultimately effective. I have also found my birds fond of nibbling at small pieces of sandstone (about the size of walnuts), which I had put in the aviary. However, till you can induce the bird to keep its own beak trimmed by some such methods as those given above, whenever it becomes abnormally long you will have to trim it back.

Budgerigars and Amazon Parrots (Constant Reader).—Some pairs of Budgerigars are a little longer in settling down to breeding than others, and probably yours were quite young when they came into your possession. Leave them entirely to themselves, and while it will be better if eggs are not laid just at present, do not interfere in any way. I have had young leave the husk practically every month in the year and reared, but winter hatched young seem to lack the stamina of the spring and summer reared birds. There is little doubt your birds will do well in the spring, but if eggs are laid, do not remove them, but leave the birds to incubate and rear them if they will. Your Amazon is only a little out of tone; well colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for the next month, and once a week, in lieu of the chemical food, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia to the ordinary sized drinker. Give ripe fruit daily, also a few nuts—shelled walnuts are best, and really the most economical, for usually the birds waste none of these.

Singing Species for Outdoor Aviary (A. S. Peart).—The Pekin Robin can go with your other birds, and will agree with them; also all your cage and aviary birds which you name in list will agree altogether in the one aviary when it is enlarged. An Alario Finch would be a good singer, but they are not often to be had. Watch our adverts. and seize your opportunity. The Cape Canary is a good songster, but it is a Serin, as also are your Grey and Green Singing Finches, and too many of these do not agree together in the same aviary. Silverbills have a nice sweet little song and are amiable. Any species of foreign Siskin you could procure would prove a songster, but they are rather costly. Before I recommend you larger birds, will you repeat query next week, and supply me with the size of the ground area of your aviary, then I can advise you with safety. A Goldfinch would be a pleasing addition, but they are very destructive to plant life in an aviary. By the way, the Pekin will require soft-food, ripe fruit, and a few live insects.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Wild Seeds (R. N. S. T.).—So far as I can see, the residue from the threshing machine will do to give, now and again, to the British birds you name. There is a lot of waste stuff amongst it, as you will probably know.

Magpie and a Jay (Hud).—I know of cases where a Magpie and a Jay have been kept together; but in fair-sized aviaries, not a 4ft. cage. I look upon the latter as just a fair size for one of these birds, but certainly not large enough to hold both. I don't think you are likely to get much satisfaction out of the experiment, if you try it.

Linnet for Muling (Waterloo).—If the Linnet caught during 1910 was a young bird (bred that year), and seems settled and contented with caged life, then he is almost a certain breeder. An old caught bird, still nervous and unsteady, would be less likely to fertilise eggs, though quite possibly he would do so. I should recommend you to get a good-sized variegated yellow hen for the Linnet's mate, although a big marked buff hen would be equally suitable so far as the likelihood of getting youngsters is concerned.

Greenfinch and the Roller Canary's Song (A.B.).—It is unlikely that an adult caught Greenfinch would acquire any notes of the Roller Canary; a Greenie taken very young, or, better still, hand-reared, would no doubt do so. But no Greenfinch would sing the song of a Roller Canary in a very pleasing manner. I am afraid, if that is what you are driving at in your question, the notes of the Greenie would be much more likely to be acquired by your Rollers, and I don't think they would be viewed as a desirable acquisition, either.

Do Magpies Flock? (W. Blakey).—Magpies do not "flock" in the manner Starlings, Linnets, etc., do in the autumn and winter. They are generally seen in pairs. But if there are many Magpies in a given neighbourhood, then out of the breeding season parties of half-a-dozen or so may frequently be met with. I have come across many such small gatherings during my country wanderings.

Four Medicines (Midlothian).—1. Tincture of gentian is a tonic and useful stomachic, very good to give any bird which shows signs of being "off its feed," or after illness. 2. Tincture of capsicum I have never used, and doubt if of any particular value by itself. It would be "warming," and need to be given sparingly. Probably it would be useful in the early stages of diarrhœa. 3. Tincture of steel is a powerful tonic, generally used to bring backward birds into breeding condition, and for weakly birds generally. 4. Syrup of buckthorn is a laxative, useful in cases where birds are suffering from effects of over-feeding (too rich a diet).

A Goldfinch's Eye (Amasis).—You did wrong to use vaseline on the eye; this would make the part sticky and uncomfortable, and lead to the bird rubbing it on the perch. You should bathe the eye three or four times daily with a warm solution of Condy's fluid, of a strength stated in the directions accompanying the bottle. Always use it warm. A piece of surgical lint is the best thing to bathe the eye with, or a piece of very soft cloth. This treatment will soon, I think, stop the running and relieve the soreness.

Linnet Mules (Linaria).—It is not essential that the Linnet shall be cage-moulted: note another answer given this week. It is not unheard of for hen Canaries to lay eggs at this time of the year; I have known young to be reared at Xmas. It is not good for the hens, however; it is often induced by high feeding, especially so if they are kept in a warm room. I think that if you bought a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," from the office of CAGE BIRDS, you would find it very helpful to you in all such difficulties as these, and it would help you to avoid mistakes.

Shrike Attacks Call Birds.

SIR,—While out catching Linnets on the 30th December, about 6½ miles from Carlisle, after I had got set and the two call birds had commenced singing, I observed a bird fly from a tree 100 yards away and alight right against the call bird. I then saw it was caught, and I ran to lift it. I did not really know what sort of bird it was, but I thought it was either a Woodpecker or a Butcher Bird. I made enquiries, and found it was a Butcher Bird (the Larger). Perhaps you would be kind enough to let me know if it was coming for the call birds, and if a rare bird in England, also give me an idea of its value.

OLD BIRD CATCHER.

The Great Grey Shrike (or Butcher Bird) is a regular winter visitor to our islands, but is not common. It will kill and eat other birds. It is difficult to value any bird without being able to see whether it is a good specimen, but our correspondent's Shrike ought to be worth 5s. to 10s.—Ed.

An Irish Railway at Fault.

SIR,—At Bangor (Ireland) show I am credited with 3rd in Dark Mule class (in a class of three entries), also 3rd in 12s. 6d. class (in a class of three entries). This report is not correct. I m sorry to say that I didn't get a chance of even having my birds placed at the bottom of each class, as they were not judged at all. I had three entries in this show, which I despatched on Friday, 16th December, by train leaving Larne at 4.20 p.m., and although it is only about 1¼ hours' run from Larne to Bangor, my birds did not arrive in Bangor till 2.25 p.m. on Saturday. The secretary did not take delivery, so that the birds were not opened up in the show at all. I think this beats all records for quick delivery. I might take this opportunity of thanking the bon. sec. (Mr. Pidduck) and the hon. treasurer (Mr. Alexander) for the trouble and expense they went to over my case of birds. I received two wires from them, also a letter of explanation, which explanation I consider satisfactory. Although they did not take delivery Mr. Alexander made sure the birds were fed and watered.

WM. GEDDIS.

Alleged Stained Linnets at York Show.

SIR,—Now that Mr. Richardson has cleared up the phrase in his letter, "the one put down at York," to my satisfaction by clearly stating in his last letter that I did not exhibit a stained Linnet at York, there is just one point to which I would like to refer. He says he "shuffled" the night I gave my paper, and has kept shuffling since. Well, Mr. R., you can take it from me that any remarks I made on that night were not intended for you, and I am sorry that they have made you "shuffle" so. The enclosed letter, which I received Mr. R. a few days after the lecture was given, will speak for itself. Will you kindly insert it, Mr. Editor, for the edification of the Fancy in general. I take this opportunity of thanking you for allowing me to trespass so much on your valuable space during the past few weeks, and wish CAGE BIRDS and all my brother fanciers a successful year.

J. NICHOLSON.

Copy of Letter from Mr. A. Richardson.

April 20th, 1910.

Dear Mr. Nicholson,—Please find enclosed your paper. We have had three copies done, and sent off to the evening Press and the Fancy Press, along with the usual report of the meeting. Everybody seems high in their praise at the excellent paper and the way it was handled by you.

Yours truly,

A. RICHARDSON.

A Hint to Societies in the Liverpool District.

SIR,—I read with much interest "Novice's" letter re the above. To my mind he touches the spot when be asks why the various societies do not advertise their shows. Why don't they? There must be hundreds within the radius of the half-dozen societies who keep birds, if not for exhibition, for pleasure, and I maintain, Sir, that if each society was to "get a move on," and let the non-members into the secret, it would be to their advantage. I would suggest that they try and reach us with a small advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, under the correspondence column for a change, because of the non-exhibitors. Of course you would charge a little extra for such a privilege. Something like this would be new: "To Liverpool Readers and others, Great Show of Canaries, etc., at St. George's Hall, Saturday next, 12.30 to 5.30. Tickets 6d. each." And, again, our two local papers should not be overlooked. Gentlemen, it will pay you. I fail to see any wisdom in Mr. Lloyd's reply. Where has he drifted to? "Novice" does not ask where any Society meets. Keep to the subject, Mr. Lloyd, and don't worry so much about who "Novice" is; just let us have your reasons for not advertising your shows and making them known.

SIL VOUS PLAIT.

[Our correspondent's suggestion that we should put advertisements in the correspondence column is not one that we could entertain. Our "Twitterings" column is always open, and announcements of forthcoming shows, provided they are not of the nature of an advertisement, can be published therein free of any charge.—EDITOR.

An Appeal to Readers.

Fanciers Killed in the Recent Mine Disaster.

SIR,—I am very sorry to have to inform you that we lost two of our members through the great mine disaster at the Pretoria pit, viz., Mr. P. Green and his brother, James Green, better known as "Lady Green." A great many of your readers in this part of the country know them well, as they were great Linnet contest supporters. I may say that the Globe Inn Linnet Club has opened a subscription list to enable us to show our respect for them to their widows, and any readers of CAGE BIRDS wishing to show their sympathy may do so by contributing to the fund. All contributions will be acknowledged in CAGE BIRDS. Allow me to appeal to all readers to support this fund, so that we can make a substantial gift to the widows.

Bird Life in the Far West of Canada.

SIR,—The Waxwings here are slim—more a Yorkshire type than those I have seen from the Continent of Europe. The wax tips stand out boldly from the wings. Seeing the birds for the first time, sitting on a dark green branch of cedar, one would easily mistake the wax tips for the salmon berries on which they feed during the months of May and June. They sit for hours at a stretch on any long straight branch, or, if convenient, a telegraph wire. They allow one to approach within a few yards of them, and can be easily caught with a limed twig on a fishing rod. I have not met with any of the native birds in cages; the birds don't get much of a name as songsters, but to listen to the Cat-bird, Robin, White-eyed Wren, Rose-breasted Grosbeak, and the little brown Fox Sparrow on a May evening is one of the best treats a lover of bird song could have. To my mind none of these comes up to the Blackbird, Thrush, or Skylark for duration or sweetness of note. I cannot compare any of these with the English Nightingale, as I never have had the pleasure of hearing one sing. The Robin I have heard keeping up a continued calling for over six hours; this, of course, could hardly be called a song. Seed-eating birds are not so numerous as the insectivorous ones, hosts of which arrive from the South in April and May. Birds about the class of a Chiff-chaff are in the majority. The smallest of these is the Humming Bird, two varieties of which come here, and even find their way as far north as Alaska. The Ruby-throated Humming Bird is the commonest and prettiest. About the end of May the male, with his green-scaled back and his bright ruby-coloured throat, may be seen to the best advantage; he is then in his full breeding plumage, which, after he has selected his mate, gradually fades in brightness. In front of a bush of scarlet honeysuckle he will hang just before the flower with wings vibrating so rapidly that they become invisible. The drumming, or humming, from which the bird get its name is thus produced. If another male should come near, there is a fierce battle in miniature, which usually ends in the pair of them making a rapid dart away out of sight. So fast and straight do they fly that the eye can scarcely follow them. In the late summer they visit the gardens, and flower boxes on the verandas preferring nasturtiums to other flowers. They will hunt on the elder trees, looking on the underside of the leaves for small insects, which they may lift with their slender tongues as easily as they may sip the nectar from the flowers. Cold weather does not seem to damp the spirit of these feathered midgets, as the first one I noticed this season was in the early days of April. It must have come high over the Rocky Mountains, with their mantle of snow and ice, helped, no doubt, by the warm winds of Mexico. Truly it is a bird of sunny lands, leaving the orange groves when that mysterious voice says to all bird life, "Go North." I have not been able to discover a nest, even though I watched the parent birds on many occasions. So small a nest is easily hidden in the vast maze of forest foliage. A very common bird in the pine forests is the Chickadee, about the size of a Coal Tit, with an assortment of black and white markings. With the movements of a true Tit, and the call something similar, they advance in flocks through the spreading pine branches, feeding on spiders, black ants, and other like insects. The flock keep together by an incessant uttering of the call "Chick-a-dee, Chick-a-dee." No doubt the pine cones come in for a deal of attention, as a favourite attitude of this Tit is the underside of a cone hanging on upside down.

In the Courts.

Shirebrook Youths' Revolting Cruelty.

Expressing their determination to protect dumb animals, the magistrates at the Chesterfield County Police Court on Dec. 24th, meted out sharp punishment to four Shirebrook youths who were convicted of shocking cruelty to a wild bird. Prisoners were Thomas Gullett, Henry French, Enoch Townsend, and John Shelton, and they were charged at the instance of Inspector R. Fryer, of the R.S.P.C.A., with causing unnecessary suffering to a wild bird (Fieldfare) whilst in captivity at Shirebrook, on Nov. 29th.

Herbert Blackwell, a signalman in the employ of the Midland Railway Co., said he saw the defendants set a net. They caught several birds, but they liberated them with the exception of one. Striking at least half-a-dozen matches, they singed the bird, which he saw struggling in the hands of one of the defendants. After a while they threw the bird on to the railway line, and witness fetched it. One of its legs together with a part of its body had been pulled out, and its tail and many feathers were missing.—P.s. Cross said when he examined the bird on Nov. 30th, both its eyes were missing. There were unmistakable signs of it having been singed. He visited the spot where the cruelty had taken place, and within a range of ten yards the snow-bound ground was sprinkled with blood-stains. Later he saw the defendants, who threw the blame on each other.

"It is about the most brutal case that has come into this court for a long time," remarked the Chairman. "Do you know that you boys are each liable to three months' hard labour for this despicable business?"—The Bench having sentenced Gullet and French to one month's imprisonment, and fined Townsend and Shelton £1 each because they were under the age of 16, the Chairman, with considerable indignation, exclaimed to the police: "Take them away! It is the most disgraceful thing I have ever known."—"Derbysbire Times."

AN APPRECIATION OF A LOVER OF BELGIAN CANARIES.

Capt. A. J. PHILP (Edinburgh).

It is with profound regret that I have to chronicle the death of my esteemed friend Capt. Philp, who passed peacefully away to that bourn from whence there is no returning, on December 24th, aged 66, writes Mr. James F. Dewar (Edinburgh). Little did I think when I was getting his instructions the morning before (which was his birtbday) as to what birds to enter for him for the Scottish National show, that within a few hours he would have breatbed his last. "Be sure and make me a member, and mind, I want to show at the Palace," were his last words to me—a fancier to the last, proving that the keen spirit of the fancier was still uppermost. He might fairly claim to be our oldest exhibitor, as he showed some of his birds while a lad at the old Zoological Gardens, which ceased to exist in 1863. He was at all times willing to assist in organising exhibitions, and was secretary of the Edinburgh Kennel Club show, also of the Scottish Metropolitan C.B.S., for some years; for many years he was commander in the Clan Line Steamship Company, and sailed to many parts of the Globe. The deceased will be long remembered as one of our greatest Belgian enthusiasts. Well, do I remember the day five years ago, when be showed at Ghent, of which society he was a member and a generous patron. He received the prix d'honour for his yellow hen, and what pride he felt when he knew he had beaten the best tbat Belgium could bring against him! To come nearer home, his wins at the Crystal Palace in 1908 will not be easily eclipsed. With his six exhibits he won 3 firsts, 4 thirds, and numerous specials; while last year, with bis five birds he won 2 firsts, 1 second, and 2 thirds and specials. At the late Midlothian Derby his young yellow cock bird was awarded silver cup for the best in show. Many fanciers who saw our friend then will remember how feeble he looked. But tbe excitement of winning seemed to put new life into him, but only for a little while, as he had to go home in a cab, alas! never to be out again. His loss to the Belgian Canary Fancy at the present time will be severely felt by all who have what used to be called "The King of the Fancy," at heart, as the fanciers are gradually dwindling away, and we do not seem to have the same enthusiasm now as we used to have for the "hunchback" Canary. When sending bis donation to the secretary of the United Kingdom Belgian Canary Society, he pleaded to be released from the presidentship as he felt with his failing health be was unable to do the office justice, and hoped a stronger and more energetic man might be installed in his place. His loss will also be keenly felt by many of the fanciers of Belgium, where he was widely known and universally respected, as many of his stock birds were personally selected from the best breeders of that country. While his loss to tbe Fancy is great, what must it be for his bereaved widow, who has nursed him through many weary months of sickness, all the while cognisant that there could be only one end to his malady! I am sure your readers will join with me in offering to her and to his two sons and daughter our heartfelt sympatby, as tbey are deprived of a kindhearted and devoted husband, and a loving and indulgent parent, and never happier than at bis own fireside. Tbose who knew bim best loved bim best. May be rest in peace until the day break and tbe shadows flee away.

DEWSBURY & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Christmastide amongst the members was celebrated in a most fraternal manner at the Savile Hotel, Savile Town, headquarters, on Dec. 26, when one of the best shows ever held in Dewsbury was held. About 125 birds were put down, both Border and Yorkshire. Mr. L. Radley (Scunthorpe) judged. He said he was surprised to see so many birds, and the quality was also good. Mr. G. Hall won special for best bird in show, a few fanciers running very near for specials to be given at our annual affair. CL., ETC., YELL. CK.: 1, c, G. Hall; 2, Show; 3, Senior; vhc, Hall; hc, Clegg. FALKLAND.

Falkland O.S. fifty-first annual show, held Jan. 3rd. Cage birds were in the Town Hall. The staging was perfect, and the birds were well looked after by a hard-working committee, namely, Messrs. Lister, Angus, and Lawson. No doubt the great success this year is due to the tact and energy of these fanciers. Mr. W. Anderson, the capable and energetic secretary. Where are all the Fife champions gone? We have seen some good birds at Falkland, and expected a good turn-out. Norwich were fairly well represented, however, some former winners again finding their places. The room at night was packed. Mr. G. Arnott judged the cage birds, and his awards, as usual, gave general satisfaction.

PAISLEY.

A Splendid Show.

Paisley held their 57th annual show on January 2nd and 3rd, and considering the date fell on Monday and Tuesday the entry was good, reaching 170 exhibits, an advance on last year's. Scotch Fancies, as usual, were well represented, many well-known winners being forward. Competition was keen. The quality was ahead of anything seen here for years. Several tempting offers were refused at the show for various specimens. All the Classes were good. The judges were: Messrs. Dalgleish, Thornton, Carlaw, Hannay, Ferguson and Kennedy. Norwich were a good collection, some sweet ones being staged, notably the clear Buff hen shown by Mr. McFarlane, a good all-round exhibit. These classes were judged by Mr. C. Campbell, and his awards were well received. Mr. D. F. Webster judged the Yorkshires, and after carefully weighing up the points, found the winner to suit the majority of the exhibitors. Borders were a sweet lot, many East Coast exhibitors having teams forward. Here the veteran Mr. Gilchrist secured the coveted Border Fancy Canary Club medal; but I think this gentleman has already secured his alloted number. The winner was a sweet wing ticked buff hen, staged to perfection, and well merited her award. These varieties passed under the eye of a well-known breeder, Mr. Mossie, and his awards were well received. The Mule and British birds all over were a grand collection, and the awards were well distributed; some of the classes contained the cream of the Fancy, which were hard to separate; many well-known winners were on view, again doing battle. Mr. J. W. Bruce judged, and his awards left little to be desired.

The cage birds were comfortably staged at the end of the hall, and were under the care of an energetic committee, who were headed by an ideal secretary in Mr. A. M. Baird, who had everything in apple-pie order. The show was visited by a large number of fanciers, and we hope to hear of its proving a financial success. The executive are to be congratulated on the splendid success which attended their efforts. The Drill Hall, in which the show was held, is admirably suited for an exhibition. The light, which was from the top, was excellent, and the birds were as comfortable as they could possibly be. The weather was bright, but the air outside was sharp.

Mr. Baird, who has had charge of the secretarial duties in the cage bird section for many years was again at his post, and had the business well arranged. He was supported by a hard-working committee, and everything passed off without a hitch. The members know when they have the right men, and they keep them in office. We had hearty greetings with sincere friends of the Scotch Fancy Canary, and our weekly publication; both are as popular as ever in Paisley. The public favoured the show with their presence, and from remarks overheard it was appreciated. Bird shows have only to be better known to draw crowds.

A Great New Year Show at Edinburgh.

The Scottish National C.B.S. New Year show, held December 31st and Jan 2nd, in the Corn Exchange, Grassmarket, Edinburgh, proved a triumphant success, there being a wonderful display of upwards of 1,800 birds, a record attendance (conclusively proved by the gate receipts, which totalled £62, beating by over £3 the previous best), a fine sale list of over £80, and, best of all, a general feeling at the close that this had been one of the happiest and most pleasant re unions of fanciers ever experienced across the Border.

The genial secretary, Mr. A. W. Watson, is to be complimented upon this magnificent result, the smooth running of the show and the absence of any hitch in the working arrangements evidencing the care and forethought he had brought to bear upon his task of organising this gigantic exhibition. All honour, then, to Mr. Watson. He was very ably seconded by the show manager, Mr. R. Craig, whose methods in the show room it would be difficult to excel. Quiet and unassuming, with a thorough grasp of the intricacies of staging, packing, and the supervision of the inside details, so to speak, Mr. Craig is recognised as the right man for his difficult post, and he has made for himself a host of friends by his constant and successful endeavour to benefit the many hundreds of fanciers who patronise the great Edinburgh show.

In Mr. J. Winter, the president, "Scotland's Premier Society," has another splendid official, one of the hardest workers, tactful to a degree, and popular with everybody. His experience in the past as secretary of the society stands him in good stead, and enables him to lend a vast amount of aid to his colleagues. And Mr. Winter does not spare himself. Mr. S. Buglass, the vice-president, is another estimable fancier, and the committee of management, Messrs. T. Todd, S. Buglass, W. F. Arrighi, D. Kinlayside, J. Bowie, W. R. Finnie, W. Carson, J. Hutchison, R. S. Spence, J. Gourlay, W. B. Smart, A. Rodger, D. Morris, C. Sykes, A. Hoyle, S. May, J. Easter, R. T. Jack, J. Mackay, J. Allan, J. Baxter and C. Cooper; with the auditors, Messrs. P. Green and C. M. Brotherston, are a splendidly efficient body of experienced fanciers and exhibitors themselves, and bent on running their society's show on the best possible lines. They find a rare helper in that keen old bird-lover, Mr. D. Kinlayside, of whom it can safely be said that he knows all that is worth knowing about the erection of staging. The fine manner in which the birds were ranged around the hall was a tribute to his skill. Long may he flourish!

On looking round that portion of the staging set apart for the "Chubby Ones," our first impression was one of disappointment, as it was apparent that they were not forward in their usual large numbers, but on closer inspection that impression was changed to one of satisfaction, when we noted the high order of excellence ruling throughout this section, and the 350 odd exhibits certainly proved a centre of general attraction. The judges were Mr. J. Holmes (Edinburgh) and Mr. J. Hampton (Brechin), and although they were perhaps not quite happy in one or two of their awards, they remain to be congratulated on the manner they got through their stiff tasks, which were completed in good time. The best Norwich in the show turned up in the winning unflighted yellow cock staged by that well-known fancier, Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, and right well was that honour deserved, as the bird is indeed a credit to its genial owner. Messrs. Mitchell (Brechin), Grewar (Forfar), Gardiner (Newton Grange), Cameron (Kelso), and Craig (Edinburgh), were the principal winners on the Scottish side, while Messrs. Howe (Wellingboro'), Dent (Preston), Wake (Middlesbrough) and Jeremy (Swansea), along with Mr. Hirst, were among the successful ones from the other side of the border. The Norwich Greens came up poorly in numbers, but the quality was extra good. That genial fancier, Mr. Deacon (Liverpool) had a field day, netting three 1sts out of four, the other one being captured by Mr. Barker.

The entry in Scotch Fancies was rather disheartening to the committee, who work hard to make this section a success, and from an outsider's point of view we think the breeders of this variety (and they are many in Edinburgh) are standing in their own light. How can they expect classes put on year after year, which are neither filled nor yet pay? Another point: When looking over schedules we notice that few of them even give a special, and that half of the specials allocated to this section are given by breeders of other varieties. Let us hope in the year just begun, all may be found working for the advancement of this variety, which is far from being as popular as it used to be a few years ago. To our mind, the reason is not hard to find—the want of real enthusiasm amongst the breeders. Let them start a club on the same lines as the Border Fancy Club, and foster their hobby thereby. The judges, Messrs. Kean and Fulton, handled the birds before them in a masterly style, and left no room for grumbling. We must compliment them on having the courage of their convictions by placing all suspicious birds on the top shelf. Let other judges follow on the same lines and we will have fewer trying such tricks as trimming. The cup and special winner, a rare good buff cock, was shown by Mr. Wm. Allan, and it proved a popular win. Other noted exhibitors who had some excellent birds there were Messrs. Munro, Pringle, Hope, McMillan, Johnstone, Ramsay, McAdam, Crosbie, King, etc. Although the entry was not a large one, the quality was all there. The selling classes were well filled, and some cheap ones were picked up, and found a ready sale.

The Belgian used to be known as the King of the Fancy, but now one has to travel a long distance to find anything like the birds shown some fifteen years ago. Then we have something really approaching the title. Now most of the birds are more or less turned in wing and tail; and there are nothing like so many exhibits. However, we must congratulate the breeders who are real enthusiasts, and with the advent of better weather in springtime we may yet see this graceful bird as plentiful and popular as ever. We noticed a few well known exhibitors taking more than a passing glance at them, but missed the well known face of the late Captain Philp—in him the birds had a warm admirer, and Scotland is indeed much poorer by his demise. The judge here was Mr. Kean, and he handled them carefully. Some good ones were shown by Messrs. Baker, Greig, Fairley, Yule, Walmsley, Berwick, Nobb, etc. A few birds were shown in a rather dirty condition, which placed them at a disadvantage.

We come now to the Wee Gems, and they were here and no mistake! There can be no doubt they are quite as popular as ever. In yellow cocks the medal winner was found in a bird of superior merit, shown by Mr. J. Young (Chirnside). In yellow hens Mr. J. Patterson's well known hen headed the class, and was also awarded special for best clear. Messrs. H. Bennet, G. Bennet, McKenzie, Hamilton, Young, A. and W. Thompson, J. Johnstone, W. S. Wilson, Robertson, Campbell, Blackie, also showed some grand birds. In even marked buffs, a rare good one was shown by Master A. Carmichael, which we have on the best authority was bred by him, and we heartily congratulate him on his success; he deservedly won. Buff hens found the Bennet cup winner, shown by Mr. G. Brown, Leith; he has fine style and carriage. Coming to the yellow greens, the winning cock, shown by Mr. W. S. Wilson, was a typical bird, but in our opinion too light undercoath. A motion was to be brought forward at the meeting of the B.F.C.C. to settle this point, and we hope to see the result published in our columns shortly. Yellow green hens found Mr. J. Johnstone's Newcastle winner to the front, and she is undoubtedly the breeder's ideal in thigh pencilling, and if the B.F.C.C. issues a list of points, I hope she will be the model of our standard.

To name all the other winners, and the breeders we met, would fill a column, and to one and all we wish luck in the year 1911. Mr. T. Arnott (Hawick), and Mr. Joseph Thomson, handled these classes, and taken all over their awards were deservedly well received, as we know it is no sinecure to handle the quality shown here, so little divides the lot. Mr. J. Patterson staged a rare team, and had the most points. The champion yellow hen of the season was greatly admired.

The Hybrid section was a good one, and provided the winner of the chief prize, the "Dewar" shield for best bird in the hall, an honour which once again fell to the delightful clear yellow Siskin-Canary Mule bred and exhibited by Dr. Galloway, of Aberdeen. It provided a sensation, too, for a sad-to-be Yellowhammer-Cornbunting Hybrid was shown and awarded 3rd prize by the judge. Opinion was divided as to its authenticity, but the majority seemed to think it purely a hen Yellowhammer, an opinion with which we concur.

The British section was marvellous, many of the classes containing from 25 to 50 entries, and the quality was wonderfully good. The Mealy Redpoll (field-moulted) class was a huge success, just fifty birds appearing therein! There was a regrettable incident in the Yellowhammers, the 2nd prize bird, shown by an English fancier, Mr. F. Russell, being protested against for alleged trimming of the head markings; and the protest was upheld and the bird marked "disqualified." We heard that a protest was to be lodged against one of the British Bullfinches, but do not think anything came of this.

The judges were Messrs. J. Hampton and J. Holmes (Norwich and Greens), C. Campbell (Cresses), J. Kean and G. Fulton (Scots), J. Kean (Belgs.), T. Arnott and T. Thomson (Borders), J. Bailey (Cinns., Yorks., Liz.), J. Goodfellow (Mules), J. Pendrigh, J. Goodfellow, and A. Cochrane (British), and J. Pendrigh and A. Cochrane. They had an excellent light in which to get through their duties, and we certainly did not hear much grumbling after the cards had gone up.

The British Section.

Judge, Mr. J. Pendrigh.

GOLDFINCH (21): 1, Anderson, good size and shape, excellent buttons, very rich in the tint and carrying a fair sized clear cut blaze, beautifully tight and polished all over; 2, Tams and Son, runs leader very closely, loses maybe a shade in lightness of feathers, little larger in blaze, fine colour and markings, nice bird; 3, P. H. Harris, widest face in class, nice clean colour, bit paler and rounded underneath, very pale, too, in chestnut of back and breast, beautifully mkd., in tight glossy condition; 4, Nicolson and Son, very pretty bird, shade narrower in blaze, square-cut, brilliant in colour and well polished, finely tanned and mkd., we liked for 3rd place; 5, Brooks, very cobby, neat little fellow, nice coloured blaze, well-cut, fair expanse, in splendid condition; vhc, Hoyle, good stamp of bird, but very far from show form, full of quill feathers in the blaze; hc, Kelly, good all round bird, "brassy" in blaze colour; c, Mason; No. 5, Anderson (same owner as winner), we thought equal to most of those in the prize list, a very stylish, shapely bird, with a really big, well-cut, rich coloured blaze, but a trifle overdone with black. GLEINCH (29): 1, Turner, exceptionally good house-moulted bird, good shape and style, lovely cap, red-hot breast colour, very clean and even, deep blue back, carries a bloom like a peach, wins well; 2, Woods, a decision we could not follow, this bird was almost twice as big as any other in the prize list, very white in the rump, and very light on the back, and we never heard a single fancier who considered it other than of very doubtful nationality, hard lines on the many good birds behind it; 3, Allan, little cloudy in breast colour, but hard to find fault with, good cobby type, very bold, glossy cap, good back and bars, extremely stylish carriage, nice bird; 4, John Brown, we liked immensely, short, thick-set, grand head and neck, in fact about perfect in shape, very deep back colour, lovely fiery breast, well carried to throat and sides, and house-moulted, too, but unfortunately inclined to be a trifle slack in feather to-day, which no doubt pegged him back; 5, Watt, very nice all-round bird, good colour, grandly polished; vhc, F. Jones, another fine bird for shape, colour, and condition; hc, Arnot; c, Nichol; Nos. 8 (T. Nicholson) and 25 (M'Millan) were mkd. "w.c." as being foreigners, and we thought No. 28 might have joined them. LINNET (17): 1, M'Quiston, wonderfully big, massive bird, good head and chest, nice whites, exceptionally sound and rich in colour, nice bloom, but a bit plain (we understand is not this owner's noted winner); 2, Brown, grandly pencilled bird, very big and cobby, sound, nutty colour all over, in lovely condition, seemed to us to press winner very hard; 3, hc, Marley, leader "Young Brownie," a size smaller than 1st and 2nd, but equal in richness of colour, sound as a bell all over, and carrying any amount of work, well worthy of its place; 4, Hodge, very large, lovely coloured bird, in fine form, just beaten in pencilling; 5, Baird, beautifully worked, but a trifle short of weight, very stylish and rich in colour; vhc, M'Gillivray Bros., nice big Linnet, good shape and markings; c, Webster. LINNET (field-moulted) (29): a great class: 1, Bald, clear wiu, grand size, very thick-set, splendid head and chest, nice sound col, very profusely pencilled, steady as a rock, real good one; 2, c, Allan, two big ones, leader wonderfully rich and sound in colour, steady, nicely polished, grandly marked all over, claimed at 20s., just beaten in substance; 3, Leach and Leckie, very showy and steady, full of quality, good size and shape, taking bird, beaten in pencilling; 4, Johnstou, fine tone of colour, wee bit smaller and plainer, very shapely and steady; 5, Watson, nice bloom on him, very good size and shape, well marked; vhc, H. Wilson, good all-round bird, nice shape, splendid sharp lacing; hc, F. Jones, jun., likewise a pretty all-round bird. Many exceedingly good ones stood cardless (the competition was very hot); we liked No. 11, Gay; No. 18, Nicholas; No. 7, Goode; No. 23, Bancroft; and No. 16, Hurst (the latter presumably the Gateshead winner). BRAMBLE (11): 1, Bancroft, splendid size, shape, and style, beautifully rich and dense in its colour, very clean in markings, grandly spangled, good one, but hotly chased home by 2, Hoyle, warmer tone of brown, carried better down breast and flanks, about equal in spangling and clearness of markings, possibly loses a trifle in shape and style, but not much in it; 3, Coffey, grand bold bird, rare good colour and markings, shade duller in colour yet; 4, Mason, very decent bird at all points, good quality; 5, Hoyle, also a smart exhibit; vhc, Selkirk; hc, Brown; c, Finnie. CHAFFINCH (18): 1, Hurst, gem for richness of colour and bloom, shines like satin, fine, big, stylish bird, well-known winner; 2, Reid, the Scottish champion, shorter than leader, but more thick-set and shapely, clearer and better contrasted in colours, magnificent bird, loses in polish; 3, Milne, good, big, fine chested bird, nice colour and markings, only catalogued at 7s. 6d., looked a little rough when we took our notes; 4, Longden, nice bird, good size, shapely, and stylish; 5, Hoyle, in good form, bonny bird for colour and markings; vhc, Hally; hc, Henderson; c, Mason. We thought that the above two classes were not, on the whole, up to the usual standard seen at this fixture. GREENFINCH (14): 1, Reid, real clinker, great size, very bold head and chest, feathered like glass, graud carriage, fed a lovely even tone of colour, plenty of gold in wiugs and tail, will be hard to beat, wins easily here; 2, M'Lean and Nichol, very big, grand bodied bird, but a shade fine on head, marvellous quality of feather, very deep, sound colour, beautiful Greenie; 3, Logan, again lovely colour and quality, very stylish and neat, bonny bird, same failing in head as 2nd; 4, Messer, very cobby and thick-set, teems with quality and colour, nice size; 5, Russell, good big bird, beautiful tone of colour, very even and rich, splendid flights, excellent condition, unfortunately has a claw missing; vhc, Craig, well built, fine colour and quality; hc Fraser; c, Turner. GREENIE, NON-FED (22): 1, J. M. Walsh, truly a splendid jonque, great size and substance, combined with feather of the silkiest quality and a very rich, bright colour, beautiful bird; 2, R. J. Howe, another magnificent bird, very massive, shade better in head than leader, but well "dusted" for colour, teems with quality, but does not show to best advantage, little sluggish in movement; 3, Hurst, grand stamp of Greenie, splendidly built, lovely quality feather, good wings and tail, rich, sound, even colour, loses a shade in size; 4, M'Millan; 5, Sharp, two cobby, finely made birds, of grand colour and quality; vhc, Colbron, the right stamp, but gone in neck feather and frilled in the flights; hc, Marley, very bold bird, grand colour, could have gone up one, though; c, Bald, we liked better still, a fine cobby bird, beautiful rich grass-green colour, with a bit more weight would have made the best of them gallop. SISKIN (15): 1, 5, Hoyle, good, big, shapely bird, very clear and rich in colour, good wings and cap, well laced flanks, has no bib; 2, Walsh, very close up, faint bib, lovely colour and markings, cobby, stylish little fellow; 3, M'Lean and Nichol, fair bib, very chubby, shapely, and neat, excellent colour and markings, a "tub," we think, would have improved his chances; 4, Cranna, we think this likewise needed a bath, trifle smaller, good shape and type, finely marked, small bib; vhc, Duncan, good stamp of bird; hc, Longden; c, Mitchelson.

Judge, Mr. J. Goodfellow.

SISKIN, NON-FED (11): a remarkable lot 1, M'Quiston, no bib, nice size and shape, fine cap and eye streaks, grand wings, very good level col., well laced on flanks, must have been hotly pressed by; 2, M'Dougall, regular little cart horse, wonderfully thick-set, grand wide head, splendid bib, well mkd. everywhere, a trifle smoky in col., and with a stiff back claw, which, maybe, kept at out of first place; 3, 4, Mason, two splendid Siskins, both nice bibs, good col. and markings, and soon claimed at 21s. each; 5, Muir and Hannan, lovely cobby type, fine col., well mkd.; vhc, McGregor and Boyd, extra big and well built, nice col., well mkd. all over; hc, Stewart; c, Watt. CARLISLE.

Carlisle and Dist. C.B.S. held their 35th annual exhibition in the Mart Hall, Botchergate, January 2nd. The room is a very good one for an exhibition of this kind, being very well lighted and free from draughts. Although there was a slight decrease in the number of entries as compared with last year (which was, by the way, a record), caused principally through a falling off in the British section, the society may again be congratulated on having had another good and successful show, both as regards number of birds and the attendance of visitors. The quality of the exhibits was, as is usual at Carlisle, good in every section, most of the leading Northern exhibitors being represented with strong teams, this causing keen competition in every class. The B.F.C.C. novice medal was won by Mr. W. H. Wright's old even marked yell., a very popular win, Mr. Ramsden's medal for hottest fed bird being won by Mr. F. F. Lawson, with a real hot marked yell. Nor. cock. As regards the management of a show, it is impossible to beat Carlisle in this respect, as the members are one and all genuine fanciers, whose sole aim is the safety and comfort of the exhibits and exhibitors. In Mr. Wright the society may congratulate themselves upon having just the right man for secretary, he filling the position in the ablest possible manner. The show was conducted from start to finish in such a way that his high reputation as show manager was established beyond question. He is always ready and alert, courteous and obliging, and has everything completely at his fingers tips. This year he was very ably assisted by his little son, Master Stanley Wright, who was as eager as his father to do what he could to make the show a success, and right well did he perform his many duties; he is a regular chip of the old block. The chairman, Mr. Johnstone, the vice chairman, Mr. P. Reay, and the committee, Messrs. J. Atkinson, J. J. Robson, Cranston, Carrick, Dawson, Dockerby, Fraser, Gill, Hutchinson, Harrison, Herring, Johnston, Lawson, McFarlane, Nixon, J. H., and Nixon, J., also worked hard and rendered valuable service. The judges were: Messrs. Patterson (Chirnside), Maddison and Hopkins (Bolton), and their awards were favourably received.

Border Fancies were a magnificent lot. The secretary (Mr. W. H. Wright) is himself a keen Border Fancy enthusiast, and we compliment him on winning the novice medal. Mr. Cubby, another keen one on the "Wee Gems," won the open medal with undoubtedly one of the finest self cinnamon yellow cocks we have ever seen. We met here a host of admirers, and judging from the close attention paid to the exhibits and the awards, the Border Fancy interest is safe for some time to come in Carlisle. To go back as far as one can read, Carlisle has always had a warm corner for the jaunty little chap. Some real good ones were staged. The entry all over was good, and if anything better in the Clears and Marks; but they were down in Greens. The Marks were something any society might be proud of. The uneven classes contained birds hard to separate. Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside) judged this section, and his awards were well received.

SOUTHALL.

One of the best shows ever held by the Southall Fanciers' Society was that which took place in the St. John's Schoolrooms, on January 4th. The entry in Canaries was only moderate, but in the British it was splendid, and the competition right through was very keen indeed. Mr. G. Jeffrey had charge of the section, and to his energy, courtesy and tact much of the success achieved was due; he received most valuable assistance from Mr. H. J. Hireson. The birds were very nicely staged, and their needs carefully attended to by the committee, which was composed of the following most excellent fanciers: Messrs. P. Evans (chair), J. Timberlake, J. Brant, H. W. and A. Allwork, A. Smith, T. Hocken, F. J. Brooks, W. A. and G. A. Neale, C. Evans, S. Hatt, W. H. Phipps, and J. R. Morgan, with Mr. A. E. Argyle as general secretary. Mr. J. Robson judged, and his awards were generally approved.

HEXHAM.

Annual show, held Jan. 1st, Corn Exchange. Four classes were provided for cage birds, this section being neatly arranged by itself. Entries came up fairly well, and the quality of the exhibits was very good, some really fine specimens being staged, especially in the Mule and Hybrid class. The genial secretary, Mr. P. Gillespy, had everything well in hand, and under his care the exhibits received every attention. Our section proved a great source of attraction to the many visitors present, and no doubt with an extended classification and an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS our section would prove even more popular. Mr. R. Bates (Hexham) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

THURSO.

22nd annual show held 7th Dec., Town Hall, an ideal hall for such an exhibition. The weather was mild and bright. Everything looked in apple-pie order. Entries in the cage bird section were, if anything, ahead of those of previous years, both as regards numbers and quality. Scotch Fancies were a very nice lot, some grand birds being amongst them. Norwich were also strong, some very fine specimens being included. Crests and Crest-breds were also good. Borders were an outstanding class, of fine type and quality; we have rarely come across a better lot all over. Some good Yorkshires were amongst the winners. Mules and British birds were also good classes. We cannot speak too highly of the management. All seemed to work as with one accord, from the president downwards. The secretary, Mr. Sutherland, had everything well in order. A more genuine body of fanciers it would be hard to find. The exhibitors are showing for the love of the Fancy and honour. We would like a few more shows further south held in the same spirit. The judge was Mr. Thos. Kean (Edinburgh), whose awards seemed to give entire satisfaction.
